A board meeting of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company was held at the offices, corner of Fifth avenue and Ninth street yesterday, at which it was decided to immediately place under contract for construction the 200 miles of road extending from the head of navigation of the Columbia river northeast to Lake Pend d'Oreille. This section of the road will pass through the most fertile wheat-growing regions of the northwest. Several cargoes of rails have already been shipped for the work, which will be pushed to speedy completion. The stockholders have given their consent to the issue of the securities to be placed on the new road. Mr. Wright, the president of the road, tendered his resignation yesterday, which was accepted, and he went ahead for rest and recreation. Mr. Frederick Billings, of Woodstock, Vt., was selected to the place made vacant by Mr. Wright's resignation. Mr. Billings is an old member of the board, the chairman of the executive committee, and the interests of the company will be well looked after in his hands. In consequence of the appreciation of the land grant stock, the company has decided to reduce the price per acre of their lands east of the Missouri river from $1 to $2 per acre. The general situation of the company is such as to give the holders of its securities great encouragement. That the road will one day be one of the most valuable railroads in the country is a certainty. Meantime, everything is being done to retrieve the disasters which the failure of Jay Cooke & Co., and the panic of 1873, brought upon it. The road was then thrown into bankruptcy, but it has been reorganized in such a way that the interests of every person holding a dollar's worth of its securities or stock have been thoroughly protected. Changes were made in the character of the securities first issued, which are now nearly completed by the voluntary action of those who held them, and the common and preferred stock of the company is steadily rising in price in the stock market. Upon that portion of the road already completed, the earnings next year will undoubtedly reach a round million of dollars; and, altogether, there is the most cheering assurance that by a continuation of the careful and economical management of the past five years, the Northern Pacific Railroad will become the magnificent property its originators anticipated. THE Cabinet Vacancy. New York, June 5.—Specials to the evening papers say the Nebraska Congressional delegation called on the President Thursday, and without recommending any particular man for the office, urged the President to select the new Secretary of War from west of the Missouri river, because the United States army had now become a border States, and a border State man ought to direct its movements. The Illinois delegation have recommended ex-Congressman John B. Hawley, now Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, as Secretary of War. Summary Punishment. St. Petersburg, June 7.—The trial of Alexander Solovieff yesterday for the attempted assassination, on April 14th last, of His Majesty, the Czar, ended in a speedy conviction. The court pronounced him guilty, and after depriving him of his civil rights, sentenced him to death, by execution to take place at 5 o'clock this afternoon. A slight tremor passed through his frame when the hour of his doom was pronounced, but otherwise the prisoner remained unmoved during the trying ordeal. Solovieff is about 30 years of age. He was executed at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Editorial Correspondence. OGDEN TO CHEYENNE AND DENVER. How English Girls Love.—A Lively City.—Old Montana.—A Colorado Sheep Ranch.—Run by two Montana "Boys."—Profits of Sheep Husbandry, etc., etc. "That's what I call a good thing thrown away." If she had only bestowed her favors on one of us, there'd have been some sense in it. The speaker, like the writer, was "a badger bred and born," the blood of English ancestors coursing through his veins, and he was also a native of the same country. We were both Eastern-born passengers from Ogden, and the train was almost ready to depart. The woman kissing another "good-bye." It is said that "English girls love with their lips," but how kisses effect English men I have never learned; would judge, however, from the remark of my traveling companion that they would not be unappreciated. From Ogden, over the well equipped and nicely ballasted Union Pacific railroad, we proceed East through a country but very sparsely settled. A portion of the country is mountainous, and the scenery in some places is grand. The most of the country, however, between Ogden, Utah, and Rock Creek, Wyoming, is quite thinly grassed, and places where water can be obtained are a long distance apart. Consequently, no settlements of any consequence are found on this division, and but few head of live stock are seen from the train. Between Rock Creek and Cheyenne, however, the grazing qualities of the land are much better, water more abundant, and large herds of cattle are kept on the ranges here, especially in the winter. At Cheyenne we leave the Union Pacific road for a jump into Colorado, and the Denver Pacific train and are away at a rapid gallop over level and slightly undulating prairie lands to Denver. And here we must remark that in all our Western experience—over thirteen years—we never before saw so lively a city or one seemingly so prosperous. All the leading hotels are almost full, and on every night, and it is no unusual thing for persons to apply to several hotels before obtaining accommodations. Saloons, the cafes, and even no less than three livery houses, I was informed, were in full blast and prospering. The city certainly presented to us a remarkable improvement over its appearance three years ago. Then a large new hotel, the later Ocean—was unoccupied, and there were many vacant residences and business houses. Now all, or nearly all, are occupied, many more have been built and others are in course of erection. Among others I had the pleasure of meeting here was our former fellow-townsmen, "Joe" Holman, who is running a wholesale and retail grocery store here, and is prospering. He says he is not making as much, money as he made in Bozeman, but he has settled down, has a nice home, and seems even more jolly-faded, contented and fatter than when in Bozeman, which is easily accounted for in that he is not so far from his home as he was in Bozeman. His brother Sol, formerly of Helena, is also in the city, engaged in the crockery and glassware business. His store presents a very attractive appearance, and he informed us that he is doing well. From Denver we proceed south over the Denver and Rio Grande, a narrow-gauge railroad, to Pueblo, next to the largest city in the State. And here we again have cause for surprise at the wonderful advancement made. Two years ago business houses and residences could easily be obtained in any portion of the city at a nominal rent. Now all are full, and can only be secured by engaging a portion of the present occupants of the buildings are being erected in almost every section of the city, and prosperity is exhibited on every hand. From Pueblo we proceed still farther south a distance of forty-two miles and land on one of the largest sheep ranches in Southern Colorado. Being the property of the "Montana boys," Carl J. Stanley, formerly proprietor of the Half-Way House, on the Bozeman and Helena stage road, and the writer, and many questions having been asked of me in regard to the place, I will attempt a brief description of it. The home ranch is situated on the Huachuca river, in the present name, two miles from a post-office and about six miles from a railroad station. The ranch fronts one mile on each side of the river, and, in addition to residence, has horse stable, a dipping vat, and corrals for sheep, some idea of the magnitude of which can be imagined from the fact that there are twenty-two gates to almost all hung with hinges and fastened with hooks or clasps. A fine fence over a mile and half in length fences in for pasturage the south half of the place, entrance to which is obtained through a gate. Bars, the nuisance of most Western farms, are almost discarded, there being but three pairs on the place, and they in places seldom used. Several acres of meadow are on the place, and some eighty acres of broken ground, twenty-five acres of which are this year sown with corn, and about four acres with beans. About twenty acres more will be seeded with millet. The ranch was purchased by the firm less than two years ago, and nearly all the improvements have been made by the senior partner, under whose superintendence alone the ranch has been for two years past. Now as to the herds. A little over three years ago the boys put their "little all" into a herd of 2100 head, and nearly all ten and the other half improved, and six-teen Merino bucks. Now their herd numbers nearly 5000 head, and most of the Mexican sheep have been sold or traded off, leaving sheep in the herd to-day worth $3 to $3.50 to replace those in the original herd worth at the most $2 to $2.25. Their one-fourth as much as the herd with which the boys commenced. In addition, other live stock, such as horses, cows and donkeys are owned, all of which have been obtained from the profits of the "sheep business." At the present writing, the spring crop of lambs number 1000, and "the boys" confidently expect to raise at least 1800 head of sheep this year. Having given the original and present size of the herd, I leave others to figure out its increase and the profits of the business at their leisure. MATT. St. Mary's, Col., May 17, 1879.

As Attempt to Wainy the Overland Coach. From stage passengers who reached Helena from the terminus Wednesday evening, we learn the particulars of a bold attempt on the part of road agents to waylay and rob the northern board coach. There were six persons aboard, Dr. J. S. Glick, Mr. John Healy, and Mr. George Ford, and Osborne, Watson and Jamlin, express messengers. The treasurer-box, it is understood, contained a large amount in currency returning to Helena in exchange for bullion shipments constantly going forward to New York. At about 9 o'clock at night, when nearing Hole-in-the-Rock station, south of Pleasant Valley, Idaho, one of four men, concealed behind some roadside rocks, rose suddenly and shouted: "Stop the coach—right ahead!" The command was quickly followed by a single shot, which whizzed over and was hurrying past the coach. This was immediately succeeded by revolver shots, the messengers using their side arms as the nearest weapons with which to respond. The stage team, shying at the first shot, started on the run, and increased their speed as the shots increased in number and noise. "Let 'em slide!" cried one of the messengers, and the driver pushed the team along, the dazed road agents firing wild, but bullets sizzled over, under and on both sides of the fleeing stage. Not a soul of the six, or the driver was hit, and, singular to say, the coach itself escaped unharmed. The passengers, one of them performing an unaided discovery. They hugged the bottom of the coach with great unanimity, nor could one of them be persuaded to confess that he preferred a cushioned seat to a bare floor until the station was reached.—Helena Herald. The same evening two of them committed suicide by hanging in their cells in the guard house at Fort Keogh. Shocking Indian Murders. Brackettville, Texas, June 3.—As Mrs. Colson with three children, were on their home from a spring at Colson's ranch, 25 miles from here, on the 1st inst., they were met by a party of Indians, who killed one little girl with arrows, beat the other's brains out with a club, and after outraging Mrs. Colson, killed her, Colson and his sons, turning round the bodies and instantly resorting to the pursuit of the savages. Colson was married but two weeks. His former wife was killed by Indians a year and a half ago. Assignment of Troops in Montana. More Indian Troubles. A Tucson, Arizona, dispatch says a band of Indians, supposed to be renegades from the San Carlos reservation, have been marauding for three weeks. The results up to date, as given by military headquarters at Prescott barracks, are that Captain Byer overtook and fought the renegades in the Minnab mountains, killing four among their chief, "Terrific," and wounding four. So far, the Indians have killed five men and run off considerable stock. The military are pursuing their usual vigorous policy and will soon have them in hand. BOZEMAN Lunch House!
