

MORMON WOMEN.

Their Delightful Condition in the Land of the Saints.

Cleveland Herald. A poverty-stricken Mormon is frequently the possessor of three or four wives. They all live in a single hut and the children brought into the world are early taught sensuality and an utter disregard of moral law.

The women of Utah are not beautiful. As a class they are very homely. The missionaries who travel in the South succeed in gaining many female converts, but as a rule they get nothing but the fools of the village, who, besides being dull of mind, are homely of face and form.

The church is doing all in its power to get converts. John Morgan, the President of the mission in the South, has made the assertion that he expected to capture 1,700 men and women this year in the South alone.

The converts from this section are taken to Colorado, where large colonies are springing up almost daily. The European victims are settled in Idaho, Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico. In Salt Lake City the Gentiles are to the Mormons as one is to five.

The business there is almost entirely in the hands of the Mormons. The municipal government of the city is Mormon. The Mayor, Common Council, the police force, the city courts, and the Fire Department are all Mormon.

There has been some discussion as to whether a person lying in a sleeping car should place his feet toward the locomotive or the reverse. One man (writing to a medical journal) traveled about 45,000 miles a year with his back to the locomotive because extremely ill with nervous affection, and got well after he had given up the habit.

Some Oxford dons were discussing the novel of George Fleming, author of the novel, "Kismet and the laughter of Mr. Engle Benson, of Rome. They decided that certain passages in that work could have been written only by a man in order to be confirmed in their opinion, they sent an invitation to dinner to the writer through his publisher.

Head Foreman vs. Feet Foreman. There has been some discussion as to whether a person lying in a sleeping car should place his feet toward the locomotive or the reverse.
