THE HAPPIEST BABIES.

Sioux City News: Are the richest kiddies the happiest in the land or are the happiest babies the richest in the land?

...A... POINTER

By JOHN Y. LARNED

In the good old days when there was no cast iron railway rule to prevent a passenger from riding on a locomotive, about to start on a run between two stations, I went forward and obtained leave of the man at the throttle to do the distance—about twelve miles—with him. He was nearly fifty years old, but hale and hearty.

Just before starting a woman about thirty years old came to the engine and stood talking to the engineer earnestly for a few minutes, then turned away. As she did so I could see by the look she gave him that she had a great affection for him, but whether it was that of wife or sister I could not tell.

"She's not my wife," he said. "She's had two husbands and I shouldn't think she'd want another. Her first husband was a bad one, and the second didn't live long."

"There seems to be a story in her case," I remarked. "I'd like to hear it." He made no reply until we were well out in the open country. Then he said: "Somehow I feel like telling you the story this morning. I've kept it long, but now it seems to want to come out. The young woman you refer to was little more than a kid when I was coming on to middle age. She was in love with a youngster named Perkins, a little older than she was, but her father wouldn't let her marry him."

"There was another man who had wanted Sallie from the time she was seventeen years old, but he was then double her age and had no show against the youngsters."

"That man," I interrupted, "is your self."

"He turned toward me with a surprised look and asked, how I knew that. I made no reply, and he continued: 'Sallie was very happy with her second husband for about two years; then something happened. I had always lived near her, and she knew that whenever she needed any one to lean on she could come to me. One night about 11 o'clock there was a rap at my door. I put on some clothes, went down and opened it. There stood Sallie, white as a sheet and trembling all over. I begged her to tell me what was the matter, but instead of doing so she clutched my wrist and led me to the back yard of her home. There was a man lying there, but I couldn't see who he was. I struck a match and saw—Thorp. He was dead.'

"I carried the body to my own yard and put it in an outhouse while I dug a grave; then I buried it six feet underground and put back the sod over it."

CHINESE EDIBLE DOGS.

They Are Fed Mainly Upon Daintily Prepared Vegetable Food.

English vivants have tested the merits of the Chinese edible dog, and they pronounce it very good dog indeed.

The dog is destined from the beginning for the table. Like the edible rat of the same country, it is fed mainly upon vegetable food, which is often delicately prepared and specially devised, in order to give the dog's flesh a peculiar flavor and aroma. The result is something quite different from the flesh of the ordinary dog of the western world.

The genuine Chinese edible dog is known by its bluish black tongue, which is a peculiar mark of its variety. In infancy and early youth the dog's tongue is red, and upon reaching maturity and the edible age it suddenly becomes black, sometimes within two weeks.

Another peculiarity of this dog is its lack of the barking faculty. It is said that the dog can bark, and on occasions does so, but these occasions are rare.

Many experiments, most of them unwilling, were made with the flesh of dogs during the Paris siege. Newfoundland and St. Bernards were preferred, under the mistaken impression that they would prove more eatable than other varieties. They proved to be detestable in all cases.—Every Week.

Avenged

By SARAH BAXTER

There lived in Paris during the last decade of the eighteenth century two friends, Alphonse Dubois and Gaston Damourier. Damourier was six years younger than his friend and a bachelor. Dubois was forty-five and the father of a girl twenty years old.

Damourier, who was passing through middle age, cast longing eyes on Louise Dubois, who was in the prime of youth. He devoted himself to her, and she, flattered by the attentions of an older man, accepted them.

Possibly she might have become his wife had not Cupid stepped in and brought about a passion between her and a young man of twenty-three, Armand La Fevre.

The evil may be dormant in a man for years, then under a strain break out in all his virulence. Damourier gave no sign of the ranking within him. He had not proposed to Louise, though he was about to do so. He had not intimated to her father that he was a suitor for his daughter's hand.

On the appearance of La Fevre he stepped back, and when Louise announced her engagement to her younger lover he offered his impressive congratulations. But he resolved that she should be his wife.

France was then entering upon the throes of revolution. Dubois and Damourier became advocates of reform, though they deprecated the reign of terror.

Robespierre got the upper hand as leader of the Radicals and by his order the guillotine was working full time in the Place de la Revolution. The nobles were hunted down, put through the mockery of a trial before some citizen butcher or baker or sewer cleaner and hustled off to execution. Soon it became only necessary to send a person to death to inform on him as an enemy to France. The names of the accused and the informer were entered in a book for the purpose kept by an official of the revolution.

One morning La Fevre was with his fiancée, Stocker, the terrible mas-

WOMEN VOLUNTEERS.

In stress and trouble the women of a nation are always to be counted upon. In this country few of our women escape the weakening troubles peculiar to their sex.

Dubuque, Iowa.—Five years ago I took four or five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription while in a delicate way and I felt fine during the whole time, even going shopping and doing my washing right up to the last minute.

"I am glad to recommend it to all women in this condition."—Mrs. JULIA BIXAS 143 Walnut St., Dubuque, Iowa.

Oelwein, Iowa.—"Fifteen years ago I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I can truthfully say that it helped me greatly. I have had neighbors and friends who have been cured by it."—Mrs. L. P. WARR, 214 Fourth Ave., South, Oelwein, Iowa.

Middle aged women about to experience that dreaded change of life, should profit by the experience of thousands of noble women who have gone through the same period with little or no pain, misery or discomfort.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret preparation. Its ingredients are printed on the wrapper; it's a temperance medicine, a glyceric extract from roots.

Not only does it build up the entire system and make it strong and vigorous, but it withstands the organic disturbances, but it has a quieting effect upon the feminine organism.

Every woman should be careful that the liver is active and the poisons are not allowed to clog the system—get rid of these poisons by taking a vegetable laxative occasionally—such as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They do not gripe and will not harm the most delicate system.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets clear the complexion.

sacre that was daily perpetrated, Louise, in an agony of fear, was from bling in her lover's arms. The tramp of men was heard without and an officer appeared at the head of a file of soldiers.

"Are you Citizen La Fevre?" asked the officer.

"I am."

"Citizen La Fevre, you are accused of being an enemy of France. Come."

Louise clung to her lover, and the guard was obliged to tear him away from her. With a shriek she fell back in a swoon.

M. Dubois exerted himself at the risk of his own life to save La Fevre. Damourier went to Louise and assured her that he would leave no stone unturned to restore her lover to her. But notwithstanding her father's efforts and Damourier's offers the young man was sent to the guillotine.

A year passed during which Damourier was refused in his sympathies for Louise and was again becoming so attentive to her as to excite comment among her friends when one day Mme. La Fevre called upon her and told her that in examining her dead son's papers she had found one that had been sent to him anonymously, warning him to beware of Damourier. She handed it to Louise to read.

Love in the girl was converted by this information into a fierce revenge. Nevertheless she concealed her feelings. Her first act would be to confirm her suspicion that Damourier had been responsible for the death of her lover. Quietly she began to make inquiries as to how during the reign of terror one would secure the conviction of another as an enemy of France.

The information she received led her to form a plan.

She asked her father for 5,000 francs with which to erect a monument to her lover. The money was given her, and with it, veiled, so as not to be known, she went to the office of the official who kept the records of those who perished as enemies of France and asked for a private interview. When the interview was finished the keeper of the records had her 5,000 francs and she had the key to the room containing the records.

From that time she treated Damourier with great consideration. She reminded him how sympathetic he had been with her in the loss of her lover.

She questioned him continuously as to what means he had taken to save La Fevre. And when encouraged by her gratitude he offered if she would be his wife to do what he could to eradicate the scar she had received she said that no one but an ingrate could refuse.

When Damourier asked Louise to name a day for their marriage she said that she was preparing a monument for her dead love, and as soon as that had been accomplished she would accede to his request.

Louise invited her father, Damourier and a few intimate friends to go to the cemetery where La Fevre's body was buried to witness the setting up of the monument she had prepared. When they arrived at the grave there was no monument.

"Where is it, Louise?" asked her father.

Louise produced a paper and read aloud:

Then Louise fell forward in the arms of her father.

The current, easiest way to delicious fresh fruit flavored preserves is to make your preserving syrup with one-fourth Karo (Crystalline) instead of all sugar. This formula makes a rich, heavy syrup, not too sweet, and retains the natural fruit flavor. Jams and jellies made with Karo (Crystalline) are easy to "pull," and keep free from crystallization.

DOWN WITH THE TIP.

Shelby County Republican: The Iowa law against tipping, which went into effect July 4th, is a good law and should be enforced. The tip practice is undemocratic and un-American; it came from European lands of princes and peasants ever seas, and has no place in a country where every man is the social equal of every other man.

A number of landlords throughout the state prior to the day the law took effect, declared they would pay no attention to it, and expressed the belief that the law would not result in materially reducing the tipping evil.

That sort of landlord is a combination of pirate and highway robber. He is the man who sells to his guest a certain grade of entertainment and service, and then refuses to see that the goods are delivered unless the guest bribes the servant to do his duty. His robbery extends to both guest and servant through his refusal to pay the servant a proper wage, demanding, rather, that the servant get his wage out of the guest by a system of petty blackmail.

The tip system owes its adoption in this country to those snobs who desire to buy for themselves personal consideration and attention above that enjoyed by their fellows, their thought being that a certain amount of purchased deference heightens their personal standing in a community where perhaps they receive no deference except that which they buy.

The passage of the law affords patrons of hotels, sleeping and dining cars and other public service institutions an opportunity to smash the practice in Iowa. Let every patron of such place stand upon his implied contract when he buys service, and upon his refusal as a man and a citizen to be imposed upon. Then let him boycott every institution which does not deliver the grade of entertainment and service due to him who pays the price. That sort of treatment will put the "kibosh" upon any landlord who pretends that the tip system is a necessary evil.

Vice-President Marshall says he is a fatalist. Then, of course, he is resigned to the defeat which next year will be in store for him.

People who are surprised at the mildness of Mr. Bryan's criticisms of the administration should remember that, like John Paul Jones, Bryan has "not yet begun to fight." When he gets ready to tell what he knows, he will tell a thrilling story.

The Racine (Wis.) Journal-News wisely points out that "the steady business of peace" times would be far better in the long run than war orders, and that "it must be remembered, that only the few derive enormous profits from war orders."

The Georgia legislature has adopted a new rule forbidding admission to the floor of members who present themselves in an intoxicated condition. Did anyone ever hear of a republican legislature that had to adopt a rule of this kind?

Secretary Daniels is said to be delaying work on the naval program for the next congress in the hope that he may secure from belligerent operations in Europe some useful suggestions. One such immediately occurs to us: In England there has been a change in the head of the admiralty.

The people of Canada are said to be regretful now that they defeated the reciprocity scheme proposed to them by Mr. Taft. But why? Since then the Underwood tariff has been enacted, giving to Canadian farmers and manufacturers even more concessions than Mr. Taft offered—and without a single concession on the part of Canada. Taft wanted Canada to pay for a limited freedom of access to our markets. Wilson makes us pay for unlimited Canadian access to American purchasers.

It is hoped when our government orders those thirty new submarines, one little detail won't be overlooked, and that is that they shall come up as well as they can dive.
