Were James G. Blaine alive he would have to use a magnifying glass to see in the republican platform any trace of the reciprocity that his party once declared for with a great flourish of trumpets.

One reason why men like to go to the popular resorts for summer is that dozens of them may be photographed with the same enormous fish—and a wooden fish looks just as well in a photograph.—Cedar Rapids Gazette.

People who think this weather is bad should go to the Philippines. The government has published a chart showing that over a large range of island territory the annual rainfall exceeds 120 inches. The tops of the mountains are kept fairly dry by the use of large tile.—Cedar Rapids Gazette.

The Philippines are a part of the United States for the purpose of excluding foreign vessels and preventing trade between the people of the islands and other countries. But when the Filipinos send their products to our ports their country is treated as a foreign nation and tariff rates are exacted. Such treatment of a conquered people would disgrace the worst empire or kingdom of the old world, and it certainly misrepresents the wishes and desires of this enlightened and justice loving country.

Simon Glazer, a Des Moines rabbi, has written a history of the Jews in Iowa. He estimates their number at a little more than 20,000 and their aggregate wealth at $4,275,000. About one-half of this wealth is held by the Jews of Des Moines and Davenport. There are practically no Jews in the state who are objects of charity. About 65 per cent are of foreign birth chiefly from Germany and Russia. In sixty-four of the ninety-nine counties of the state there is no record of a Jew ever having been criminally prosecuted. There are no Jew prohibitionists, and neither do Jews ever die of alcoholism in Iowa. Mr. Glazer predicts that within the next twenty five years that there will be more Jewish farmers in Iowa than there are now small merchants in the crowded street.—Ex.

"On the train on which I went to Yankton to register for the Rosebush land," said Guy Brewer of the office of the secretary of state, yesterday, "were people from every section of the country. It is marvelous the distance they are coming for the chance of being one of the first 500, for they are the ones who will get the land worth while.

"The interesting thing about the registration is the rush. What they rush for is a mystery to me. But they get off the train before it is fairly stopped, run foot races up town and make every effort to register first. It doesn't make the slightest difference when you register. The last man will have as good a chance to draw the first number or a good one, as any one else.

"A funny thing is the way the notaries work their business. The street leading to the land office is lined with booths or tents with notarial signs on them. And the notaries have their 'barkers' out in front calling to the incoming land seekers that 'here is the place to get sworn.' On occasions 'barkers' on one side will call across to the people on the other: 'Hey, there you are on the wrong side of the street; come over here to get your notary.'"

Judge Parker's Wife, Mother and Daughter. Harriet Stratton Parker, the judge's mother, who is 78 years of age and a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, spends part of her time at his home and the remainder at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Mary A. Miles, in Derby, Conn. The judge has a brother, Frederick H. Parker, who is in the insurance business in New York. His father died several years ago.

Mrs. Parker was Mary L. Schoonmaker, of Rochester, Ulster county, and was related to Augustus S. Schoonmaker in whose law office Judge Parker began his preparation for the bar. She is a descendant of Jochem Schoonmaker, head of the original colonial settlement of Holland Dutch at Kingston, of whom Marius, another member of the family, was historian. Mrs. Parker's favorite first cousin, Rensselaer Trapnash, who died several years ago, was the first husband of Mrs. Benjamin J. Otell, Jr., now the wife of the governor of New York.

Judge Parker was married in 1873 at Rochester. Their only son, John M. Parker died at the age of 7. Bertha, their only daughter, was married more than five years ago to Charles Mercer Hall, the young rector of the Episcopal church of the Holy Cross at Kingston, which the judge and his wife attend regularly, and of which he is a vestryman. There are two little children in the Hall family, Parker and Mary, with when their grandfather often spends a happy hour.

Mrs. Hall is tall. Her figure is slender, which makes her look even taller than she is. She walks well.

We've All Been There. He fished and wished, And wished and fished, But not a bite got he; He swore and swore, And tore and tore, At river, lake and sea.

When Father Shaves. When father shaves his stubble face, At five on Sunday morn'g, There always steals upon the place A feeling most serene.

He gets his razor from the shelf, And strokes it up and down, And mutters wildly to himself, And lives the central town.

He plasters lather every here, And spots the window pane, But mother says she doesn't care, She tries to please him all she can.

Someone has said: "Hungry humanity demands eggs and fowls for the table. Fine feathers are all right in their place, but they are not fit to eat. It is food that is wanted and exhibition fowls supply it. The market does not look to fanciers for eggs and table fowls, but to the farmers."

The bacon hog is gradually gaining in favor with the packers, and the man who can land a head of nicely finished Tamworth hogs on the market during the summer season is almost certain to get better prices than fat hogs would bring. It is well to bear this in mind, although changing from fat hogs to bacon types should not be done without due consideration of all the conditions surrounding the farm.—Farmers Tribune.

Pasturing the Highway. A Webster county, Iowa, subscriber writes: "Will you please let me know whether anyone has a right to herd his cattle on the public highway unless he owns the land on either side.

"The owner of the land along the road is entitled to the pasture or hay which grows on his side of the road, and the owner of the land on the other side of the road is entitled to the pasture or hay which grows on his side of the road. The right to use it as a highway. Section 2314 of the Code states that any stock prohibited from running at large, when trespassing on land or road adjoining thereto, may be restrained by the owner of the land and held for damages done by them. And states further that stock shall not be considered as running at large upon the public roads when they are there for travel or driving, under the care and control of the owner. We infer from our correspondent's letter that the cattle are not on the road for the purpose of passage but for pasturing. In this case we would think the owner of the cattle has no rights there whatever except by the consent of the owners of the land on either side.—Wallace's Farmer.

Milk Fever. The United States Department of Agriculture has recently issued Circular No. 46 of the Bureau of Animal Industry, entitled, Milk Fever: Its Simple Successful Treatment. It gives a complete description of the astonishingly successful results obtained in the treatment of this heretofore extremely fatal malady by the injection of filtered atmospheric air into the udder. Milk fever affects well-nourished, heavy-milking cows in all the large dairy districts of this country, and is characterized by the complete paralysis of the animal after calving. As it attacks the best milking cows in the herd and at a time when the milk flow is the heaviest, the disease is one which has caused very severe losses in our dairy industry. It is, therefore, of the greatest importance that every milk producer acquaint himself with the present extremely successful treatment and should provide himself with a suitable apparatus for injecting sterile air through each teat until the udder is well distended. The air treatment is by far the most simple and practicable, as well as the most efficacious and harmless one ever used, and has reduced the fatality from this disease to almost nothing. It is easy of manipulation, requires but little time, and is readily accomplished by means of the apparatus suggested by the bureau. Up to within recent times most stringent measures were resorted to by every careful dairyman to prevent the disease in his herd. However, since the air treatment has so greatly reduced the mortality, prevention is no longer such an important problem and therefore preventive measures, such as starving, blood letting, etc., which have a severe and lasting effect upon animals, should be abandoned. The most recent preventive treatment suggested is in line with the favorable results obtained by the injection of air into the udder. It consists in allowing the susceptible cow to retain in the udder for twenty-four hours following calving all the milk, except the small quantity required by the calf. The distention of the udder naturally follows as in the air treatment and acts as a preventive against milk fever.—Farmers Tribune.

THE PRICE OF A SOUL.

Some folks if they tried to sell might be surprised. Three times the mystic words were spoken, three times a trembling finger traced cabalistic signs in the air. A brief pause, then a blinding flash, and the evil one appeared.

"The man started back in terror from the frightful apparition, but it was too late now to withdraw.

"What would you?" said the evil one. "Are you a Christian?"

"The devil? Yes, of course! Do I have to be identified? What do you want of me?"

"I thought maybe—that is—do you buy—I want to sell my soul."

"Your what?" "Your soul, eh? H'm! How much do you want for it?"

"I hadn't thought of any particular sum. Your usual price would be quite satisfactory, I think."

"And what is your idea of my usual price?" "Why, unlimited wealth and power for term of years, say forty or fifty, you to have my soul at the end of that time."

"Very reasonable, I'm sure. I am very much inclined to accept your terms. By the way, are you sure you can deliver the goods?"

"I don't understand."

"Are you quite sure you have a soul?" "Why, yes; I suppose so. All people have souls, haven't they?"

"Admitting for the sake of argument that there is a soul in your carcass, are you sure it is yours?"

"That's a strange question. Whose else could it be?" "Mine, for example."

"Yours?" "Yes, mine. As a matter of fact, it is mine and has been for a long time. Do you happen to remember a little business transaction of ten years ago whereby you robbed your brother's widow of her fortune?"

"Of course. Most successful robberies are. But you remember it, I see. By that transaction you sold your soul to me. The price was the widow's fortune."

"But there was no bargain. I had no dealing with you. I didn't know I was selling my soul."

"Of course not. Neither did the widow know she was signing away her property. But it was legal—perfectly legal."

"But I didn't even get the property. That scoundrel of a lawyer stole it from me."

"Yes; I know. I got his soul also and for the same price."

"Then you are a swindler."

"You fail to do me justice. I am the prince of swindlers, and you are one of them. Let me tell you a story. I let that lawyer beat you I knew you were merely an ordinary cheap swindler after all. In fact, I'm rather sorry I bought your soul. If it wasn't for the principle of the thing I'd give it back. However, I hope I shall not have to call for it for some time yet, so don't worry. Good day!"—Isaac Anderson in Puck.

Men Who Tipple. I am sure you must often congratulate yourself, as I do myself, that you are not like men who seem to suffer from perpetual thirst and cannot even sit through a three act play without going out for a drink. I was reading a man's novel the other day, and in every few pages there was something about drinks. I wonder how many times a day an average man of fashion has a drink. To judge from the book in question, at least twice between breakfast and luncheon, two or three times between luncheon and dinner and after dinner up to somewhere in the small hours at very short intervals. He bought your soul. If it wasn't for the principle of the thing I'd give it back. However, I hope I shall not have to call for it for some time yet, so don't worry. Good day!"—Isaac Anderson in Puck.

A Clever Lawyer's Advice. Edwin James was one of the most brilliant English lawyers of his day, but he was always in financial difficulties. At one time he lived in some west end chambers the landlord of which could never obtain rent. At last he had recourse to an expedient which he hoped would rouse his tenant to a sense of his obligations. He asked him if he would be kind enough to advise him on a little legal matter in which he was concerned and on James acquiescing drew up a statement specifying his own grievance against the learned counsel and asked him to state what he considered the best course for a landlord to take under such conditions.

The paper was returned to the landlord the next morning, with the following sentence subjoined: "In my opinion, this is a case which admits of only one remedy—patience."

"Personalia."

When the Danes Pillaged. In former times the Danes used to sail up the mouths of the English rivers to pillage the churches. When they were caught they were skinned and their skins nailed to the door of the church they attacked. In course of time all the exposed portion would peel off, but that covered by the nail would be protected and thus bear testimony to the cruelty of the ancient Englishmen. In the London College of Surgeons may be seen three specimens of human skin bearing labels such as this: "Portion of human skin said to be that of a Dane from the door of a church at Hadstock, in Essex." A second specimen is from Copford, in Essex, and a third from the north door of Worcester cathedral. Such fragments of sacrilegious Danish hide have been found on doors in Westminster abbey.

His Royal Diapir. The Siamese prince, who in the early nineties was a member of what was, then at any rate, the most cosmopolitan college in Oxford, found it very difficult to reconcile his autocratic notions with the practice of undergraduates. Being asked by the captain of the boats to go down and do a little "tubbing," he drew himself up to his full five feet and replied, "When I go on the river at Bangkok I have eighty slaves to row me."

THE BEST

single bargain I know of in the entire Delta is 640 acres 4 miles from a town of 3,000. 300 acres in cultivation and renting for $6 and $7 per acre. 100 more dead-land and ready to put in next year. Price $25 per acre.

ALSO 220 acres 2 miles from same town nearly 1/2 in cultivation at same price.

AN UPLAND TRACT 252 acres 2 miles from a town of 2,000, 150 in level open land in crops and pasture carrying a good herd of cattle. 100 in good level timber, price $11 per acre. I have made a double tour of both upland and Delta and I know that these offerings will not last long. Call and see me promptly or leave word at Connell Bros. Store.

DEVILED PASTE! Highly Seasoned Dishes are Called "Deviled" Food. These dishes are very popular for Late Suppers, Luncheons and in club life. They can be made at home very economically and just as conveniently as at the Club, and may be broiled or cooked in a hot oven or chafin dish. The general recipe to follow is prepared thus: Put into a soup plate two spoonfuls of Yacht Club Salad Dressing, half a teaspoonful of mustard, half a scant teaspoonful of curry powder and half a teaspoonful of Lira & Perria's Worcestershire table sauce. Mix these ingredients well together and the preparation is ready for use. This quantity of paste is sufficient for the following recipe.

DEVILED KIDNEYS! Allow your mutton or lamb kidneys to stand covered in cold water containing half a teaspoonful of soda, half an hour. This treatment removes any strong odor or taste they might possess. Drain and dry them thoroughly, split each kidney lengthwise, remove the thin skin, and make moderately deep incisions lengthwise into both sides; into these cuts put as much of the prepared paste as possible, and they are ready to be cooked. If they are to be cooked in the oven, fry in pan or chafin dish, first put in a little butter when the butter is quite hot add the kidney. Do not cook them too much, as that will make them tough. Cut out recipe for paste, you can use it for many other dishes.
