We have no patience with Senators or congressmen who allow their partisanship to injure their country's interests. When the republicans in Congress assisted Grover Cleveland in thwarting the will of the party that elected him, they knew that their action would increase the horrors of a financial panic.

The Irrepressible Issue.

The attack of Gov. Cummins of Iowa upon the "stand-pat" tariff policy of Hanna and Roosevelt is a significant sign of the times. It goes to prove the irrepressible nature of the opposition to a law which "shelters monopoly."

An old motto of pirates and plunderers of high and low degree. With duties above the highest tariff and which give them license to charge extortionate prices to home consumers while competing with foreign manufacturers at lower prices in their own markets, the chief beneficiaries of the Dingley law have every reason for "standing pat."

But Gov. Cummins declares in his message that "standing pat" is standing still, and that the effect of this policy is to increase prices at home and contract markets abroad. He favors reciprocity with Canada, and maintains that the farmers of Iowa and other great producing States have nothing to fear from the dribbling inflow of Canadian farm products. He goes further and says:

"We can make treaties with Central and South America, with France, Germany, Spain, Italy, that will immensely increase our exports of manufactures to those countries, so that for every man deprived of employment here we can put to work ten. You ought to have a chance to feed these nine men, and why is it not given you? Simply because the tariff which seems to prohibit the profane foot from planting itself within the sacred precincts of the tariff schedules."

The Governor winds up his protest against "stand-pat" high-protectionism by saying that "all the time has come to raise high into the political heavens the flag of reciprocity." This is good sense and good patriotism. But Gov. Cummins will never attend a flag raising of this sort until the "old-fashioned Democracy" is restored to power.—New York World.
