Vocational Training.
 "The need of industrial, or, as it has come to be more generally called, vocational, training is now universally acknowledged. In the interest of the nation as well as in that of the workers themselves this training should be made substantially universal. While we cannot now discuss the subject in any detail, we do wish to set down two general observations—first, the vocational training should be offered in such forms and conditions as not to deprive the children of the working classes of at least the elements of a cultural education. A healthy democracy cannot tolerate a purely industrial or trade education for any class of its citizens. We do not want to have the children of the wage-earners put into a special class in which they are marked as outside the sphere of opportunities for culture. The second observation is that the system of vocational training should not operate so as to weaken in any degree our parochial schools or any other class of private schools. Indeed, the opportunities of the system should be extended to all qualified private schools on exactly the same basis as to public schools. We want neither class divisions in education nor a State monopoly of education.

Increased Income for Labor.
 "The great evil of insufficient income for the majority can be removed only by providing the workers with more income. This means not only universal living wages, but the opportunity of obtaining something more than that amount for all who are willing to work hard and faithfully. All the other measures for labor betterment recommended in the preceding pages would likewise contribute directly or indirectly to a more just distribution of wealth in the interest of the laborer."

The Flow of Meat

Two-thirds of the live stock in the United States has to be raised in the West.

One-half of the consumers of meat live in the East.

In other words, most of the live stock is one or two thousand miles distant from most of the people who need it in the form of food.

Fifty years ago, when live stock was raised close to every consuming center, the country butcher could handle the job after a fashion.

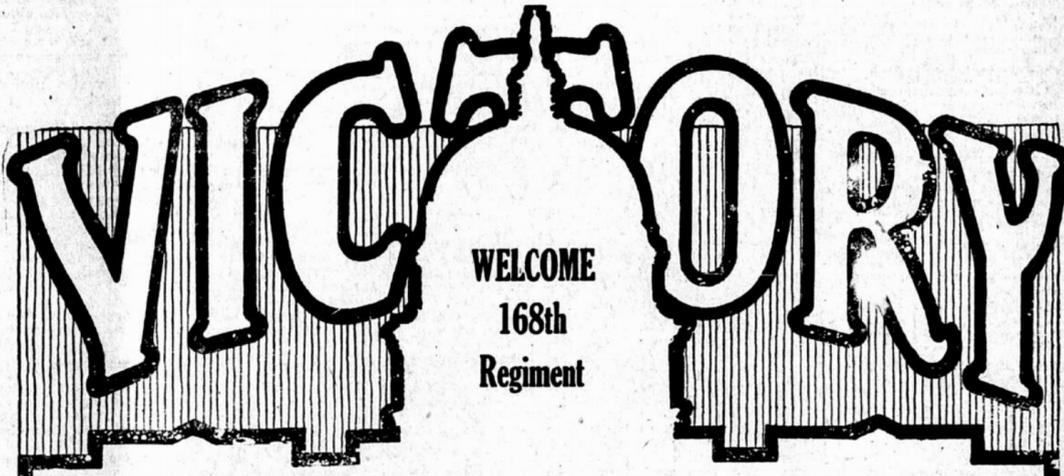

But the job got too big.

Now millions of animals have to be moved hundreds of miles to millions of people. Somewhere on the way they have to be turned into meat.

The packers solved the problem. They set up plants where the "live haul" and the "meat haul" were in the right balance. They built up distributing systems—refrigerator cars, refrigerating plants, branch houses. They saved time, money and meat everywhere. The stockraiser benefited in better markets and higher prices; the consumer, in better meat and lower prices.

As the country grew, the packers had to grow, or break down. Because of its present size and efficiency, Swift & Company is able to perform its part in this service at a fraction of a cent per pound profit.

 Extends Greetings

We Remember--

- Chateau Thierry
- Belleau Wood
- Argonne Forest
- St. Mihiel
- Lys

Your unconquerable courage which won the great victory for the democracy of the world.

The way you faced that scorching, withering maelstrom of fire over there.

With aching hearts we remember the wooden crosses you left in France.

The determined faces as you started forth from your fireside, and said the fond good-bye.

You have exterminated the monster that menaced us.

You have extinguished the conflagration that threatened to consume the world.

Our hearts glow with pride and gratitude as we bid you

Welcome Home Brave Boys of the 168th.
