Local and Neighborhood News

An October Bride.

A quiet wedding, was celebrated at the Congregational parsonage in Manchester Wednesday at 2 o'clock p. m. which united the lives of Mr. John Albert Kapke and Miss Mary J. Trumble both of Lamont, Rev. Lind, the pastor, performing the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride party returned and a sumptuous wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Trumble, the relatives and immediate friends of the bride and groom being present.

Dan Cupid has pierced another heart with his tiny arrow and two hearts now beat as one. They enter the new relations with prospects bright for a home of happiness and contentment and may their fondest hopes be realized.

The bride who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Trumble has statements suited to preside over the new home. Albert Kapke is possessed of many qualities and is one of our industrious young men. The Leader extends congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Kapke begin housekeeping in their home recently purchased in the west part of town.—Lamont Leader.

Game Wardens Make Haul

State Game Wardens A. M. Greene of Sioux City, Harry Barmer of Dubuque and H. H. Yordy also of Dubuque, who it will be remembered, figured in the capture of a large number of Italians for violation of the game laws at Oneida recently, made a great haul of illegal fishermen and their paraphernalia at Wapello last week. They arrested five parties and seized a large number of seines and nets, including thirty-eight hoop nets, two trammel nets 600 feet long, two seines 900 feet long, and one seine 1,000 feet long. The fishermen pleaded guilty to counts ranging in number from one to twenty-one, and all had to pay fines. The state officials intend to see to it that the fish and game laws are not disregarded, and offenders are given their just deserts when caught.

Compliments to a Death.

There is a German proverb which says, "Man darf nur sterben um gelobt zu werden" (We need only die in order to be praised). This, we cannot help but admit, is fairly true in a general sense, and if we required any proof or confirmation of the epithets in cemeteries, churchyards and churches would readily furnish it. Indeed if we had no other testimony to go by than these placid inscriptions we might almost fancy that men and women had arrived at such a state of perfection that they were little less than angels.

Children Like It

DoWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve penetrates the pores—thoroughly cleanses—and is healing and soothing. Good for piles. Sold by all druggists.

The Three-a-Week World expects to be a better paper in 1907 than ever before. In the course of the year the issues for the next great Presidential campaign will be foreshadowed, and every-day will wish to keep informed.

The Nurse's Story

"Why do so many people insist on having nurses for their children?" asked the motherly woman.

The Marble Bible

In 1857 Mindon-min, king of Burma, erected a monument near Mandalay called the Kothu-daw. There he built 700 temples in each of which there is a slab of white marble.

Very Likely

"You're a queer looking thing to want to fight with me," said the young bulldog contemptuously. "You're not in my class."

Her Note Was Final

The proprietor of a large drug store recently received this curt and haughty note written in an angular feminine hand: "I do not want vasoline, but glycerine. Is that plain enough? I person you can spell."

Tennyson's Cynicism.

Sir Vere de Vere was the oldest son of Sir Aubrey de Vere, the somerset and friend of Wordsworth. His brother, Aubrey de Vere, was a more than well known, a famous poet, and to him in his youth Water Savage Landor addressed the exhortation: Make thy proud name still prouder for thy sons.

He had no sons, however, never having married. Neither had his brothers, Vere and Stephen. Thus the name, as a family name, disappears.

The De Veres were early friends of Tennyson's, and it was from them that the poet took the name which he made proverbial and symbolical of a class—"the caste of Vere de Vere."

Lady de Vere, the only Lady de Vere of fact, then living, was inclined to complain that her name should be bestowed upon the black hearted Lady Clara of fiction.

Tennyson wrote dainty verses, but was not master of dainty manners. He never married. "Should you care? But of course you don't," he would make your namesake ugly, and I didn't make your stupid. I only made her wicked."

They Needed the Medicine

Some years ago a railway was being made in the west of Scotland, and it was arranged that each of the numerous laborers employed should pay a penny per week to a medical practitioner, so that they might have his services in case of illness or accident.

During the summer and autumn neither illness nor accident occurred. But when a severe winter followed all at once the "navigators" began to call on the doctor for assistance.

Each brought his bottle, into which an ounce was poured, until the oil was exhausted, and the doctor was forced to send to town for a further supply.

When that, too, was getting low the doctor one day quietly asked a healthy looking fellow what was wrong with the men that they required so much castor oil.

"Nothing wrong at all, doctor," he replied, "but we grease our boots with it."—London Chronicle.

Applying the Test

"There was a barber in an Indiana city who, having been out late the night before, and a shiny hand the next morning and his patron's check four times," said the man who insisted he saw the incident. "After each accident the barber said as he sponged away the blood, 'Oh, dear me, how careless!' and laughed and let it go at that."

Another Reason

An English clergyman visiting in this country told of a jilting that had happened in his parish. He said that he had an appointment to marry a woman at 4 o'clock in the morning. He appeared duly, and the bride appeared, but not the bridegroom. The clergyman and the lady, silent and embarrassed, waited in the quiet church from 4 till 6. Then the bride departed. A week later the same couple wrote to the clergyman again, appointing another afternoon at 4 for the ceremony. And again the clergyman and the bride remained in the church until 6. Then the bride departed. As the two waited time passed slowly in the still and empty church. It grew darker. Five o'clock sounded, then 6. And then the bride knocked the silence with a fierce clanging.

Willis Is Barking

Edward Bulwer Lytton Dickens, the youngest son of the novelist, emigrated to Australia and died in Sydney at the age of fifty-one. He represented a constituency in the parliament of New South Wales for six years. Once when he was addressing the house in Sydney he was again and again snappishly interrupted by a member named Willis. At last Mr. Dickens stopped to remark, "Willis is barking."

Ground Flat

A young man from a country village when sightseeing in Edinburgh was greatly astonished on seeing "Mr. Smith, Tailor (ground flat)," inscribed on a door and after a careful study of the sign he exclaimed, "What a ground flat!"

Her Preference

Thud Chick told his mate he had been assured of the company of the angels in the dark room?—Yes, but mummy, couldn't you have the angels and leave me the candle?—Punch.

Rejected Advice

Blotches—Why don't you consult a doctor about your insomnia? Slob—What! And run more bills? Why, it's because of what I owe him now that I can't sleep!

Literary Exercises

Wife (scarcely)—Oh, I've no doubt you were at your literary club reciting poetry till this hour of the night. And pray, what were you reciting? Husband (reminiscently)—I think was something about "Chips" that "Wash in the Night."—Baltimore American.

His Cleverness

"Don't be so lazy. There's plenty of room at the top, and you're clever enough to get there."

An Exacting Trainer

She Was an "Easy Mark."

"Did you intend to give me this?" asked a steward on one of the steamers of a woman passenger who just tipped him. "This" was a bright new penny.

The woman, looking amazed and embarrassed, said: "No, I didn't give you that. I gave you a $2.50 gold piece, didn't I?"

"That's what I thought you meant to give me. I was sure you had made a mistake," said the man. The woman, with an apology, took the penny and gave him a gold piece. Then she went back to her stateroom to count her money and to try to understand.

It came to her all right. She remembered two years before on her homeward trip a fellow passenger had told her the steward had come to her with a new penny given him by mistake, the steward said, and she had made it good.

It was a little late then—she had been an "easy mark," and she knew it—and it wouldn't do a bit of good to object. She did tell the purser, who promised to investigate. She knew, too, what that meant.—New York Sun.

The Old Buffalo Days.

There is on record at the war department, Washington, a document bearing witness to how plentiful buffaloes were within the memory of many men now living. It is the "return" for several rounds of cannon ammunition expended in Kansas in 1867 to divert the course of a great herd of buffalo that was bearing down on a band of soldiers with a force that threatened to overwhelm it. At least one officer is alive who saw these abots fired, and he describes the herd as literally reaching as far as the eye could see. It was a long time in passing, and the soldiers who were watching it in silence, eyed the spectacle. General Philip St. George Cooke at once halted a regiment of cavalry on the plains to permit a great herd of antelope to pass, and he was not a man to let them escape. His humanity impelled him to withhold the regiment from mauling and maiming the antelope, which were allowed the right of way.—Boston Transcript.

Who Could Pass?

To test the spelling capabilities of fifty applicants for junior clerkships in the office of the Sydney water and sewerage board they were called in to write from dictation this paragraph: "This candidate was a licentiate in medicine and held other scholastic diplomas. His characteristics were: idiosyncrasies personified—one day taciturn, the next glibly chattering; when excited he evolves a supine distich in quaint satire of some literary genius; tomorrow an encomiastic effusion on an illiterate voluptuary. His studies on concrete science were exotic; his recollections of natural philosophy excellent, but not chimerical." No less than forty-three out of the fifty candidates came to grief in this artfully designed spelling obstacle race. At the next meeting of the board a member doubted whether ten out of fifty Oxford M. A.'s, if suddenly called upon to write out the same passage, would succeed in negotiating every one of the big words successfully.—London Chronicle.

A Queer Servant Chief.

To hatch a chicken by holding an egg for the allotted time in the left arm is believed in Serbia to be a certain charm against violent death. The man of the name of Anselmo, since Charles-Auguste I think there has not been such a grand figure in all Christendom. A large man, decorous in dress, dignified in deportment, he talked as if he felt himself a King. The coal heaves and porters of the hotel looked on him as one of the great forces of the globe. They recognized a native king. In the senate of the United States he looked an emperor in that country. Even the majestic Calhoun seemed common compared with him. Clay looked vulgar and Van Buren but a fox. What a mouth he had! It was a lion's mouth, yet there was a sweet grandeur in the smile and a woman's softness when he would. What a brow it was! What eyes—like charcoal fires in the bottom of a deep, dark well. His face was rugged with volcanic fires—great passions and great thoughts. The front of his forehead, an eye like Mars, to threaten and command.

Came Near It.

With humor are such elemental, fundamental things that it has always been found difficult to analyze them. Upon some points, however, those who have essayed this puzzling task agree, for they all hold that wit is a certain kind of humor, an emotional quality; that wit is a perception of the semblance and humor a perception of contrast, of discrepancy, of incongruity. The incongruity is that which arises between the ideal and the fact, between theory and practice, between promise and performance, and perhaps it might be added that it is always or almost always a moral incongruity. In the case both of wit and humor there is also a pleasurable surprise, a gentle shock which arouses our perception of the hitherto unsuspected resemblance of incongruity. A New England farmer was once describing in the presence of a very humane person a fine specimen of a pig, and he said: "You ought to have killed him." Interrupted the humane person indignantly. "Well," drawled the farmer, "we did—almost."—Atlantic.

A Strenuous Statesman.

In his "Eclipse and O'Kelly" Theodore Andrea Cook tells a story of the English statesman and sport fox. He had watched something about a waistcoat which could only be obtained in Paris; went off to Dover by night, caught the mail packet, posted to Paris and back to Calais, and remembered he had a horse racing at Newmarket. He chartered a flying boat bound for the eastern counties, just got to Newmarket in time for the race, took the post back to London and stopped on the way to dine. In the middle of the port and dice after dinner he was caught by a special messenger with a letter tearing over half of England in search of him and reminded that he had to move to bring in a marriage bill in the house of commons. He rushed to the stables, reached the house in time to make a will, and then he replied to North and Burke and defeated North on a division by a single vote.

The Bee's Feet.

Naturalists say that the feet of the common working bee exhibit the curious combination of a basket, a brush and a pair of pinchers. The brush, the hairs of which are arranged in symmetrical rows, is seen only with a high grade microscope. With this brush of fairy delicacy the bee brushes its velvet robe to remove the pollen dust which it becomes loaded while sucking up the nectar of flowers. Another appendage that receives the pollen is the hive. Finally, by opening the brush and the basket by means of a neat little hinge, the bee becomes a pair of pinchers, and renders important service in constructing the cells for the reception of the honey.

There is more Cattarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable.

For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven cattarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Cattarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

COMING YEAR FULL OF INTEREST.

Cured of Bright's Disease.

Mr. Robert O. Burke, Elkhorn, N. Y., writes: "Before I started to use Foley's Kidney Cure I had to get up from twelve to twenty times a night, and I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. I had given up hope of living, when a friend recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. One 50 cent bottle worked wonders and before I had taken the third bottle the dropsy had gone as well as all other symptoms of Bright's disease."—Anders & Philipp.

A Peripatetic Investment.

When the scallop is full grown it is able to swim with great rapidity by opening and closing the valves of its shell. This curious fact, says What to Eat, was unknown to an unfortunate Frenchman who undertook a few years ago to establish a scallop plantation in a quiet New England town. He deposited several thousand scallops in shallow water, expecting them to breed, but when he looked for them the next day all of them had fled.
