CATARRH OF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Peruna Saved Me

Mrs. Powers, whose address is given below her portrait, is an ardent friend of Peruna. She says:

"I am thankful to tell you that my old trouble has never bothered me any since you received my testimonial. Any one wishing to know the facts in my case, if they will write me I will be glad to answer. Your medicine has saved me, and gave me perfect health. I frequently meet friends that knew me when I was in poor health. They ask me what has made such a change in me. I always tell them that it was the nerve remedy, Peruna. I shall praise Peruna as long as I live."

Catarrh of the Internal Organs

Mrs. A. T. Powers, R. R. 7, Box 121, London, Ohio, writes: "I write to thank you for the wonderful good your Peruna has done for me. I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for twenty-two years. Two years ago I began to take Peruna, and I only took about three bottles and today I can say I am a well person."

Catarrh is liable to affect any of the internal organs. This is especially true of the bladder, which is very frequently the seat of catarrh. This is sometimes called cystitis.

Mr. James M. Powell, No. 1629 W. Walnut St., Rosedale, Kansas, writes: "About four years ago I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder, which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain. I began taking Peruna, and it greatly relieved me and in eleven weeks I was completely cured and felt like a new man."

Those who object to liquid medicine can now procure Peruna in Tablet form.

A Change Of Heart

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Jim Edwards was young and frisky and full of Old Nick. He was riding on a suburban train one day on his way to the city when an old gentleman of eminently respectable appearance came into the car and took a seat beside him. Jim was reading in a morning journal an account of a prizefight. The gentleman took from his pocket a copy of the Missionary Intelligencer, opened it and began to peruse it.

"Have you seen an account of the bout between Andy Sheehan and the Philadelphia Kid, sir?" asked Jim in a deferential tone.

"No. I don't read accounts of such inhuman transactions."

"I suppose you wouldn't care to see a fight of that kind. But don't you think if we kill off all blood-spilling affairs it's bad for the military spirit? We must have wars, you know, even if to protect ourselves from a foreign enemy, and if we young fellows should get too soft we'd all have to knuckle under in case of an invasion. For my part I think the way the Kid stood up against Sheehan was admirable. He broke the big man's jaw and let a pint of blood from his nose."

At this the gentleman turned his back squarely on the young man and buried himself in his journal.

Jim, who had been amusing himself with the old man, smiled inwardly, much pleased at the shock he had given him. When they reached the city Jim waited till the passenger to the door was cleared of the outgoing passengers, then arose to go himself. On the seat beside him he espied a pocketbook. It must have belonged to the gentleman who had sat beside him, and Jim hurried after him, but failed to catch him. An examination of the contents of the pocketbook revealed the name of Howard Spingler and his address, besides some $20 in bills. In a pocket by itself was a small photograph of a girl evidently in her teens. Jim fell in love with it on sight.

Instead of sending the find to the address Jim waited till evening, when he thought he might possibly get sight of the original of the photograph, then went to the house, rang the bell and told the butler who answered it that he would like to see Mr. Spingler. He was ushered into the library, where sat the owner of the pocketbook and near by, doing some fancy work, the girl of the photograph. When the old gentleman saw the advocate of prize-fighting he frowned. Jim handed him the book and said:

"After you left the train this morning, sir, I found this where you had been sitting. It contained your name and address, so I am enabled to return it to you."

Mr. Spingler, without unbending, took the pocketbook. He was too much of a gentleman to examine the contents to see that all had been returned, but he was not cordial. He simply thanked Jim and waited for him to withdraw.

"Don't you think, father," said the girl, surprised at her father's want of warmth in acknowledging his obligation, tion, "that inasmuch as the gentleman has taken the trouble to return your pocketbook in person we should ask him to rest before going?"

The father's mind was on Jim's prizefighting proclivities, and he was not to be moved to any courtesy to one of that kind.

"Young man," he said, "I have thanked you for returning my pocketbook. I do not offer you a reward, for you do not look like one who would accept it. Indeed, I was surprised to meet with one having the appearance of a gentleman advocating the barbarity of prizefighting."

Jim colored under the reproof to the roots of his hair. He had had his fun with the old gentleman, and he was now paying the price. The young lady took pity on him.

"Why, papa," she said, "so many persons take an interest in such matters that you can't blame one young man for doing so. After all, I don't think as many persons are killed in the prize ring as at football, and you know you shouted and waved at brother when he knocked down five men and broke the leg of one carrying the ball to goal."

Mr. Spingler looked embarrassed. Jim, bestowing a silent blessing on the young lady, with regained courage pushed on to undo the damage he had done by his facetiousness on the train.

"Ralph Spingler!" he exclaimed. "The great Pennsylvania football player?"

"My son," said the old man proudly. "I've seen him play some of his best games. During his supremacy on the gridiron there was no man who could down him. I congratulate you, sir, on having such a son."

"You've seen him play?" exclaimed the old man, his eyes lighting at the mention of his son's prowess.

"Indeed I have. I witnessed the game in which he fell—accidentally, of course—on Simpson and crushed him. That was a glorious game. Your noble boy carried the ball to goal amid the huzzas of every person present."

"He won the game!" cried Mr. Spingler. Polly, bring a decanter and some glasses. Our friend must drink to your brother's health."

"That is the way Jim Edwards made his wife's acquaintance. It looked squally at first, but it came out all right."

Here Is Good News For Stomach Victims

Some very remarkable results are being obtained by treating stomach, liver and intestinal troubles with pure vegetable oils, which exert a cleansing, soothing and purifying action upon the lower bowels, removing the obstructions of poisonous fecal matter and gases and preventing their absorption by the blood. This done, the food is allowed free passage from the stomach, fermentation ceases and stomach troubles quickly disappear.

George H. Mayr, for twenty years a leading Chicago druggist, cured himself and many of his friends of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles of years' standing by this treatment, and so successful was the remedy he devised that it has since been placed in the hands of druggists all over the country, who have sold thousands of bottles.

Though absolutely harmless, the effect of the medicine is sufficient to convince any one of its remarkable effectiveness, and within 24 hours the sufferer feels like a new person. Mayr's Wonderful Remedy is sold by leading druggists everywhere with the positive understanding that your money will be refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.

The newspapers may not indicate that many new factories are going up, but plenty of money is being spent fitting up the ball grounds and hiring ball players for next summer.

Effective February 1

Reduction No. 3 On Goodyear Tires

Making Total Reductions 45 Per Cent in Two Years To Give Always the Most for the Money

We are glad again—for the third time in two years—to announce a big reduction on Goodyear tires, effective February 1st. Goodyear policy on price is to give the utmost in a tire at the lowest possible profit. Our reductions are made to that end, without ever reducing the quality.

That always means, with our matchless output, more for the money than any other maker can give.

As rubber came down our prices came down. As our output multiplied, reducing factory cost, our prices came down with it. In two years our reductions—including the present—have totaled 45 per cent.

Last year we increased our output 26.6 per cent. A few days ago the embargo on rubber was modified so that supplies seem assured. The market price for rubber seems for a time established. Fabric costs less than last year. So, under our minimum profit policy, we announce this new reduction.

Only Fair Basis

We consider profit margin on a tire the only fair price basis. We keep that margin just as low as our line allows.

While we do that, Goodyear tires will always undersell any tires that compare with them.

The Best We Know

Goodyear Fortified Tires offer the best we know. They are built to give you the lowest cost per mile. They minimize tire trouble in five costly ways employed by no other maker. And they are always the same, regardless of price reductions.

Most tires will always sell higher, because of smaller output. Some tires will always sell lower because of lower standards. But we promise you that none will ever give better than Goodyear value.

This policy has made Goodyear the largest selling tires in the world. It will make them more so as more men find them out.

Ask your Goodyear dealer for our new price on the size you buy.
