Coal Pile Savings Bank

Sounds rather queer, doesn't it? Many a householder burns up good money, winter after winter, that the Peck-Williamson Underfeed Furnace would save. Until the Underfeed came to revolutionize heating plants, nobody looked on coal piles as good hiding places for economy. The Underfeed not only entirely consumes all smoke and gases, but gets from cheapest grade coal as much heat as the most costly yields. That Saves 1-2 to 2-3 on Coal Bills!

Thousands who use the Underfeed are its most enthusiastic endorsers. Count the money annually saved. It soon pays for itself.

At Council Bluffs Governor Cummins served notice on the slumbering Jonathan P. Dolliver that he has a tight ahead for his seat in the senate. Cummins declared he would be in at least one more fight and that when Dolliver comes up for re-election, his attitude in the present fight and his complete subservience to corporations means that he will be opposed by a strong candidate. It has been understood that Secretary Shaw is in training to go after Dolliver's place at the first chance. Dolliver definitely promised when appointed to support Shaw, but broke his promise. It is also said that Attorney-General Byers is considered an available man to make the race against Dolliver. At any rate it is settled that Dolliver will have to fight. The Council Bluffs meeting was reported to be a great one in every respect.

There is approximately 1,623,518 names on the payroll of Uncle Sam in the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippines, Porto Rico, Cuba, Panama and various foreign countries. This does not include certain temporary employes, such as substitute letter carriers, clerks and others who work by the day for a few weeks or months, at intervals. The information is contributed by William E. Curtis. It would appear that the army of civil servants was large enough without augmenting it by the addition of government ownership of railroads and telegraph lines and other things that have a place in consideration in this connection. A statement of the significance of those statistics is well calculated to suggest a pause on the part of those who have been persuaded to think something might be accomplished by adding millions more of names to the list of those who draw support from our universal uncle. What would it mean if the vision of some should become reality?—Waterloo Reporter

Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria and king of Hungary is only six years older than "Uncle Joe" Cannon, speaker of the house, and one of the most powerful men in our government. Yet he is now receiving the personal congratulations of the heads of the imperial, royal and princely houses of Germany on the beginning of his diamond jubilee. In December it will be 60 years since he ascended the throne of the Hapsburgs. Sixty years! When the young ruler assumed the cares of state, James K. Polk was president of the United States. Francis Joseph has been the contemporary of Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, Lincoln, Johnson, Arthur, Garfield, Wilson, Grant, Hayes, McKinley and Cleveland. Harrison, McKimley and Roosevelt. They are all dead, save Cleveland and Roosevelt; yet the venerable monarch still reigns and rules. He has come through one revolution and three great wars; has seen the governments of Europe change from half autocratic to democratic, has witnessed the disappearance of empires in France, the resurrection of Germany and Italy, the dissolution of one dual monarchy in Scandinavia, and the threat to dissolve a greater—his own. Not "an old man eloquent," but an old man significant, is Francis Joseph, monarch of Austria-Hungary.—New York Mail.

Progress of Prohibition.
 "Eight million six hundred thousand people abolished the saloon last year, including four entire states. Seven prohibition states have a population of over 10,000,000, while 27,000,000 more live in other prohibition territory, making about 45 per cent of the total population of the United States free from the blighting influence of the saloon. Of 34 legislatures in session last year, 20 passed laws unfavorable to liquor traffic, while no legislature has been in session the present year that has not had one or more temperance bills before it. In recent years no legislation favorable to liquor traffic has been enacted."

Such was the language in which the progress of the temperance movement in the United States was reported to the general assembly of the Presbyterian churches today.

A Triple Coincidence.
 An almost incredible triple coincidence was noted in France some years ago. In 1894 the deputy for the Ardennes was M. Ferry; for Loire-et-Cher, M. Brisson; and for the Vosges, M. Hugo. In 1793, 101 years earlier, each district had been represented in the chamber by a man of exactly the same name.

Pleasant.
 Mistress (midnight)—I don't intend to come downstairs to let you in at this time of night again. New Girl (reassuringly)—You won't have to, ma'am. One of my friends took an impression of your lock, and he's making a nice key for me.—London Globe.

Fatal Error.
 "N. Peck's wife leads him a rather merry gait, I fancy."
 "Oh, yes. When he was courting her he told her one day she looked pretty when she was angry, and now it has got to be a habit."

He is useless that is faultless.—French Proverb.

Good Terms.
 "I'm sure we shall be on good terms," said the man who had just moved into the neighborhood to the corner grocer. "No doubt of it, sir, especially," he added as an afterthought, "as the terms are cash."—London Telegraph.

The Two Bells.
 Long years ago, so runs the ancient story, Two bells were sent from Spain to that far distance
 New-found beyond the sea, that to God's glory And in his house together they in glory.
 And to this day, one bell is safely swung Within its shrine of law, where clear and free Its halloos each day with its mellow ringing; The other bell, its mate, was lost at sea.
 And when I get a chime the bell is pealing, The people listen for they say they hear An echo, from the distant ocean sounding— It is the lost one's answer, faint, yet clear, Oh, how like those two bell's we stilled together, And you have reached your day's work and rest; But stormy was the way, and rude the weather, And I was lost beneath the waves' white crest
 Over my oaried heart the white waves' gister; Across my breast the seawaves wave a twine Dead is my soul's love—the sea when I listen An I hear your cry at the ocean's side
 Then the old longing wakes; I start; I shiver; I try to break the spell which laid me dumb; I turn I strive, with many a throes and quiver— I feebly answer, but I cannot answer.

The Good Green Country.
 Poor, blind, foolish creatures that we are, we seek through the whole world for remedies, and seek in vain, forgetting that God in his goodness has placed them right before us.

The city man, sick and tired of the noise and confusion, the dirt, the smoke, the unending bustle and rush and roar and rattle, yearns for a retreat and for a balm.

Here may he be waked fresh and bright, by the Bob White's whistle on the dewy dawn, to dream through days that are long-sung threads of gold linked by starry nights of silver.

Here may he drink, through every quickened sense, the cup that nature fills for us—a happy draught unmingled with pain.

Solitude, plain food, pure water, fresh air, clear sunshine and the good old earth, all roofed in by the sky—the best-sanitarium that ever was!

All the learned specialists, with all their intricate formulas, may fail to help you, and a brief clasp by mother nature, close to her heart, may make a new man of you.

All the medicinal baths, even at the farthest end of the earth, cannot equal a plunge at dawn into an ice-cold pool direct from a hillside spring.

All the dieticians cannot prescribe a more healthful breakfast than eggs and milk fresh from the farmyard.

All the physical directors cannot devise a better exercise than a brisk walk in the bright sunshine along a country road.

TOMORROW'S BIRTHPLACE.

Line in the Pacific Where It Shakes Hands With Yesterday.

Most people who have read Jules Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days" will remember how narrowly the traveler missed his bet, having forgotten that in following the sun from east to west he had gained one day.

When one crosses the Atlantic from London to New York he gains rather more than half an hour each day. From New York to Chicago another hour is gained, another to Denver, another to San Francisco, which is reckoning time eight hours later than London and of course the best part of a day later than Shanghai and Yokohama.

In mid-Pacific, going west, one skips from Sunday to Tuesday. Going east he has one day of the week repeated—two Sundays or Tuesdays, as the case may be.

The line of the changing day is not a straight one. The time in the Pacific takes their time from the continent with which they trade and from which they were discovered. Thus the line of the change zigzags down the Pacific from south to north, dodging between the islands.

Hence it might easily happen that a ship which has already skipped a day would reach an island which clings to San Francisco's time. In such a case it would be Monday on shore and Tuesday on the ship.

If the ship's jolly boat were lying at a wharf, it would be Monday on the wharf and Tuesday on the boat.

And if a person lives somewhere near the line he can get a sailboat and visit yesterday and tomorrow in the most delightful fashion.

Child Management.
 I don't like punishments. You will never torture a child into duty, but a sensible child will dread the frown of a judicious mother more than all the rods, dark rooms and scolding school-mistresses in the universe.—White.
