Wm. B. Smith a Relative of the Galick's, Dies at Los Angeles. C. H. Weed Tells of Ben King's Orange Crop.

The Review is in receipt of a communication from W. A. McHenry, telling of the Iowa Day Picnic held February 22, at East Lake Park, California, which we print below. Mr. and Mrs. McHenry and Miss McHenry are having a most delightful winter in the land of warmth, sunshine and flowers. "Ford Place", their home in Pasadena, is an ideal California home and is the scene of many pleasant gatherings. Here is what Mr. McHenry says:

Pasadena, Cal., Feb. 22d, 1910. Dear Editor Review: This has been Iowa day at East Lake Park and if Geo. W. could have seen the Iowa people congregated there he would have been amazed. Crawford county showed up with their usual number. I herewith send you a list of those present. It is safe to say that there were 10,000 Iowans there. I have to report the death of Wm. B. Smith of Los Angeles formerly of Denison, a relative of the Galicks. All of our friends seem to be enjoying balmy California where the thermometer has not been below 26 above this winter and usually about 40 above.

C. H. Weed in writing to the Charter Oak Times tells something about Mr. Ben King, formerly of Hays township, who now lives at Covina, Cal. He says Mr. King has a 40-acre grove of oranges as fine as ever grew. He has been there eleven years and has made a great success. He says it is no more work to attend to a 40-acre orange grove than it is to work that much corn, except perhaps the picking and fumigating, which is done by Japs. Said he never trimmed his trees—just kept out the deadwood. Mr. King said his 40-acres of oranges nets him $22,000 a year, and it is worth another thousand just to see the oranges growing. The trees are set about 15 feet apart in rows 25 feet apart. A shovel plow is used and he goes right down the middle of the rows and makes a furrow, and lets the water into these rows. This is done once a month during the season.

BURIED IN BEAUTIFUL SPOT

Grave of William Penn Situated in One of England's Most Charming Localities.

By deep lanes which are jeweled with violets in spring, through rich glades of beechwood, pilgrims come every year to a quaint, high-roofed, green-robed meeting house called Jordans. In the rough little burial ground behind it lies William Penn, the most famous of all "the people called Quakers," the founder of the state of Pennsylvania and the author of a book which has not yet come into its own. All this country is rich in memories of the great work of English literature. "Once to these silent woods young Milton came. The "greatest man since Milton," according to sound Whig doctrine, Edmund Burke, chose to live hard by in that house which he "hung from top to bottom with pictures" and whose splendor Johnson was content "not to envy, but admire."

Americans, the most zealous pilgrims of the modern world, are naturally foremost in their devotion to the founder of one of their greatest states, says the London Telegraph. The spirit of William Penn, powerful in Benjamin Franklin, counted for much in shaping the destinies of the young American republic. It would not be difficult to trace its influence in some of the statesmen who guided the United States through the dangers of the next century. The reverence of America is natural, and it may well explain the project of which we hear, to remove Penn's ashes to an American shrine. But an explanation is not a justification. It is neither vulgar jealousy nor unreasoning sentiment which demands that the grave at Jordans should be left undisturbed.

No place in America could have the same fitness as the humble burial ground at Jordans, with its memories of the days when the followers of George Fox, persecuted and insulted by the powers of the day, were fighting their battle for freedom and the dignity of man. In England the fight was won, and to England belongs the dust of the victors. In any other country than the land of his birth and his death, of his work and of his sufferings, is to claim the shrine of Penn, not America alone, but all the civilized world might well appeal. To him as much as to its founder, George Fox, the Society of Friends owes its power, and the strenuous philanthropy of the Friends has left its mark all over the world. The poor in every country, the savage, the criminal, and the lunatic, owe much to the spirit of William Penn.

The Gift of Memory.

A writer in an exchange speaks in warm admiration of the power possessed by certain people of remembering faces and again recognizing persons they have met in the most casual way. He regards it as a great gift and one much to be desired. It is a gift, but it is by no means rare; in fact, a very common possession. What is far more rare, and not less to be desired, is the ability to associate the name of the person with his face. Innumerable are the men and women who remember faces well—too well, alas—who find it a trial of their lives that the names belonging to the persons identified by their eye vanish from their memory utterly at the critical moment.

It is indeed a desirable thing to be able to recognize instantly the people one has met, but only when this ability is accompanied with a fairly trustworthy memory for names. Otherwise it may be a questionable gift and even an affliction. For you may offer acceptable excuses for not recognizing acquaintances at sight, but when you have friends of long standing whom you encounter almost daily and then forget their names—for that there is no apology that will not be received coldly and with suspicion.

Dogs of the British Upper Ten.

A hundred thousand dollars is the value of some thousand dogs owned by the upper ten in Britain, and some of these dogs are worth $5,000 apiece. Pomeranians have made somewhat after the manner of babies of wealth. These maids carry along pasteurized milk, filtered water, cologne atomizers, meat extract for warm beef tea, breasts of chicken and choicest pieces of beef; gold, ivory and silver tooth and hair brushes and combs; lace handkerchiefs, gloves, shoes, alcohol stoves for warming food, jeweled feeding spoons and an assortment of expensive colored ribbons. These little dogs go about in automobiles, sitting or lying in silk-lined boxes upon pillows of softest down, and are covered with quilts of elderdown.

Vast Unknown London.

There is not a single man living who knows all London, who has been through every street, or into every crescent square and terrace. This seems a hard saying, and it is one which visitors from abroad or the colonies find it impossible to believe, but nevertheless it is absolutely and incontrovertibly true. Let any one take a map of London and try to mark in red all the streets which he can honestly say he has visited and he will have to confess that he knows but little of the metropolis of the world and that the red-marked streets are but as nothing compared with those he has had so leave untouched.

25TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

MR. AND MRS. C. W. PAYNE OF WEST SIDE, ARE MARRIED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AND CELEBRATE THE OCCASION.

LETTERS OF CONGRATULATION

The Bride Wore Her Original Wedding Gown of Purple Velvet. A Sumptuous Supper Served and Many Toasts Given.

One of the most pleasant affairs on the season's calendar took place Friday evening, Feb. 18th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Payne at West Side, when a few of their relatives and friends gathered to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and ferns. At 5:45 all the guests assembled in the north parlor. Mrs. E. J. Dannath presided at the piano and to the strains of the "Norwegian Bridal March," Mr. and Mrs. Payne took their places under a canopy of white and green, to repeat the marriage vows they had taken 25 years ago. Rev. J. J. Davies officiating. Master Arthur Payne acted as ring bearer and best man. Miss Leona Firth as bridesmaid. The bride's gown was of purple velvet and although it was twenty-five years old it was exceedingly pretty and looked very much like the gowns of today. She carried a shower bouquet. The groom wore the conventional black.

After the ceremony and hearty congratulations mingled with laughter, the bride and groom led the way to the dining room and a dinner which was the perfection of culinary art, was skillfully served by Miss Bock and Miss Murray. During the serving Mr. Barborca of Denison furnished several delightful musical numbers on the harp. The program was opened by Mr. E. J. Dannath as toastmaster, who presided with great credit to himself and much pleasure to his audience.

The following toasts were given: "On First Acquaintance"—Rev. J. J. Davies. "Old Friends and New"—Miss Dolliver. "Married Life"—Mr. F. Bock. "Reminiscences of Their Friendship"—Mr. F. Gary.

Miscellaneous toasts were given by others and a number of very beautiful musical selections were interspersed with this part of the program—the hearty applause which was given each number showed that all was greatly appreciated. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Jones of Lenison and Miss Margaret Gay Dolliver of Morningside, Sioux City. During the midst of the evening's entertainment, letters and telegrams were received extending hearty congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne have a large circle of friends who unite in wishing them all the happiness life affords.

LIST OF WOMEN AERONAUTS

Many of the Gentler Sex Have Distinguished Themselves by Their Temerity in Ballooning.

Women aeronauts are not only to-day. The first woman of note was Mme. Nadar, who lost her life with her husband by being cast from a balloon at Nieubourg, Hanover. Next we find Mme. Sage crossing the channel in 1785. The party set out with the intention of surprising a friend in the country, and descended very near their objective. Mile. Garnerin, sister of the inventor of the parachute, in five years made 40 ascents. This was from 1815 to 1820. Mme. Blanchard was the star under the empire. She had charge of the aeronautics at the coronation fetes, in consequence of Garnerin having incurred the displeasure of the emperor, the aeronaut having been the creature of misfortune. He ascended at Milan with a balloon carrying an imperial crown. The air currents carried him out of his course, and the next day, in making his descent, he broke the crown on the tomb of Nero. This untoward event cost him the emperor's displeasure, for the coincidence in some quarters was considered significant. Mme. Blanchard during her career achieved some note. At the marriage of the emperor with the archduchess of Austria she cast flowers on the procession from her balloon, and she did the same on the carriage of Louis XVII. on his entry into Paris. She perished in her seventy-seventh ascent, in 1819, through an explosion when aloft. Notwithstanding that husband and wife perished in their balloons, this did not deter other women seeking similar fame. In 1827 Mme. Johnson crossed the Mississippi in a balloon. Then for a time the novelty waned, and has just been revived, its second advent being marked in France by the foundation of a woman's club, under the direction of Mme. Surcouf.

Easy Terms on Irrigated Lands.

With fully paid up perpetual water rights. One TENTH cash, balance one to TWENTY years. These lands are within easy driving distance of Denver, Colorado, a city of over two hundred thousand people. These lands produce from $60 to $600 an acre yearly. They rent readily, and are profitable either as a home or investment. Good representatives wanted. ISAAC CONNER Omaha, Neb.

But Seidom. Prof. Brander Matthews, brilliant essayist and scholar of Columbia, said at a dinner party, apropos of changes in the meaning of words: "At the height of our majority campaign a little boy, looking up from his adventure book, said to his father: 'Father, what's a cormorant?' 'A cormorant,' the father answered, as he turned the huge pages of his newspaper, 'is a corrupt and hoggish politician.' 'But,' the lad objected, 'I thought it was a bird.' 'Oh, yes, to be sure,' the other agreed. 'The word is used in that sense now and then.'"

Sartorial Splendor.

One of the New Jersey representatives in congress, very much addicted to apparel of the variety known as "loud," was on his way to the capitol one day when he encountered Senator Depew.

"If you're going to the capitol," said the senator, "we might as well walk together." "I'm not going there just yet," said the representative. "I must first stop to see my tailor about a new 'overcoat.'"

"The tailor!" exclaimed Mr. Depew, in mock astonishment. "Why, Jim, it has always been my understanding that you were clothed by a costumer!"

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

time Messrs. Sears McHenry, Logsdon and Stilson, Mrs. Rev. Walsh and others took part in the discussion.

At the evening session Mrs. W. B. Evans led the devotional exercises. A marked feature of the convention was the excellent music which was led on the piano by the Misses Brake. Rev. Fitch, by request, gave his always well received address on "That Boy." This is full of amusing things which makes it popular with the people. The talk is a strong appeal to save the boys.

The committee on nomination of officers reported and the recommendations were adopted:

RESOLVED, That this convention gives its hearty and enthusiastic support to this movement.

RESOLVED, That we recommend the organization of the adult bible classes believing that by so doing the Sunday School work can be made more effective.

RESOLVED, That this convention believes that the chief aim of the Sunday School is the salvation of the children and young people, and that teachers should work constantly to this end.

Rev. Koser, Rev. Walsh, Frank McHenry, Committee.

Before the convention adjourned there was a call for funds to carry on the work and the collection amounted to nearly nine dollars. The new officers plan for an active campaign this spring.
