Dr. A. F. Bonney Re-elected President of State Association at Convention Held at Council Bluffs

ANNUAL SESSION WAS BUSY ONE
Texas Appropriates Nearly Nine Times As Much As This State for Aid of the Industry

Dr. A. F. Bonney, of Buck Grove, was re-elected president of the Iowa State Beekeepers association which held its annual convention at Council Bluffs last week. The other officers elected were: Vice president, H. Fuhrmann, Davenport; secretary, H. Prof. F. B. Paddock, Ames; directors, F. W. Hall, Colo; R. C. Waring, Marshalltown, and J. H. Allison, Council Bluffs. Bonney for years has made an intensive study of the bee industry and there are few better versed men on the subject than he. His recognition of his ability in this line and his many Crawford county friends rejoice with him.

Facts and figures brought out at the convention are: There were reported in Iowa 178,000 colonies of bees in 1919, from which was secured 13,000,000 pounds of honey, valued at about $3,000,000.

The state of Texas appropriates $12,500 to aid the beekeepers while Iowa, the richest agricultural state in the union, appropriates only $1,500.

The beekeepers of Iowa are going to begin cooperation in their business, just as fruit growers and other producers, with the hope that the industry may be better protected and improved by such action.

The program was carried out at this time with appropriate games, contests, etc. Much interest was created in singing with each other. The program was a most successful one.

Another feature along this line was the giving of reasons for which one has to be a Rebekah. Among the many good reasons the one given by A. L. Johnson was decided upon as being the most unique.

A delicious two course collation was served as a fitting close to a most delightfully spent evening.

From the Dundas Reporter we learn that Gene Roberts, a brother of Will Roberts, living near Dundas, suffered the loss of his fine county home last Thursday. The Reporter says: Mr. Gene Roberts suffered the loss of his fine farm home on Thursday last, shortly after noon. The community was called by the ringing of the fire bell but Mr. Roberts home is beyond the city limits and of course was not afforded the protection of the city water. He lived east of town a short distance up the valley. People responded quickly and both Mr. and Mrs. Roberts wish to extend their thanks to those who so valiantly helped, especially the superintendent and the children from the high school.

The fire seemed to have started in the kitchen and was first noticed by Mrs. Roberts as she was hanging clothes on the line, but she thought at first that the smoke came from the top of the chimney and did not get alarmed until the fire broke out. It was discovered that the fire was burning inside the roof it was hard to save anything, although a few pieces of furniture were saved. It was badly smoked. The house burned completely and is an entire loss as was most of the contents. Mr. Roberts carried some insurance. The friends and neighbors sympathize with them in their misfortune as it is indeed a misfortune to be burned out of your home at the beginning of winter.

News and Comment About Iowa People and Events

The farmers in hundreds of communities in Iowa are providing electricity for their homes. The most popular method is by high tension lines and a central power plant in town or city. One of the largest movements on foot is the extension of a line from Iowa Falls in Hardin county to Reinbeck in Grundy county. Already six crews of men are at work wiring the houses and farm buildings and a great deal of material is on hand. The rest to be shipped early enough that the line will be supplying customers by December 1st. With its thirty miles of main line, 15 patrons and the capacity to care for twice as many, it will be the largest farmers' line constructed in Iowa. The company was formed on the basis of eighty eight shares at $400 each, or about $35,000, but it is the engineer's estimate that it will cost but $30,000 to build the line. This is exclusive of all wiring in the houses and farm buildings, and most of them are asking provisions for electric stoves and motors to run farm machinery and electrically operated pumps for water systems. From the power house at the great dam across the river at Keokuk lines extend in all directions, accomplishing hundreds of farmers in southern Iowa, northeastern Missouri and western Illinois. Another transmission line is to be constructed from Keokuk to Burlington by way of Port Madison. This will make three lines connecting the two cities. Two are on the Illinois side of the river and the new one on the Iowa side. The object of so many lines is to guard against interruption of service because of lightning. On several occasions lightning has put both lines on the Illinois side out of commission at the same time, it being necessary to run lines on the Iowa side several miles from those on the Illinois side will not be affected by the same bolt of lightning.

Iowa has contended that they were handling the Bell long distance business at a loss.

J. F. Dollahan is under arrest at Waterloo because he substituted chicken feathers for those plucked from geese. It is claimed the defendant secured a number of mattresses filled with goose feathers to renovate and that before returning he took out large quantities of goose feathers and substituted chicken feathers.

He has been taking at least fifty per cent of the goose feathers from every mattress. Goose feathers are worth from $1.25 to $1.50 a pound while chicken feathers are worth only twenty cents.

One of the largest steamboat construction companies in the United States is located right here in Iowa. All manner of water craft is turned out at the extensive yards in Dubuque, known in commercial circles as the Dubuque Boat and Boiler works. Several large government contracts were successfully handled by this firm during the war. Its latest venture was the construction of seven steel barges of the latest pattern and design for use on the Mississippi river. These vessels cost $100,000. These vessels cost more than a million dollars and were delivered to the owners at St. Louis recently, being towed by the United States steamer Elleanor. It is the property of the owners to start a coal and produce line between St. Louis and St. Paul in the 1921 season.

A. F. Stattler is dead at Los Angeles. He was one of the original founders of the famous English colony in Plymouth county in 1879. He was one of the best known horse men in Iowa and his knowledge of horses brought him into prominence and for many years he was judge at all of the big horse shows in the country.

Large posters conspicuously displayed announce that a number of recruits are wanted for guard duty in Germany.

One of the problems confronting Iowa farmers at this time is how to harvest the big crop of corn. Corn huskers are hard to get even though as much as ten cents per bushel is offered for husking in some counties. Rural schools in many localities have been adjourned in order to give the children an opportunity to assist in the work.

In many cases women have hurriedly adjusted their household affairs and joined their husbands in the field. The corn crop this season breaks all records and places Iowa far in the lead of other states. Government experts estimate the yield in this state at 441,000,000 bushels. The previous state record was 418,000,000 bushels in 1912.

Former service men should know that the government is anxious to restore all of its brave defenders to their homes. The government has an opportunity is given. In this great work Dr. Frank L. Williams, of Des Moines, is the representative for Iowa. Dr. Williams was a captain-surgeon in the 18th infantry. Iowa service men and their families should be thoroughly familiar with Dr. Williams' work. This work is independent of the war risk insurance. The government hospitals and government surgeons' offices are open to service men without fee. And yet there are men right here in Iowa who are in danger of death simply because they are not familiar with Uncle Sam's provisions for taking care of them. Dr. Williams is doing a great work for Iowans but he is anxious to do much more. If Iowa does not get the full benefits of the government regulations it is not his fault.

Five claims totalling $70,000 have been filed against Cass county as the result of the automobile accident that occurred October 3d, when five young Greek men were injured, one, Oscar Patch, fatally. The largest of the claims is $25,000, asked by the administrators of his estate, J. B. and Inez Willoughby. The others are Hoyt $5,000; Leslie Leslie $10,000; Dale Hopley, $10,000. Patch died two days after the accident. Luncheon claims a broken arm and nose and a broken leg. The other three were injured on both sides of his head, and that his hip was injured, in addition to bruises. The claimants ask damages on the strength of negligence on the part of the county and the Willson Bridge company of Red Oak, for allowing a pile of dirt to obstruct the highway near the site of a new bridge over the Lewis road, built by the Willson company.

Every person in the state of Iowa knows how to get gallons of cream during the past year. According to statistics gathered by the state dairy and food commission five and one half million gallons of ice cream worth $7,000,000 were produced and shipped in the state during the year ending September 1st. This is an increase of $20,000 in value over the preceding year. It does not represent a proportionate increase in gallons, however, due to increase in price. The war tax added to the tendency to increase price.

In order to obtain gasoline at a reduced rate an organization known as the Community Service Stations company found easy picking when it outlined a co-operative system of distributing filling stations in various towns, stockholders being entitled to a lower rate for gas. And now the Central Engineering company of Des Moines has taken the matter to court, claiming $120,000. The engineering company which took the contract to build the various stations alleges that the service stations company failed to fulfill its contract and that the money asked for represents an unpaid balance. The towns, where stations were constructed are: Storm Lake, Newell, New Cherokee, Parkersburg, Spencer, McGregor, Monona, Schleswig, Waukeet, Spirit Lake, Estherville, Ringstead, West Union, Hampton, Williams, Garner, Hubbard, Algona, Central City, Ute, Doon, Tringhar, Paullina, Sanborn, Ocheyedan, Ashton, Grattinger, Emmetsburg, Des Moines, Mt. Airy, Council Bluffs, Diagonal, Davenport, Blairtown, Shelby, North Sioux Center, Clearfield, Clarion, Eagle Grove, Dows and Belmond.

Woman's Home Missionary Society of Dow City Sends Two Barrels of Fruit to Des Moines

DOW CITY, Nov. 23—Special—The Woman's Home Missionary society held another interesting meeting Wednesday afternoon of past week with Mrs. Ellen Hain at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wesley Cramer. The attendance at this time was very good, being above the average number. Mrs. Frank Glassburner was the leader of the lesson, which was taken from the textbook. Mahin presented a leaflet entitled "A Deaconess Community House," telling of the many good works which are being accomplished by the W. H. M. S. through this channel. LEGION SMOKER
American Legion Enjoy Smoker Thursday Evening—Super Session of Ginning of Series of Functions

DOW CITY, Nov. 23—Special—The American Legion East No. 100 enjoyed a smoker Thursday evening at the opera house, there being a goodly number of the members present. Various games had been provided as a means of entertainment and two songs with the merry lark and general good fellowship that prevailed the wee small hours began to wane before the company realized the swiftly passing time. Refreshments, consisting of coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts, were served by a quorum of six ladies, the wives of members of the legion, who had been selected as the menu committee.
