At the entry of the united States into the world war he enlisted in the army and saw service overseas, rising from the ranks to the rank of sergeant, thus giving splendid proof of his dutifulness, success and patriotism. After being mustered out of the service he took a position as accountant with the Farmers bank.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left for a short trip in the west, after which they will return to this city where they will make their future home. The Journal joins their hosts and friends in wishing them success in their married life and many years of happiness.

Everybody's Column

To the Editor: The belief that the soul does not die, and that when people appear to die, they are only entering upon a higher sphere, is the real basis for the belief that the living can communicate with the spirits of the dead.

The present economic conditions present such an opportunity to retail merchants to expand their trade. More money is in circulation than ever before. Many people who used to buy only the bare necessities, are now buying comforts and luxuries.

The inspired apostle Paul says, in 1 Thes. 4: 13: "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

The evidences are multiplying which tell us that the day is hastening when we shall meet the loved and loving; for our Lord will soon come to open the massed old graves, and His angels will gather His people from one end of the earth to the other. They will then be taken to those mansions which He is now preparing for those who love Him. They have not received their reward at death.

Very sincerely yours, Geo. E. Trager, of the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Pearl's Transformation. For two or three years in the seas of Japan, the Antilles or the Indies, at a depth of not more than ten or twelve meters, the marvel known as a pearl has its birth, takes form and grows in its sheltered infancy.

Shop Talk. A school teacher was discussing the way she had been changed from one building to another. "The manual training supervisor was with the superintendent when I went in to see where he was going to send me," she said, "and I just asked them if I was to sweep shavings up in that department."

Her listeners smiled; they smiled again when she continued: "Then the superintendent told me to go to the high school and sweep shavings up in the history department here."

"Why," mildly put in one of them, "are they blockheads down there?"

The event is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, December 13th, at the vacant building north of the Docherty creek station.

Hugh Odell was up from Loda, the latter part of the week and visited with friends. Miss Flora Aeberhardt was visiting and shopping in Denison Friday.

Among the leading social functions of the past week is the party given at the home of Mrs. A. H. Harper Friday evening, given for the members of the Baptist Junior union. There were also a number of other parties, such as the company composing about forty. The other folks enjoyed the time in social visiting, games and contests having been provided as a means of entertainment for the boys and girls.

The game, in which a number of young folks appeared—each one was arrayed to represent some book, a country or noted city, and the game was very interesting. Much pleasure was occasioned among the guests in trying to discern the characters. Other interesting features in this line were a music guessing contest and a conundrum game. FUEL WASTED BY OVERHEATING

Furnace Fire Should Always Be Checked Before the House is Warm—Let Air in Through Damper

SHOULD BURN THE COAL GASES Failure to Follow the Common Sense Rules Will Result in the Loss of Much Fuel

AMES, Dec. 9.—Iowa's diminishing coal pile will last at least 50 per cent longer, if house furnaces are intelligently fired, say the engineering extension experts at Iowa State college. They suggest how coal should be burned in the home by an illustrated leaflet which may be secured by writing for it to the engineering extension department at Ames.

Fires in furnaces so that the coal gases will be burned and not wasted, that is one of the most important instructions for fuel saving. Failure to follow it results in much fuel loss. In firing the bed of coals should never be entirely covered with fresh coal. Fill the fresh charge in the front of the fire pot so that a small area of red coal is "uncovered" at the back. At the same time the damper should be closed. The fire door damper should be closed when the gases are burned off, to prevent cooling the fire pot.

Much fuel is wasted through overheating. The furnace should always be checked before the house is quite warm enough. It is checked by closing the ash pit damper and opening the check damper in the smoke pipe. It should not be checked by opening the fire door or its damper. In cold weather a "thick" fire is essential, say the firing experts. A "thick" fire has a deep bed of coals and a thick bed of ashes on top of the grate. In cold weather shake the grates more frequently and in mild weather, less frequently.

The furnace water pans should be kept well filled, for if the furnace gives off moist air the house will be more comfortable at a temperature of 68 degrees than at 72 or 74 degrees if the air is very dry. A tight furnace helps toward economy in fuel. Loose fitting doors and dampers will admit so much air to the fire box that the fire cannot be checked effectively. "Every householder will find it profitable to make a study of his furnace," says the leaflet. "The engineering extension department. If you do so intelligently, he'll make his coal pile go a great deal further and keep his house more comfortable."

When the Reds are jailed everyone is well satisfied, and when after a short period of rest, the Reds are released, they also are well satisfied. The philosophers urge the people to seek "sweetness and light." The crowds in the sugar lines suggest that anyway they follow the first part of that advice.

A cartoonist displays a picture showing a candle burning at both ends, one end tagged "Higher Wages" and the other "Lower Production." To some people the candle looked more like a giant and heavily loaded fire cracker, with the fuse getting mighty short.
