Iowa's Good Name Misused. The name of "Iowa" on a sack of cornmeal, a bag of flour, a barrel of pork, a package of butter, or any other commodity of common use ought to be a guarantee of the best quality. And usually this is the fact. It is acknowledged in trade circles and goods branded "Iowa" are sure sellers. Iowa butter is the best made, and because of excellent standing it is counterfeited, the consumer imposed upon, the producer unjustly blamed. Iowa butter is a standard article in Colorado, and for this reason the makers of oleomargarine steal the name and use it for purposes of deception. The Denver Republican says prosecutions will be begun against a number of persons who have been selling in that city an uncertain product designated as "Iowa butter." After patient investigation the Colorado dairy commissioner who is a woman, Mrs. Mary Wright has found that most of this product is really oleomargarine. She has had samples analyzed and her suspicions thereby confirmed. It so happens that both the government and state laws are violated by the manufacturer of this spurious stuff which is being sold not only in Denver but in the other cities and towns of Colorado. It is bad enough to sell this factory stuff, colored and doctored as it is, for genuine butter; but a bad matter is made worse by using the name of our fair state for fraudulent purposes. All good citizens of this state are interested in protecting the name "Iowa," but here is a case where they are helpless to punish the offenders.—Davenport Democrat.

Some Money Kings.

The New York Commercial has discovered a new "Four Hundred." It is the 400 individuals in the United States who are directors in ten or more corporations, representing a wealth that is in the aggregate "appalling." John D. Rockefeller heads the list in total wealth, but is not admitted to it because he is a director in only four companies. His son, who talks to Sunday schools about the value of sympathy, is director in but six. The Rockefeller name is not omitted from this honor roll of wealth, for William Rockefeller, John D.'s brother, is director in 29 corporations, representing very largely John D.'s interests. The banks that the Rockefellers are interested in represent resources of $500,000,000, and the records of other corporations that they are connected with exceed $2,000,000,000. Next to the Rockefellers themselves come the men who are the business associates of the Rockefellers. Daniel O'Day is director in 24 companies; H. H. Rodgers in 25; James Stillman, president of the Standard Oil bank, in 52. The Rockefeller contingent is interested in 125 corporations, among them the largest in the world, the United States Steel corporation, the Standard Oil company, the Amalgamated Copper company, the Consolidated and the Brooklyn Union Gas companies, the St. Paul Railroad and the banks and trust companies. These represent resources of nearly $3,000,000,000. J. Pierpont Morgan is director in 33 corporations, the largest being the United States Steel corporation, the General Electric company, First National bank of New York, the New Haven and the Erie railroads, the National bank of Commerce, the Pullman company, and the Western Union. His partners represent his interests in hundreds of other concerns. Charles Steele is director in 35 corporations, Robert Bacon and Geo. W. Perkins in many more. Chauncey M. Depew, representing the Vanderbilt interests, is a director of more large corporations than any other man alive. He has 69 to his credit, and spends a great part of his time, when not in the United States senate, attending monthly meetings. Among other well known financiers, the Commercial lists E. H. Harriman, who started business life as a clerk in an obscure office of a railroad in the West, as a director of 47 corporations; William N. Baldwin, president of the Long Island railroad, is a director of 41 corporations; Charles T. Barney, president of the Knickerbocker Trust company, is concerned in 35 corporations, composed principally of banks and trust companies; E. J. Berwind, who has made millions in the Pennsylvania coal fields, is a director in 25; George F. Baker, president of the First National bank, and reputed to be worth more than $50,000,000, is in 39; August Belmont counts in 38. The Gould family figures conspicuously in the new 400. George Gould, in spite of his great interests, is a director in but 14 concerns, but Edward is director in 32. Frank Jay is in 49, and Howard in 18. Helen Gould does not appear in the list, but is undoubtedly represented by her brothers. H. O. Havemeyer of the sugar trust is in 12; James J. Hill, of the famous merger in 12; E. E. Huntington in 38, Samuel Sloan in 31, W. K. Vanderbilt in 56. Russell Sage is a director in 24 corporations, the monthly meeting of all of which he attends regularly. As 85 is paid each director for every meeting he attends, Mr. Sage's income from this source is in the neighborhood of $1,500 a year. The Commercial gives the list of 400 in full, but does not locate the great majority, and it is impossible to tell from it how extensively the West is represented in it. No name familiar in Iowa is included. Neither does the Commercial guess as to the wealth that is represented by the corporations that the 400 control. It is proposed now to publish the names of the 400, so far as the billions of dollars that they would seem to absorb a large part of the valuable assets of the earth. John D. Rockefeller alone is now estimated to be worth a billion.—Des Moines Register.

Once And Forever. By James Buchanan. You, though they pass to the silent Unknown, Once and forever our own are our own. Once and forever—'tis a solemn divine. The soul I have loved is eternally mine. Out to the borderland following faint, In the spirit that started it—ah, see! Far from thy fingers that brightness has flown In Wake the heart's soul, that's mine. Once and forever our own are our own! Death, pallid Death, we will yield thee the clay, But never the spirit that started it—ah, see! Far from thy fingers that brightness has flown In Wake the heart's soul, that's mine. Once and forever our own are our own! Footsteps of Angels. When the hours of day are numbered And the voices of the night Wake the heart's soul, that's mine. To a holy, calm delight. Ere the evening lamps are lighted, And like phantoms grim and tall, Shaded the vacant parlor wall, Dance upon the parlor wall. Thus the forms of the departed Enter at the open door. The beloved, the true hearted, Come to visit me once more. He, the young and strong, who cherished Sad memories for the departed, By the roadside fell and perished. Weary with the world's strife, Spoke with us in his last words. They, the holy ones and weakly, Folded their pale hands so meekly, Spoke with us in their last words. And with them the being beautiful Who unto my youth was given, Like the stars, so still and saintly, Looking downward from the skies. Uttered not, but comprehended, In the spirit's volitional prayer, Soft rebukes, in blessings ended, Breathing from her lips of air. Oh, though of depressed and lonely, If I but remember only such as these have lived and died!—Longfellow.

Strength of Animal Scents.

The bird dog man is likely to think his favorite has a better nose than any animal on earth. He can tell you any amount of stories about birds being scented at very long distances. Now it is a story of chickens wined at 300 yards, or again, a heavy of quail drawn straight to it at seventy-five. There are other animals, however, which have wonderfully keen noses. For instance, the sea otter hunters do not dare build a fire for days at a time on the little islands of the Pacific ocean frequented by those animals because they can smell the fumes from the smallest blaze a distance of five miles out at sea. It is said of this animal that he can trail a fish under the sea. Moose have been known to wind a man at two miles, and his mind so positively about him as to never quit running under twenty-five. A Curious God. Among the most extraordinary pieces of symbolism known to mankind is that by the early Egyptians a figure of a donkey's head used as a representative of the Deity. There is no doubt whatever that the same emblem was once used among the Hittites, the Egyptians, and two other nations as a symbol of their real god, Sun. The superstition of the yellow donkey, in the story of the swarms of locusts that came upon the land of Egypt, and the use of donkeys and many other marvelous tales are all survivals of that curious form of religious worship, the adoration of the ass' head. Where Ignorance is Bliss. Miss Inez Sentez—It's true I'm engaged to Mr. Rounders. The other night he told me I was the only girl he ever loved, and— Miss Truster—Where's the ring? Didn't he give you one? Miss Inez Sentez—Oh, yes, the very next day, but I sent it back to the jeweler to be fixed. The stupid engraver made the inscription "Jack to Gwendolyn" instead of "Inez"—Philadelphia Press. A Busy Day. Hallit—What's the matter, Klay? You look all tired out. Klay—And no wonder. I've had a hard day of it. I don't know when I've worked so hard. I looked at the men clean up the railroad station this morning, and after that I saw three safes raised into four story windows and four loads of coal delivered in baskets.—Boston Transcript. Her Anatomical Experience. Teacher of class in anatomy—How many bones are there in a chicken? MILLIE (youngest member of large family)—I can tell you how many there are in the neck. That's the only part I ever get.—Chicago Tribune. Near Tiverton, Devonshire, England, there is to be seen a blackbird with a white head and a speckled back. Quite Unlike. "Why, George, what an enormous pile of letters!" exclaimed the bride of a week. "Billetts doux, I suppose." "No, my dear," replied the other half of the sketch. "They are billes over-thee."—Chicago News.

Farmers! Your Attention for a Moment. The St. Louis Exposition. The managers of the St. Louis fair, says Wallace Farmer, are determined that the exhibition next year shall surpass anything that has ever been made before in any country, particularly in agricultural lines. It is proposed now to put up thirty-nine stock barns with 2,400 open stalls and 400 box stalls on a very desirable site. The live stock display will probably extend from August 22d to November 5th. The barns will be given over to horses and mules from August 22d to September 3d; to cattle from September 12th to September 24th; to sheep, goats, and hogs from October 3d to October 15th, and to poultry, pigeons, chickens and pet stock from October 23d to November 5th. The cows participating in the dairy test are likely to begin to occupy their barns December 1st, this year, and continue their use until November 1st, 1904. Silage will be provided and ample facilities for feed of every kind and water. There will no doubt be the finest display of mule stock, jacks and jennets, that has ever been seen in the world. There will be large mules, small mules,
