Nov. 28. How Jesus Was Received. Matt. 2:6, 16-26, 17, 18.

The lesson of today has in it great possibilities for usefulness. As a foundation for what would be said, it may be best to set forth the substance of the verses of scripture reference, which have just been given. It will be remembered that John the Baptist was the forerunner of Christ. He appeared on the banks of Jordan announcing that he came to make the people straight for the coming of one greater than he, the latches of whose shoes he was not worthy to undo. Finally Jesus came and was baptized by John and thereupon began his career as a preacher. Because John had the courage to denounce wrong doing both among the lowly and in the palace of the king, he was put to death by being beheaded. In his seclusion John was not fully informed of what Jesus was saying and doing, and from what he did hear he was not satisfied that Jesus was carrying out the ideals which he had in mind. John therefore sent certain disciples to Jesus asking whether He truly was the promised Messiah or should one look for another. Jesus made reply, standing upon His record. He said to tell John the things they had just seen; how the blind received their sight, the lame walked, the lepers were cleansed, the dead raised and the poor had the gospel preached to them.

After the disciples of John had gone Jesus gave utterance to words relating to the way the people were attending to the gospel He preached. He said that opposition met Him everywhere. John had been found fault with because he was seclusive, and when Jesus came he was not accepted because He entered into social relations with the people. Then calling to mind the wonderful works which had been done before the eyes of the residents of the long ago destroyed cities of Tyre and Sidon had been granted the chance to know things, as those of these cities who have not repented, the lepers were affected with this feeling and the common people confidently expected it. When it was shown that Jesus had no ambitions of this kind, there was disappointment, and His popularity began to wane. Again His teachings undermined the customs of the Jews as held by the religious leaders, and He was given power to the Pharisees to take the money of the people and hold them down.

The early popularity of Jesus came in part from the hope that under His leadership the Jews would be able to overthrow the Roman government of the country, and set up an earthly establishment, the earthly kings, John, and the disciples of Jesus, were affected with this feeling and the common people confidently expected it. When it was shown that Jesus had no ambitions of this kind, there was disappointment, and His popularity began to wane. Again His teachings undermined the customs of the Jews as held by the religious leaders, and He was given power to the Pharisees to take the money of the people and hold them down.

There thus comes with force the situation as to why the people then and now do not believe in masses on Jesus. First, the reason is given that the bible religion is not along the lines of the notions of the individual objecting. He would have it different. It was to be the religion of the world with heartiness believe and work for it. Second, the religion as it is, strikes at the selfish and evil practices of men. The christian church in its stand on the liquor question was denounced without stint by every man who thought he was benefited in purse by the traffic. To do justice by your neighbors is no the notion of the profiteers of this day, and the business world says "Religion and business do not mix." The Pharisees of the olden days say their rights about to be cut off by the carrying out in practice of the teaching of Jesus, and the same class of men now line up in opposition when it runs counter in practice to their selfish purposes. When questioned as to the merits of His teachings, Jesus stood on His record. He said "See what I have done. There has been healing, tenderness, and the gospel freely given the poor and common people." In like manner the church leaders of today set forth the claims of the bible religion by calling attention to what it has done. It has been as the blessed water on the desert of barren land. It has gone to lands where brutality, vice, ignorance, inhumanity of man to man, has flourished these thousands of years, and cleanliness, brotherly love, respect for woman has been the fruitage. Schools, hospitals, means physical as well as spiritual healing, have gone hand in hand with the missionaries in their work. Bishop Stuntz, when in Denison many months ago, made a very strong sermon on the similarity between the benefits of water on barren land, and the results from the teachings of the gospel among the heathens. As desert land blossoms as the rose with the application of water, so did heathen lands bring forth fruitage with the coming of the gospel. Experience has shown that the minds of the young men and women in India and China for instance are as bright as those in America, and that when they were given the benefits of christian education and civilization they often outstripped the young men and women of our country and England.

This lesson therefore brings to us the fact that there is an accountability for those who hear the gospel message, and refuse it. While Jesus was ever tender, loving and ready and willing that all should come to repentance and enjoy the blessed eternal life, yet there was a limit beyond which people could not go. He showed this in His declaration as to the city of Capernaum and those about Him in the days that He was on the earth. He said the people who saw His mighty works could not be held guiltless for rejecting His message. It follows that those people of our day who have had the gospel message given them all their lives, and who persistently reject, cannot be held guiltless of so doing at the day of judgment. The lesson also calls attention to the reasons why people reject, in that it interferes with their selfish desires, and finally the magnificent record of the christian religion is set forth in a way which should convince any reasonable man or woman that it is of supernatural origin, because of the great things it has accomplished.

John Prosch, who lives six miles west of Denison, four miles north of Arion, and three miles east of Kenwood, on the place known as the Albert Lenz farm, will hold a public sale on Tuesday, December 7, commencing at 10 o'clock, at which time he will sell fifty head of livestock, all his machinery and one dozen Rose Comb Rhode Island Red roosters. Listed in the livestock is a team of grey mules, 10 years old, weight 2500, and a bay mare 7 years old, weight 1400. There are 12 extra good milk cows, and 40 head of hogs. All the machinery is good. A free lunch is to be given at noon, and Duncan & Reinking are the auctioneers, and the Farmers State bank is the clerk. Look up the ad and read it.

There thus comes with force the situation as to why the people then and now do not believe in masses on Jesus. First, the reason is given that the bible religion is not along the lines of the notions of the individual objecting. He would have it different. It was to be the religion of the world with heartiness believe and work for it. Second, the religion as it is, strikes at the selfish and evil practices of men.
