Social Notes of the Week.

Miss Frances Hart is entertaining today at dinner at the Hotel Denison in honor of Miss Allgood, who is visiting Miss Rena Senseney.

Mrs. O. M. Criswell entertained Penelope Tiesoy in her usual hospitable manner. Roses were used in decorating the rooms and Misses Marshall and Hart assisted in serving one of the delicious suppers for which this hostess is famous. The Coffee Club was entertained on a Friday at the home of Mrs. J. B. Romans. The supper which was served in three courses was up to the usual standard of Coffee Club feasts.

Wednesday night was the annual guest night for the F. H. Club. It was celebrated by the members and their guests at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Saul, where an elaborate six o'clock dinner was served followed by an interesting program of music, readings and recitations. The house was beautifully decorated with the national colors and the place cards and favors were appropriate to the season. Miss Grace Allen carried off the prize in the very clever game which was introduced. Mrs. Mira Cavett being a close second. Altogether the affair was one of the pleasantest in the history of the club and the committee in charge are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts.

Miss Marion Seriver entertained the Dix Club and a few friends at a very charming luncheon Wednesday afternoon. The beautiful decorations and splendid menu elicited much favorable comment from the guests who participated in the event.

A beautiful three course supper was served at six and the evening was spent in dancing and games till the early hour. We wish the bride and groom many happy years of married bliss.

A Portrait.

"Evidently this is a wrong tiger, but it is an original animal." Such was the verdict of a discerning Japanese critic, given at a time when the subject of our sketch burst upon the literary firmament. He was born in 1865, educated in the school that he afterward made ridiculous in "Stalky & Co.," and was famous in Indian journalism before he was 20. Ten years ago he filled the whole stage of contemporary letters, but there has been an adjustment of values. In a sense not to be emphasized, he is the "Man Who Was," though his grip is still irresistible. A great critic has called his characters vulgar, though admitting him to be an artist. When he is not politician or theorist or philosopher, he is fitfully a genius. In a crisis his voice can be the nation's, and it is then that it is most impressive. That is why his appeal is usually general and not personal. His biggest effect of laughter or tears is departmental. The fire and the whirlwind are his, and the still, small voice in such rare utterances as the "Recessional" and "Sussex." Mr. Thomas Atkins would go through fire and water for him. That is because his name is Rudyard Kipling.—T. P.'s Weekly, London.

College Notes.

On Friday evening of last week the regular term social was held in the college building. This time it was in honor of the basket ball teams. The students and their friends gathered at an early hour and the evening passed quickly in games and visiting. Some songs illustrated by the stereopticon were enjoyed.
