

NEW NORTH-WEST. DEER LODGE CITY, FRIDAY, JUNE 3.

A Sad Story.

Death of the Elderly Son of Henry Clay—Thirty-eight Years of Hopeless Insanity—Final Death in an Asylum—A Madman Through Life.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer, May 17. Outside of Fayette County, where the prophet is held in high, but not in blameless repute, being in his own country, the name of Clay has ever been a sacred one in Kentucky, and to name him has been to quote lovingly.

Yesterday morning our special telegrams announced the end of a weary life, in stating that Theodore Clay, the son of Henry Clay, had died in the Lexington Lunatic Asylum, after a long confinement. The record of his life is briefly thus:

At 30 years of age, Theodore Clay was a promising lawyer. He was the image and the hope of the statesman whose name was on every tongue.

It was at the turning point in his life that Theodore Clay began to pursue, with an unwearied perseverance that caused his friends great uneasiness, a young lady of Lexington, who he had long loved hopelessly. The object of his attachment, who is at present one of the highest court judges of Kentucky, repulsed, firmly but kindly, every attention offered by the infatuated young man, after his meaning had become manifest.

It was not to be refused, and followed his fair fate in the streets of day and night, in the neighborhood of her home by night, in an annoying manner, until at last it became evident that he "was not all there," to use the soft phrase which a kindly peasantry expresses in connection with violent demonstrations.

Or, will ye keep Your ever pure and precious womanhood, The tender love of husband and of child, The duties of the nation's Pause, and think I why babies of wrongs and injured rights?

Or, will ye keep Your ever pure and precious womanhood, The tender love of husband and of child, The duties of the nation's Pause, and think I why babies of wrongs and injured rights?

Homage to Yashti.

It was a time of feasting at the court, Of King Ashura, and the days, Filled with the merry sound of revelry, The harp, the dance, the song, sped lightly on: The palace walls were gorgeous in their robes Of royal splendor—hangings rich and rare Brought from the looms of Tyre—sweeping down Their folds of purple on the marble floors, And held by rings of silver and of gold To stately columns. Ayodee filled the air Of costly spices brought from India's shores, And the sweetest music floated on the breeze To greet the senses of the Persian King. All, as they drank the wine from golden urns, Sang to the honor of their royal head, The majesty and glory of his reign His mighty kingdoms stretched from shore to shore From Ethiopia's jungles to the fair, And sea-lashed India, with its boundless wealth, That Ashura's heart grew proud. And longed to show his courtiers somewhat more To feed the fire of their tumultuous praise. And then he thought him of his beauteous Queen, For she was young, and "fair to look upon."

To all lands In his dominions went the message forth— "From henceforth shall the husbands all bear rule, And wives shall henceforth honor and obey, And shall come before the King as more." Thus, by the stern, fixed law, which altered not, To power absolute, and Persian men, O'er Persian women held supreme command. Honor to Yashti! who, when question came Which she should keep, her high and royal state As honored Queen, or her pure womanhood, Held to the latter. Thus her story ends, Her eyes down to the dust, her memory-haunted years Through all the yesterday, until to-day, With honor to the noble Persian Queen.

General Goicouria.

His Execution at Havana by the Spanish Authorities. From the New York Evening Post, May 7. The Cuban General Domingo de Goicouria was brought to Havana on Friday, a "verbal" or drum-head court martial immediately tried and condemned him, and at four o'clock on Saturday morning he was taken to Fort Principe, where a few hours thereafter he was executed. Thus died one who was condemned to death by Spain for his part in the Lopez expedition eighteen years ago. General Goicouria was a native of Cuba, and was for many years identified with the schemes for the liberation of the Cubans from Spanish rule. He was for this reason forced to take up his residence in the United States, where he has taken a leading part in organizing the different expeditions that have been set on foot against the Spanish authority. He was, in fact, the director of the enterprise which Lopez had the credit of leading. Lopez was a mere soldier of fortune; Goicouria calculated the chances and advised caution and great preparation. It was this characteristic that led Lopez to doubt the zeal and even loyalty of Goicouria, who had no faith in the filibustering schemes of 1851 and 1853, though he took part in preparing them. He was the second in command under Lopez; was captured, condemned to death, sent to Spain, and managed to escape from those who held him. After the disasters of that time, Goicouria was engaged in arranging a larger expedition, which was to have been led by General Quitman, Gustavus W. Smith, George B. McClellan, Mansfield Lovell and General Harney are said to have offered their services to this scheme for the liberation of Cuba. Goicouria was so highly esteemed and trusted in Cuba that the people of that island sent him large sums of money to assist in the enterprise. Although this was the most formidable and respectable expedition of the kind ever organized, for some reason, never explained, it was suddenly abandoned. For a short time Goicouria was associated with William Walker in the famous Nicaragua war, but they quarreled, and subsequently Goicouria was engaged in some revolutionary plots in South America.

When the revolution was begun in Cuba last year, he devoted himself to sending assistance from the United States, and that has been the character of his service almost entirely throughout the present struggle. In his death, which was, like that of Lopez, by the garrote, the Cubans lose a zealous leader. He was a man of great wealth, and of admirable bravery and devotion to the cause of Cuban liberty. A son of his was said to General Jordan, and was mortally wounded at the battle of Las Tunas.

A Singular Mania—An Admirer of Sleeping Beauty.

Louisville has among her notable characters a man named Charles Watkins, who has a strange mania, for which a name is not yet invented. He will break into a house at night just for the luxury of standing by the bedside of a person and looking at him or her, as the case may be, while lying asleep. He has been known to do this on several occasions, and after standing there and gazing for hours, leave without disturbing anything, and close the doors carefully after him.

The Courier-Journal says that "about six months ago he got himself into serious trouble this way, being arrested as a burglar and held to answer. He entered the room of a young lady after she had retired and gone to sleep. Taking his favorite position beside the bed, he stood gazing at the beautiful sleeper till, perhaps, conscious of the presence near her, she awoke, and was frightened terribly. By the faint light of the moon as it shone through the lattice, she saw this stranger standing still and motionless at her bedside. She screamed and fainted, and the inmates of the house, aroused by the noise, came rushing in just in time to catch the intruder. The affair caused a good deal of excitement, and no little gossip, at the time, but subsequent facts have proved that the man was harmless, and went there just to satisfy his singular longing of his. He has been caught in several such places since then, but at no time has he ever disturbed anything or anybody. He was presented to the court as a suspected felon, a charge hardly justified by the facts of the case, and held in $500 to be of good behavior for twelve months. His case is a strange one indeed.

How Miss Catherine Beecher Became a Votary of Single Life.

The venerable Judge Longstreet, of Georgia, in reminiscences of his early life, gives the following among his recollections: "I was a law student in Litchfield, Conn. Here I sat for a year, off and on, under the ministry of the Rev. Lyman Beecher, father of the renowned Ward and Harriet. There was another mightier, more to be pitied than these are to be blamed. Her memory has been brought annually, at least, and tenderly to my memory for about fifty years. If she lives she will excuse this public notice of her; if she be dead, I have no concern what her surviving brother and sister may think of it. She was betrothed to Alexander Fisher, of my class, a man the like of whom it takes the world a century to produce. From the day that he entered college to the day that he graduated he never missed but one question in any branch of science taught in the institution, and if he was before, as he was after I entered the class, he never hesitated two seconds in giving his answers. He was elected Professor of Mathematics in Yale College soon after he graduated, was sent England upon some business connected with the College, was shipwrecked and lost; and Miss Beecher lost a friend, perhaps, fifty years ago with a union of, perhaps, fifty years ago with a bright genius that I ever saw, and I believe the brightest that America ever produced, blended with as lovely a moral character as any American ever bore.

The French "Plebiscite" Explained.

One of the editors of the New Orleans Times, has received a business letter, of which the following is a carbon copy: NEW ORLEANS, April 23, 1870. DEAR N: Inclosed find $10. What the devil is a Plebiscite? Yours, languidly, J. C.. Measuring our correspondent's anxiety by his liberality, both gratitude and compassion prompt an early reply. Having once passed through a similar condition of mental exhaustion in endeavoring to comprehend the "Schlewig-Holstein question," we can feel for our friend's dazed condition over the "Plebiscite," and shall therefore proceed to answer it. A "Plebiscite" is a thing only a few "fellows" can understand. You see when in the course of human events, the polity of a government, in its transcendental relations with the political economies of a State, becomes imbued with the spectral analysis of abnormal influences, infringing upon the perpetuity of institutions at once detrimental and nugatory to the abstruse interests of theocracy, why, then, a decent respect for the opinions of mankind requires the promulgation of a popular analytical manifesto in which*. In short, a "plebiscite" is plainly a "plebiscite," or in other words, it is French or "Shoo fly, don't bodder me." There!

Chignons—Snakes.

My conscience smites me sorely for my neglect to fulfill the promise I made you about describing the latest variations of "chignons." Here then, is the best I can do. The latest style introduced from Paris is a broad braid down the centre (at the back of the head), and a serpentine coil around it, terminating at the top in a snake's head—the whole effect to be as snake-like as possible. This style is very appropriately named the Cleopatra. Have you ever noticed what a lurking affinity women possess for snakes ever since our mother Eve was fascinated by their wily predecessor in the prime of his snake-hood? Snake bracelets have twined coyly around her arms, snake rings wound lovingly around her finger, and snake breast pins coiled warily upon her bosom. One lady of my acquaintance has, for the pride of her mantle ornaments, a pair of tinted vases with green and gold snakes twining slyly about their necks. She declares, however, that it is her husband's choice, not hers. In fact, the preference has always been hitherto a secret one, or only half confessed—a kind of snake in the grass. Never until these degenerate days of women's rights and men's wrongs, have they been allowed to lift their heads boldly above ours, and exult in the supremacy he has gained and never lost. Men may boast of "snakes in their boots," but women can glory over snakes on the head.
