Variant Voices.

As I wrote my instincts wandered, And my pen seemed hopelessly; Thence a voice from some seclusion Mused, "Just write a line for me."

Night came rolling, strolling 'round me As I rambled listlessly, And a voice from retrospection Mused, "Just speak a word for me."

I was lost 'mid the quiescence, And the thoughts of memory When above me fluttered, uttered Life's serene discrepancy.

I had reached a scene loquacious, Deep amid felicity When Old Future's agitation Mused, "Don't build great things with me!"

Thence old Father Time re-entered, And the chamber seemed to sigh; Stirring visions faded, fluttered, And I muttered sleep's goodbye.
