The advertisement of Richardson Bros. on page two of this section should interest every reader. These agents wrote the insurance policies on the two buildings damaged by fire on Monday of this week and on Tuesday the claims were adjusted and paid to the satisfaction of the policy holders. Testimonials from the four policy holders appear in their advertisement, which show for themselves that they are satisfied with the prompt service rendered by the companies who are represented by Richardson Bros.

Mr. John Schnoor has purchased a novel stretcher which is especially adapted for use in an automobile. It is styled the "First Aid Cot" and is made of a folding iron frame on a canvas top, which can be carried very conveniently in a machine. When in use it is stretched from the back of the front seat to the back seat, resting on adjustable brackets so it will fit any machine. It is a most ingenious affair and being of a light weight the cost is considerable. Mr. Schnoor will keep the stretcher at the furniture store and will be glad to loan it out at any time when occasion arises.

A. E. Bryan, of Arlon, is in Denison today pressing bills announcing the sale of his farm, known as Orchard Park Stock farm, located in Washington township, which will be sold at public auction on Monday, November 6th. Mr. Bryan has decided to devote his entire time to auctioneering and for that reason decided to dispose of his fine farm. The farm consists of 240 acres of gently rolling land and is especially adapted to the raising of stock and grain. It is well improved, having a ten room modern house with all of the necessary barns, hog sheds, granaries, etc. Don't forget the date of this sale, Monday, November 6th, commencing at 1:30 o'clock.

One of the most attractive advertisements published in the Review for many weeks is that of the Boys' shoe department, which appears in this issue. A six column space is devoted to the well known Queen Quality line of shoes. The ad was specially prepared by the manufacturer of the well known brand for the Boys' store to be run in the Review. The shoe department of the Boys' store is managed by Mr. Otto Fiedler, who is recognized to be one of the best shoe men in the state. Under his management this department of the store has increased from month to month until the business equals that of many of the large exclusive shoe stores in western Iowa. Mr. Fiedler is a believer in newspaper publicity and this coupled with high quality shoes has much to do with the success of this department of the Boys' store.

Sanitary Methods and Advertising. The food producer or distributor who does not use sanitary methods would better not advertise. The writer taking a railroad journey the other day, passed a certain building with a large sign showing that a certain make of bread was manufactured there. The building was unpainted, surrounded by litter. As most people would conclude that the interior was similar, this advertising was worse than useless.

The unsanitary food producer or retailer usually realizes that he would not better attract the wide attention that results from advertising. Conversely, the sanitary food producer or food distributor cannot afford not to advertise. It costs a little more to do business in a strictly clean way. But the cost can be made up by attracting public attention and increasing sales.

The thought of dirt in connection with eating is repulsive. The seller of a neatly put up food will find that cleanliness is the best talking point there is. If you can get it into the public mind that you are constantly taking pains to keep food products clean, you will get the enthusiastic support of every housewife with the modern spirit.

The Lightning-Like Lion. The lion is the quickest living creature. A lion that has had experience can dodge the flash of a gun. You see him on a lake, but long before you see him he sees you and has taken a mental inventory of you and your belongings. If you have no gun you may perhaps approach within 100 yards before he laughs at you with that horrid shriek which gives him his name and disappears under the water, but show a gun and he does not stop to laugh—he goes instantly. When in a sportive mood he sometimes waits until he sees you about ready to fire, when at the flash he dives, and you see the shot splatter the water where he has just gone down.—Exchange.

WAR ORDER PROSPERITY.

According to the Iron Age the tonnage of unfilled orders on the books of the United States steel corporation, Dec. 31, 1912, was 7,932,164. We were then operating under a protective tariff law, and the country was normally prosperous. The following year the democrats were engaged in tariff wrecking and the "tariff for less than revenue" law went into effect October 4th. On Dec. 31, 1913, the tonnage of unfilled orders on the books of the U. S. steel had sunk to 4,282,108. By Dec. 31, 1914, it had dwindled to 3,836,643 tons, or not quite half that of Dec. 31, 1912. By Dec. 31, 1915, the industry had picked up again, the tonnage of unfilled orders on the books of the company being $1,806,209 on June 30, 1916, it had risen to 9,640,458 tons.

What has caused this remarkable increase? During the 11 months ended May 1915, iron and steel exports totaled 1,650,370 tons; for the 11 months ended June 30, 1916, exports of iron and steel reached the enormous value of $621,000,000. Metal working machinery alone advanced from $14,000,000 in 1914 to $61,000,000 in 1916; "all other manufactures of iron and steel" advanced from $18,000,000 in 1914 to $61,000,000 in 1916. Under this classification was artfully concealed by the department of commerce the vast quantity of shell steel which we have been supplying to the allies. What man of any common sense needs further argument to convince that our exports has been a war order prosperity?

THIS CAMPAIGN.

Atlantic News-Telegraph: "This paper is not particularly interested in the personal habits of the candidates for governor. If Harding drinks a little more than Meredith does, if Harding plays poker it is not more than Meredith does. The personal habits of the candidates were dragged into this contest by Gardner Cowles, smarting under the defeat for which Harding was fitly and justly held responsible. It is a dirty and contemptible campaign on the part of Meredith's principal supporter."

The thing this paper, in common with thousands of men in this state, protests, is the attempt to make a party of intoxicating liquor. It is a dirty and contemptible campaign on the part of Meredith's principal supporter. The thing this paper, in common with thousands of men in this state, protests, is the attempt to make a party of intoxicating liquor. It is a dirty and contemptible campaign on the part of Meredith's principal supporter.

It protests the dragging in of the church in an effort to bolster up this conspiracy. It protests in its own name and in the name of thousands of others that this campaign is a heresy that has in whatever controversies may arise along temperance lines. It believes the cause of real prohibition—as distinguished from political prohibition—has been done more harm by pretended and hypocritical friends of prohibition than has been accomplished by all the liquor interests of the state in a dozen years.

Harding will be elected governor of his state in November, and before his term is expired he will have crammed every living inch of the state with made against him in this campaign.

Curtiss Tells of Trip South. "He is a part of all he has met," somebody remarked who had listened to Dean C. F. Curtiss tell the students about the agriculture of South America in a public address last week end, the first the dean has made since his recent return from Argentina. It was followed by a reception in his honor, given by the college faculty.

Dean Curtiss, indeed, saw things which are of great interest to us here. He painted a full length portrait of the country, its agriculture, industries, resources and possibilities. Twenty-five years ahead of any other South American country in its livestock, with 15,000,000 acres in rich land of Iowa, which can be grazed the year around, progressive and possessing forest resources yet untouched, was the dean's characterization of Argentina, in which he sees the future of our country. The dean said that "Nothing the United States could do would foster more good will with South America than to establish a line of boats to care for her export trade, which has suffered since the war," he said.

Tractors and hogs are scarce in Argentina, tractors because of the high price of fuel there, gasoline being twice as high as here, and hogs because the Argentinians do not yet know the breakfast joys of ham and bacon. Rolls and coffee constitute a demanded will soon force them to hoarding to supply foreign demand," the dean predicts.

The land where nature works all the time and the natives very little of the time is Brazil, he says, which is the greatest coffee producing country in the world. "It is not a white man's country," he says, although he predicts it will be heard from in the future in the beef line.

"But the more I saw of other countries, the more I thought of Iowa," Dean Curtiss concluded.

Sibley Tribune: The new union of church and state certainly has not made our political discussions broader and clearer.
