

IS FORCED TO RETREAT

General Buller Again on the South Side of Tugela.

SPION KOP TO HAIRD TO HOLD.

According to the Buller Account It Was a Second Majuba Hill—Boers Claim to Have Captured 150 Prisoners—The Withdrawing Army Commanded by Buller Accomplished Without the Loss of a Man—Ladysmith to Be Abandoned.

London, Jan. 29.—The war office despatches report that Ladysmith has surrendered and announces that a very heavy list of casualties will be soon issued.

London, Jan. 29.—The Evening World says: "It is learned from a reliable source that Field Marshal Lord Roberts has advised the abandonment of Ladysmith. At the war office no confirmation could be obtained of the advice said to have been given by Lord Roberts."

London, Jan. 29.—The terrible secret which the war office has been guarding like a skeleton in a dark closet since Friday has been revealed. It was a retreat of Buller's army across the Tugela without another blow for the defense of Ladysmith. The British force was ordered to retreat to the north of the Tugela, culminating in a desperate conflict on Spion Kop, a high hill, of the mountain which commanded the Boer position. British valor sufficed to carry this mountain's top by storm, but it could not withstand the fury of the Boer's counter attack. All day Wednesday, of last week, the battle raged furiously along the mountain's crest, resulting in a complete defeat of the British, who the Boers allege left 1500 dead on the field of battle. At any event Buller's entire army has been hurled back over the Tugela river, and the fate of Ladysmith is probably sealed.

Secretary Gage's relations with the Standard Oil Bank of New York City are very compromising. Congressman Sulzer, in a recent speech in the house, called Gage's conduct infamous; and Mr. Richardson, leader of the minority in the house, said that it had become the secretary of the treasury to go into partnership with a private corporation.

In a recent decision of the supreme court the inheritance of this state is held to be constitutional. In an action brought by a teacher who was hired to teach a thirty-two weeks term of school and was discharged before the close of the term for alleged reason that the teacher did not maintain proper discipline, and employed improper methods of punishment. The supreme court of the state has in a decision recently rendered, held that notwithstanding the teacher was offered another grade of the same school at the same wages, which she refused, she was entitled to recover. In the decision the court says: "When a contract is wrongfully discharged he is not bound to accept a new one from the same master unless it is in such manner as not to amount to a modification of the original agreement."

The soldiers of the United States are still shooting little brown men in the island of Luzon, for no greater offense than their desire for liberty and the privileges of self government. The daily accounts telegraphed by Gen. Otis are abhorrent, for they savor more of murder than of war. Some reasonable offer for a settlement should be made to the inhabitants of the Philippines. In view of all their past, it is unreasonable to ask unconditional surrender as a preliminary to future negotiations. Nations no more than individuals are to be conquered by the sword. A day of retribution will surely come. As every straggler on the back of the black slaves had to be washed out with white men's blood, so every lion waltzingly sacrificed by this country in Luzon will call for stone-meat. May the bloody work soon end.

Fair Berata. "Every man should learn to say 'no,'" she said, for she was a strong minded young woman and had well defined views on the temperance question. "Many a young man has been ruined because of his inability to say 'no.'"

"And every woman," he returned, "should learn to say 'yes.'" Many a young man of excellent promise has been brought to that condition of mind where he is disinclined to say 'no' owing to the disinclination of some girl to say 'yes.' Let us, therefore, endeavor to correct our own faults. Before asking us to say 'no' you should learn to say 'yes.'"

After a few minutes given to the consideration of the question she confessed her ability to say 'yes.' It is just as well to have one of these young men who is smart enough to make such fallacious arguments sound plausible.—Chicago Post.

Some English Grams. When I lived at Newport, R. I. from 1874 to 1878, says Colonel T. W. Higginson, in the Atlantic, there was a constant procession of foreign visitors of varying interest and often quite wanting in it. I remember one eminent literary man who, in spite of all cautions to the contrary, appeared at a dinner party of my friends. He was a young man of excellent promise, but what would now be called a golf nut of the lowest possible plaid, like that of the Scotch cousin in Punch who comes down thus dressed for church to the terror of his general cousin. In this case the visitor also wore a sprig of grass, but he was not a young man who is smart enough to make such fallacious arguments sound plausible.—Chicago Post.

Seven Story Building Destroyed at a Loss of $500,000. New York, Jan. 29.—The seven-story building in Cherry street, occupied by the Heywood Bros. & Wakefield Manufacturing company as a chair factory, was destroyed by fire during the prevalence of a fierce gale, which made the work of the firemen extremely difficult. When the fire broke out there were about 150 men at work in the building, who, however, were able to escape without injury. The burning of a tank on the roof of the building, which projected 10,000 gallons of water upon the fire raging beneath it, generated so much steam that the walls burst out. Part of the building was destroyed by the falling of the roof. The loss on the building and its contents is estimated at $500,000. The cause of the fire is being investigated by the fire department.

Fourth Cavalry Gets Orders. London, Jan. 27.—Probably as an immediate effect of the receipt of the news of the abandonment of Spion Kop by the British force under General Buller, the fourth cavalry regiment has been ordered to proceed to the Tugela.

War Office Receives List of Casualties. War Office, Jan. 24, consisting of Eighteen Killed, 124 Wounded, and Thirty-One Missing—General Woodgate Dies from the Effects of His Wounds Received at Spion Kop. Lorenzo Marques, Jan. 29.—It is reported on good Transvaal authority that the making was relieved Tuesday, Jan. 23.

Berlin, Jan. 29.—Some of the papers here claim to have a telegram from Pretoria saying that General Buller's resolution was due to the fact that they had strong convictions as to the result of the proposed expedition. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 208 to 50, or a majority of 158. The fact that the resolution was adopted by a vote of 208 to 50, or a majority of 158, is a fact that is not to be denied. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 208 to 50, or a majority of 158.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—It is expected that the Iowa State Board of Control will be organized on Wednesday next. The board will be composed of seven members, and will have charge of the management of the state's public property.

BLUE SUNDAY IN BALTIMORE.

Old Puritan Laws Rigidly Enforced in the Oyster City.

Baltimore, Jan. 29.—The Sunday blue laws of Maryland, which in various forms have been upon the statute books of the state for two centuries, were rigidly and relentlessly enforced in this city. Newsdealers, milkmen, ice cream vendors, and other peddlers of goods, were all fined for violating the law. All other merchants who were found selling their wares between midnight and midnight were also fined. A heavy fine was levied upon a man who was found selling his wares on a Sunday. The law is being strictly enforced, and it is expected that it will become so rigid that it will be repealed.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Bishop Quigley has suspended Rev. George Zuercher, pastor of St. Joseph's church, because of statements made by him from the pulpit that certain priests exacted money offerings for masses on All Souls' day and misled their people. The bishop has asked the Rev. Zuercher to retract the statements and on receiving an answer calculated to increase the bishop's indignation, he has ordered the priest to be suspended. The bishop has also ordered the priest to be suspended from his parish work.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By an overwhelming vote of 150 to 10 the house refused to let Brigham H. Jordan take the oath of office, excluded him from congress, and declared his seat vacant. The scene attending the refusal of the house to let Jordan take the oath of office, and his subsequent exclusion from congress, and the declaration of his seat vacant, was a dramatic and exciting one. Jordan, who had been elected to congress, was excluded from the house, and his seat was declared vacant. This was a significant event in the history of the house of representatives.

STATE NEWS NOTES.

MATTERS OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO IOWA PEOPLE.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 10.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26.—A committee substituted for the Finch bill to reduce the rate of interest on the permanent school fund was recommissioned by the senate. The bill was passed