

R. J. RYAN, Esq., in a card published in the Indianapolis Journal, denies indignantly that he has "begged office at the hands of Gov. Morton," and uses pretty "rough talk" about the man who started or who circulated the story.

GEN. JOSEPH J. REYNOLDS has entered up on the duties of his command, in Western Virginia, with great activity. He is erecting strong fortifications at Cheat Mountain Pass. He will be found to be a prudent and skillful General. His appointment has been confirmed by the Senate.

The Adjutant General of the State has ordered the regiment authorized to be raised in the Seventh District, under the new requisition, to rendezvous at this place. The only proviso is that the necessary grounds, quarters, &c., shall be furnished, by citizens, with our expense to the State. This we presume will be done, as we have them all ready.

The Indianapolis Journal, of yesterday, contains a pretty full report of Governor Morton's Rockville speech. It produced considerable quaking among the secessionists in Parke, which is extending to surrounding counties. The State Sentinel is much worried over it, and indulges in its usual low style of comment in respect to it. It was a centre shot against traitors. They wince under it!

This old conventional character which "turn up" after every great battle, are now beginning to be announced. Several heroes have been saved by the judgment of the fatal bullet in the small pocket bible—the gift of the female relative—which each carried in his pocket. The old story of the watch in the pocket of the ball is also frequent. "Special Providences" of every well known kind are very gravely announced, as if they were either new or true.

It is reported that Gen. Schenk challenged Gen. Tyler, on Thursday last, for using disrespectful language in regard to the Ohio troops, in Schenk's brigade. This report is not confirmed, however. The conduct of the Ohio troops at Manassas was certainly good, and the bearing of their general was excellent. Both the Generals are very clever men, and ought not to fight each other. There are plenty of secessionists yet left for both of them to fight.

Kentucky Election. The election returns from Kentucky indicate a result favorable to the Union cause, by a considerable majority, if we may rely upon the figures furnished by the telegraph. If the first news received is not delusive, as is frequently the case, we may hope that secession in Kentucky has now received a finishing stroke. Patriotic men, all over the country, have been looking anxiously to the effect of the late reverse of our army upon the Kentucky election. If the Union men of the State have been strong enough to stand up under this, we may safely trust that they will soon put down all the domestic traitors among them. Berman and his desperate crew must soon be "played out."

Effect of the Late Battle. The public press is filled with various speculations as to the effect of the recent battle upon the Government, at home and abroad. Different opinions obtain as to this. Nearly every person friendly to the cause of the Union is impressed with the fact that the battle ought not to have been hazardous, and that there was gross and almost unpardonable mismanagement in its details. There was an apparent and shameful weakness of artillery upon the Federal side—a lack of efficient and convenient reserves, and an apparent want of skill and confidence in commanders of divisions. Blame must attach somewhere for all these things and for the loss of the battle, and that open and crushing. The public are not united in fixing this blame in any one quarter. Some reproach the Lieut. General, others the Cabinet, others the General in command, and still others the outside pressure of public opinion and the newspaper press of New York. Amidst all these conflicting opinions as to the cause of the disaster at Bull's Run, there seems to be a pretty general unanimity as to the ultimate effect being favorable to the Federal cause. It will be so in many particulars. It has taught the necessity of better officers and discipline in our army—of the need of heavier artillery and regular approaches to reduce the strongly fortified posts of the enemy. It has demonstrated the fact that there must be some responsible military head to control and govern our armies, and that something, besides mere valor on the field of battle, is requisite to ensure success. It has shown to some extent the strength and prowess of the enemy. It has brought people to reflection, and to conclude that there is something in war and battles requiring good common sense and business energy. Hundreds of incompetent and inefficient creatures have forced themselves into official places, in our army, without the least qualification. All this thing must be changed and will be changed speedily.

Perhaps there never was a pitched battle before fought, when the bulk of the soldiers, actually engaged, were more volunteers for the hour. It is certain that the regiments which behaved most gallantly, at Manassas, were those the time of which had expired, and that could not therefore be controlled in the retreat. In this matter the country has learned a lesson. All these teachings will be to protect the life of the rebellion for some months. It has already produced a strong and deep feeling among the inhabitants of the loyal States, equalled only by the uprising in April last. It will cause the equipment of larger armies and render the future victories of the Government more terrible and destructive. The success of the Government will be sure in the end. Henceforth we may look for no mistakes. The battle at Bull's Run will probably have ended this thing—in so far as its teachings go they will result in good. A defeat at the commencement of a campaign is better than at the close. The general effect of the late disaster must be good indeed. Reform will follow it and future success will blot out its ignominy.

Extracts from the speech of Hon. Joseph Holt, to the Soldiers at Camp Holt.

It is not my purpose to occupy you with any political discussion. The gleaming bayonets and the martial music, admonish me that with you at least the argument is exhausted, and that you have no longer doubts to be solved, or hesitations to be overcome. Your resolution is taken and you openly proclaim, that, let others do as they will, as for yourselves, unchilled by the Arctic airs of neutrality, you are determined to fight in the ranks, and, if need be, to lay down your lives for its preservation.

Now that the booming of the cannon of treason and the cry of men stricken unto death for fidelity to our flag are borne to us on almost every breeze, it is harrowing to the soul to be dragged into companionship with those who still vacillate, who are still timidly balancing chances and coldly calculating losses and gains; who still persist in treating this agonized struggle for national existence as a petty question of commerce, and deliberately take out their swords and weigh in the scales the beggary jewels of trade against the life of our country.

You will soon mingle in the ranks with the gallant volunteers from the North and West, and with me you will admire their discipline, and their deep determination, whose earnestness with them has no language of menace or bluster or passion. When the men from Buller Hill and the men from the "dark and bloody ground," unstraggled from each other by the low arts of politicians, shall stand side by side on the same national field, the heart of freedom will be glad.

The New Orleans Sunday Delta of the 14th inst., advises the planters to pick their cotton and store it in their pens, well covered, and abide events. If the Northern army approach, the planters are told to commit the cotton to the flames. This applies to the present crop. In relation to future crops they are to prepare to reduce the product of cotton to a very low figure, and devote their labor and land to other productions which will be needed for consumption during the war, and to act on the presumption that the contest is to be a protracted one.

The Capture of Articles at Rich Mountain. The following army supplies were captured by the Federal troops at the battle of Rich Mountain, and are now in the hands of the Quartermaster of the army: 1004 muskets, 18000 rounds powder, 7000 rounds of canisters, 4000 rounds of shot, 4 brass six pounders, 4 caissons, 84 horses, 64 harness, 40 wagons, 30 saddles, 193 tents, 12 stands of colors, 400 pairs pants, 1 blacksmith forge, 1 buggy and harness, clothing, trunks, and camp equipment of various kinds, a large lot of hospital stores, drugs, medicines, surgical instruments, and last, though not least, 300 prisoners, together with 700 surrendered by Col. Peagram. From the report it is ascertained there were 1,000 in the camp at Rich Mountain, only 600 of whom escaped—Louisville Journal.

ATROCITY OF THE REBELLION. When we look away to that scene of carnage, all strewn with the bodies of patriotic men who courted death for themselves, that their country might live, and then look upon the homes which their fall has rendered desolate forever, we realize—that I think the popular heart in its forbearance has never completely comprehended—the unspeakable and hellish atrocity of this rebellion. It is a perfect saturnalia of demonic passion—From the reddened waters of Bull's Run, and from the gory field of Manassas, there is now going up an appeal to God from millions of exasperated men against those fiends in human shape, who, drunk with the orgies of an infernal ambition, are filling to its brim the cup of a nation's sorrows. Woe, woe, I say, to those traitors when this appeal shall be answered.

KENTUCKY'S GOD SPEED. When you move, as soon you may, to the seat of war, Kentucky, despite the whispered caution of politicians, will cheer you on, and will hang with prayerful solicitude over you, alike upon your march, and amid the heavy currents of battle. Loyal men every where are exclaiming "God speed you," and "all hail to your courage and patriotism." Glory beckons you onward and upward, and could the illustrious dead hear in the graves where they sleep, your every footfall, as you advance to your country's battle-fields, would be music to their ears.

Southern Items. A writer to the Charleston Mercury of the 8th inst., alluding to military inspections and orders, thus concludes his communication:—"Most of our volunteers are actuated by the highest motives, and cheerfully perform their duties without reference to fines and punishment. But there are many who are kept to the mark by the law alone, and some have even declared that they will never go into the field again, except a battle is raging, if no penalty attaches for a refusal. Amid these discouragements, who would be a volunteer officer?"

RAILROADS. Office Terre-Haute & Richmond R. R. Texas-Haute, July 12, 1861. This check has taught us invaluable lessons, which we could not have learned from victory, while the countless dead, displayed by our volunteers is full of promise for the future—Leonidas himself, while surveying the Persian host, that, like a troubled sea, swept onward to the pass where he stood, would have been proud of the leadership of such men. We shall rapidly recover from this disaster, which, after all, will serve only to nerve to yet more extraordinary exertions the nineteen millions of people who have sworn that this republic shall not perish, and perishes it will not, perchance it cannot while the path remains.
