The Difference Between a Violin and a Fiddle.

Half a century ago, or less, the somewhat facetious Dr. Pond dwelt in the quiet and out-of-the-way village of A——. The Doctors ideas were liberal—much more so than many of his congregation; nevertheless he kept on the even tenor of his people. He had a son named Enoch, who at that early age manifested a remarkable talent for music, which the father cherished and cultivated with care. In the same village lived an antiquated maiden lady, who, having no cares of her own to occupy her time and attention, magnanimously devoted herself to those of her neighbors. One morning she called at the doctor's and requested to see him. When he entered the room where he was seated, he perceived at a glance that something was amiss, and before he had time to extend the usual "How d'ye do?" she added:

"I think, Dr. Pond, that that a man of your age and profession might have something better to do, when you were in New London last week, than to buy Enoch a fiddle; all the people are ashamed that our minister should buy his son a fiddle! Oh, dear, what is the world coming to, when ministers will do such things!

"Who told you i had a fiddle," inquired a the Doctor.

"Who told me? Why, everybody says so, and some people have heard him play as they passed the door. But ain't it true, Doctor?"

"I bought Enoch a violin when I went to New London."

"A violin? what's that?"

"Did you never see one?"

"Never."

"Enoch," said the doctor, stepping to the door, "bring your violin here,"

Enoch obeyed the command, but no sooner had he entered with his instrument than the old lady exclaimed:

"La! how; there, it is a fiddle!"

"Do not judge rashly," said the doctor, giving his son a wink; "wait till you hear it."

Taking the hint Enoch played Old Hundred. The lady was completely mystified; it looked like a fiddle, but who had ever heard Old Hundred played on a fiddle?" It could not be. So, rising to depart, she said: "I am glad I came in to satisfy myself. La me! just think how people will lie!"

ODDS AND ENDS

Delphi, out in Indiana, has the following dog ordinance:

"Dogs that are not collared and labelled, no matter how respectably connected, will have their narratives amputated one inch south of their ears!"

A Salisbury (Conn.) man recently hitched a yoke of oxen to a horse that "plaid back in the breeching." The horse's head was not put on firmly enough to test the question whether he or the oxen were the strongest.

It is said women would walk much better if they would pace up and down their room for an hour every day with a heavy book poised on their head, which it would seem gives the most crooked person an erect and graceful figure.

The Sacramento Bee says the financial condition of California was never better, and its health excellent. Good crops and plenty of employment for all willing hands, are the basis of real prosperity, and these California is now blessed with.

At a marriage lately in Maine the bride's voice faltered, and she paused in the middle of the impressive ceremony. Her little niece, a bright little three year-old, thinking the the naughty minister was compelling poor aunty to say something disagreeable, stamped her little foot and exclaimed in a tone of authority, "Aunty, don't oo say it."

Smith thought it was morally wrong to take animals for food, and he resolved to quit it and live on vegetables. One morning he gave way to temptation and walked into a beefsteak.

"I don't know," said he, "that its any harm to eat a piece of cow, it's dead and the matter can't be helped, but I'll be hanged if I ever kill one!"

I asked a little boy last evening—

"Have you called grandma to tea?"

"Yes, When I went to call her she was asleep, and I didn't know how to wake her. I didn't wish to hallo at grandma, nor shake her; so I kissed her cheek, and woke her very softly. Then I ran into the hall, and said, pretty loud, Grandma tea is ready, and she never knew what woke her."

The night is mother of the day,
The winter of the spring,
An ever upon the old decay,
The greenest masses cling.
Behind the clouds the starlight lurks,
Through showers the sunbeams fall;
For God, who loveth all his works,
Has left His hope with all.

Whittier.

A man was urged to take out a policy for the benefit of his wife to the amount of five thousand dollars. He asked his wife's opinion, when she replied with charming frankness:

"Why my dear, you will, of course, act according to your own judgment; but, in case of your decease, it would make me a most desirable widow."

A little girl came into my house one day and some apple parings lay on a plate on the table. After sitting awhile she said:

"I smell apples!"

"Yes," I replied, "I guess you smell those apple parings on the plate."

"No, no!" she said, "Taint them I smell; I smell whole apples!"

THE STRAY MULE.—At a meeting in a frontier Western settlement several present were stoutly opposed to the organization of a Sunday-school. Not being able to agree, the meeting was breaking up, when the chairman said he had a very important notice to read to them. Quiet was soon restored to hear this rather novel "religious notice."

"Strayed—A large black mule. He had on a halter when he left, and is branded on the left hip with the letter S. Any one returning the said mule will be liberally rewarded."

That Sunday School was organized—you bet.

To Remove Warts.—Take good indigo, such as is used by the laundress, soak it in water; with a knife pare away the surface of the warts so as to cause the blood to flow. Wipe off the blood and drop the indigo water on them. Very large ones may require a second application. The indigo produces no pain whatever. I have used and recommended this cure to many persons, and have never known it to fail but once.—Rural New Yorker.
