Live News About Crawford County Farms and Farmers

Profiteers exist in the labor world as well as elsewhere. Some of these fellows are to be found in every community. They have them in Madison county. Arthur Goshorn, of Winterset, says that he has heard of men who have demanded of farmers who they believe were compelled to pay the price, as high as $3 per day for ordinary farm labor. The price was demanded not because it was a fair price nor because such wages were necessary to the workman, but simply because an opportunity had occurred to sting the farmer. Such men are unpatriotic, they are not willing to do their "bit" in this time of stress, and if they were in business they would be the worst profiteers in the land.

More anti-hog-cholera serum was manufactured last year than in any previous year despite a decrease in the amount of hog cholera, according to reports to the United States department of agriculture. The increased demand for the anti-hog-cholera serum is ascribed to the greater value of hogs, with the consequent greater loss when one dies, and to the fact that hog raisers are becoming more appreciative of the value of using serum manufactured under federal supervision. Department of agriculture officials warn hog raisers against the indiscriminate use of medicines or proprietary preparations, other than serums, as experience has shown that nothing except serum, properly prepared and administered, is effective. Medicines other than serums, according to department officials, are worse than useless because they not only fail to cure or prevent disease but allow the loss of the animals they are advertised to save, thus taking money from the farmer and meat from the nation's supply.

"Bill" Shaw in the Odebolt News: "I spent the noon hour at the stock farm of Arthur Warriner, east of Schaller, last Friday. Busy? Well I guess so. Mr. Warriner was setting the ensilage cutter and getting ready for the filling of his silo. Last season was the first year for this farm to use a silo, and after corn husking Mr. Warriner went to Sioux City and bought 25 yearlings, brought them home and outside of the roughage that they picked out of the stock field, without any hay, they were fed twice a day from the silo. Later on they were sent back to Sioux City and sold, and over $500 more was received for them than they cost, this was after all expenses had been deducted. During the past season two large cement feeding floors have been built on each side of the hog house. These floors can be made into small pens by using panels, which are laid away when not in use."

"I had expected to publish a complete census of the hog inhabitants of the county this week, but owing to the fact that there are seventy school districts yet to hear from, can publish only a partial census. 110 districts in the county report a total of 119,932 pigs. If the delinquent reports come in this week I will publish the full report in our next issue."

The executive board of directors of the Crawford county farm bureau at their regular meeting held in Denison, Saturday, October 5th, passed resolutions in which they suggest paying of following prices for husking corn: Not to exceed 7 cents per bushel for corn husking where an elevator is used and 8 cents where corn is unloaded by hand.

The better cattle movement is rapidly gaining favor in the state of Georgia. Last week C. A. Olesen, a Saco county breeder of Shorthorn cattle, shipped ten head from his herd to the State Agricultural college in Georgia.

Wit has organization in every county planning food production campaign in harmony with the national agricultural program, Iowa is now a 100 per cent state in farm bureaus. On July 1, 1917, there were 29 farm bureaus in Iowa. The remaining 68 counties have been organized as a result of provision for emergency agricultural extension work.

Crawford county farmers are taking advantage of their better corn crop this year to save seed enough for their planting next spring. Many of them are saving enough for two years, and in most instances it is being well cared for. Very little is being hung on the sides of buildings and on windmills, as was the custom a few years ago.

A gentleman living near Deloit last week told me he ran a classified ad in the Review last spring only one week and, as a result, sold a pure bred Hereford bull. This did not surprise me for I know no other newspaper published goes into so many Crawford county homes as the Review, and with such a circulation, it is not strange that our classified ads, as well as sale ads and other display advertisements, bring results. If you are going to have a sale be sure to advertise it in the Review.

THE S. D. CUTOFF HIGHWAY

(This line extends from Sioux City to Denison in western Iowa, through Woodbury, Monona and Crawford counties, diagonally from Sioux City to Denison, southeast a distance of 80 miles, where it strikes the great Lincoln highway.) Once upon "all day breezy, motorizing, content and easy, O'er this panoramic highway—western central Iowa—

Wooded hillside, rolling prairies, verdant land of fairies, shady dell and timbered hills, creeks and rivers, brooks and rills. Peaks and crags, dunes and bluffs, ruffed grouse and turtle doves, Changing scenes with raptured thrill—the inner soul with comfort ill, Alfalfa meadows, lanky green, frosted cornfields, silver sheen, Sunnyc patches, burgundy, golden mantle on elm tree.

Harvest time who nature loves, Much one marvels, why folks ever can, themselves, from home ties sever, frowning wanderlust to follow, not unlike a goose or swallow.

He for distant shores and pleasure, scenes and legendary treasures, When they have them at their door, You may guess and well remember, that Hazy, balmy, gentle zephyrs, sure you'd live forevermore.

Take me seasons—hey winters, boiling, Springtime full of rain and sunshine, sun and more sun in the fall time, Lo! behold, in harvest tide, corn and wheat, in the land of milk and honey, Bring the money.

Deep into the night we bore, this great world to explore, Plunging, lunging in the darkness, far our headlights streamed before, Giggling, tinged in black, firely tail light in the back, First a soft and gentle griping, as the wind in key held strong, "It's the starter," said our chauffeur, with a wish the engine drove her, Then began a merry trill, like a cricket in a short uneasy motion, like the water on the ocean, Rattle pulsed with louder gushes, and our car with mighty gushes, Send us forward, Che-roo—like a croaking, grunting frog.

'Twas in the air we were there, The trees in quaint fantastic shapes, antics, like giant apes, Fences wriggled in our wake, like a living writhing snake, Cattle in the pastures pent, emblems of complete content, Spooks they seemed of black and white, quite a queer uncanny sight, How the light and shade effects, magnify the road's defects, Yet the car with no complaint, rides the rippling waves content, On we rambled, free undaunted, through this favored land enchanted, Never once a word was spoken, charming silence hardly broken, Only rumbling, moaning, clatter, like a maiden beating bell, Chugging, chugging, humming, drumming, then a crashing and a clashing, Up the incline, near the top, humping, thumping, never stop, Now the coasting, gliding, sliding, sure a feeling of delight in, With a boom, we were home.

The question is also asked what has become of the boys who used to sit in the upper gallery 10 cent seats of the theater, and munch peanuts and stamp on the floor. Well, some of 'em, being just paid off for their farm jobs, are blacking their boots and inviting their best girls to occupy the $2.00 front seats.
