READ'S STROKE OF BUSINESS

Gifted Literary Man Made Use of Hirsute Adornment to Bring Business to His Paper.

In the Chicago Press club an advertising agent complained of a bad day.

"Ah," he said, "if I only had a proprietor who'd back me up the way Ople Read used to back up the Traveler's men!"

"When Read established his brilliant Arkansas Traveler," the agent went on, "he took an interest in all departments of the paper. One afternoon he lunched with his advertising manager, and on the way back from lunch, the manager, as he pointed to a Little Rock druggist's shop, said:

"There's a man I'd give anything to get an ad. out of!"

Read looked through the window into the shop. A farmer was talking doubtfully to the druggist—a bald farmer, who held a three-dollar bottle of hair restorer in his hand.

"I'll get your ad. for you," said Read to his manager, and he stalked into the place and took off his hat.

"Now, Read has, as all the world of letters knows, a magnificent head of hair. Shaking out its thick, rich masses, he said to the druggist, warmly:

"There, sir, look at that! That is what you've done for me! To think that three months ago I was as bald as an egg!"

"The druggist looked confused, but the farmer said, eagerly:

"What did you take for it, friend?"

"What did I take?" thundered Read, running his fingers through his great mane, proudly. "What did I take? Why, sir, I took six dozen bottles of that incomparable mixture that you now hold in your hand."

"Well, of course, the farmer bought a dozen bottles then and there. As for the druggist, when he found out later who Read was, he said to the Traveler's agent:

"Put me down for a regular half-column display from now on till further notice."

Peculiar New Guinea Feast. Quaint and curious customs still prevail amongst the natives of Papua, New Guinea. One day recently various tribes held a feast day at Port Moresby in honor of the governor. A wonderful array of food was piled up—roast pigs, bananas, yams and other native luxuries, until they made a barricade of it. The ceremony was a civilized version of what used long ago to be a sanguinary affair. Then the tribes used to fight, the victors piling the flesh of the vanquished up in barricades along with the food. On this occasion there was a sham attack and defence of the barricade. The aggressors charged, shouting war cries and brandishing their spears. The defenders pelted them with bananas, and turned the spears aside with reeds. War dances and other things followed, and then the feast. The day did not pass without excitement. The Orokolos offended the Orikivas, who are very warlike. The former took something from the pile that did not belong to them and refused to give it back. They were immediately attacked with anything handy and put to flight.

What Kind of Harness do You Buy? THE BEST OF COURSE.

It never pays to buy cheap goods in anything that gets lots of wear & tear. Are you sure you always get the best, even tho' the best harness you purchased ripped within the first year you used it? And now although the harness is practically new, you are always having it sewed, first in one place, then in another. You still think it's the best. The trouble with this harness is that it wasn't sewed right as you probably found out. We guarantee every harness of our own make and use nothing but No. 1 Star Oak Leather. Call and look over our immense line of harness. We have dozens of different styles and sizes to pick from now.

The Doctor's First Question

"How are your bowels?" This is generally the first question the doctor asks. He knows what a sluggish liver means. He knows what a long list of distressing complaints result from constipation. He knows that headaches, bilious attacks, indigestion, impure blood, and general debility are often promptly relieved by a good liver pill. We wish you would talk with your own doctor about this subject. Ask him at the same time if he approves of Ayer's Pills. Do as he says. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
