Some of Louis Kepford's young friends who were looking for him on Thanksgiving evening were surprised to see his horse and buggy come into town and go to the accustomed hitching post, but no Louie. They telephoned out home where Mrs. Kepford said that he had started a short time before, so a crowd of young people went out to look and found him near the Boyer bridge looking for the rig. The horse had become frightened at a pile of straw in the road and jumped so as to upset the buggy and throw Louie out. Evidently the buggy righted itself at the next turn for both the horse and buggy were uninjured when they reached Arion and Louie fortunately escaped with a few bruises, so he is very thankful that it was no worse. Quite a large number of our young people went to the dance at Dow City Thanksgiving. Quite a large number of gentlemen gave their time Thanksgiving day to shoveling dirt from the north wall of the church. They worked all day and teams took the dirt to Main street, where they leveled up the street. The ladies went to the church and served a most bountiful dinner and supper. The tables looked handsome, decorated with large chrysanthemums by Mrs. Nelson, fine linen tablecloths and pretty china loaned by several ladies and an excellent and abundant dinner and supper served to all. There was a good social time enjoyed by the many who gathered at the church and much good work was accomplished. David Houston, of Montrose, Colo., was visiting at the Ratio Wingrove home Saturday. No one understands what the Monroe doctrine is, but this makes people all the more ready to fight for it. A militant suffragette chalked "Votes for women" on the White house sidewalk, but it is not learned that President Wilson was converted by this means. It must be an unpleasant experience to get shot for a deer, but the victim may be incited to get well by the prospect of popping away at some one else next year.
