How Did It Happen.

The New York World says: "A tax on the hundreds of millions of annual income of the wealthy would go far toward relieving the burden of taxation now borne by people with small incomes or almost no incomes at all. There is no more just or equitable way of raising public revenue."

And the commoner commenting upon the World's admissions makes this point:
 "Yet the republican national convention defeated an income tax plank by a vote of 950 nays to 28 yeas. How does it happen that such a just method of raising public revenue found only twenty-eight supporters in an assemblage of 978 republican leaders?"

Policies the People Will Profit By When Bryan is Elected.

"Tariff revision by representatives of the consumers of the products and not by the agents of those who make exorbitant profits by manufacture and sale of highly protected products."
 "Election of United States senators by popular vote, thus breaking up the senatorial oligarchy headed by Standard oil, which is strong enough to successfully resist all measures offered in behalf of the public welfare."
 "Guarantee of all national bank deposits, thereby preventing all money panics by giving all people absolute confidence in all banks."
 "Destruction of private monopoly and the enforcement of law against trusts by the people who are oppressed by the trusts and not by the agents of the trusts."
 "Adoption of an income tax because it is just and under it wealth may bear its proportionate share of the burdens of the Federal government."
 "Publicity of campaign contribution before election day so that the people may know who is paying the expenses of candidates, and why paying."
 "The punishment of men who manipulate railroad stocks and ownership; the encouragement of railroad construction upon business-like basis; and railroad operation with fair returns in wages and profits to workers and owners on honest valuation and honest labor—but not on watered stocks and false bond issues created purely by exploitation."

Laying Cement Floors.

In laying a cement floor the thing of prime importance is the securing of a firm foundation. To this end excavate or fill in with dirt in the barn until the desired height has been obtained. A barn floor when finished should be at least eight inches higher than the surrounding ground outside. In addition to this, see to it that the floor is well drained. If necessary lay a tile under the center of the floor and connect with tiles leading away from the barn and barnyard. Ordinarily it will not be necessary to tile under the floor but it is always desirable to lay tile outside of the barn so as to keep the ground surrounding it dry.
 Whether the floor has to be excavated or filled in it should be thoroughly tramped so as to make it solid and the ground should be given the slope which the floor should have when finished. This done, add a layer two or three inches thick of brickbats, cobblestones, coarse cinders, or anything else of that nature available, pounding it down into the soil as thoroughly as possible. This will give a firm foundation for the concrete, which should have a thickness of about three inches for a cow stable or hoghouse, or about four inches for a horse stable.
 Concrete may be made from clean gravel and stone, or still better, from crushed stone alone if this is available. Mix six parts of gravel and stone, two parts of sand and one part of Portland cement for the concrete, being careful that the stone and sand used are clean, that is, free from dust. Where crushed stone is used it is a good plan, to wash it with water before mixing with the sand and cement, allowing it to dry, of course, before mixing. This washing is to remove all particles of fine dust. It is very important to remove the dust because it interferes with the proper cementing together of the concrete. Mix the stone, sand and cement dry, then add enough water to moisten the whole without making it sloppy and spread evenly over the floor to a depth of three inches, firming it thoroughly by pounding.
 The concrete should be laid in sections or blocks and not all at once. The blocks may be from four to five feet square. For floors behind the cows, or in feed alleys, the blocks may be made three feet square, should that size fit better. In case of cow stalls each stall may form a separate block or it may be divided into two blocks. If it is made in one block, it would be approximately four feet eight inches long by three feet wide. The reason for laying the concrete in blocks is to prevent cracking of the floor. In laying a floor use wooden frames made of

Most Blest Is He.

Most blest is he, who in the starting time, Sets forth upon his journey, with no staff Shaped by another's feeble use, who so is The imminent necessity for toll; And with each morning, wakes to the thought Of tasks that wait his doing, never yet Has unearned leisure, and the gift of gold, Bestowed such benefits upon the young, As need and justice; and when life adds The burden of a wife, difficult, And hard to carry, then rejoice, oh soul! And know thyself one chosen for high things, Behind the walls of the Heavens. Yet lead on— They only help the litter; and they give Sit unto these, who also freely give. Not till they will, thy courage, and thy strength Have done it is to rouse, and thy love have flowed In play and compassion out to all; (The worthless, the ungrateful, and the weak As well as to the worthy and the strong.) Cannot receive invisible support, The first try part, and all it before, Asking the Heavens to do aught for thee; For this alone the Universe exists; That man may find himself his destiny. —Ella Wheeler Wilcox in August Kantian.

Checking a Bundle.

The Way the Tired Man Saved Himself Labor Troubles.
 One day a man went into a very big store. He had a heavy package with him.
 Not in the sense you mean, smarties, but in the real sense.
 He had to go two blocks farther down the street and didn't want to carry the package. So he decided that he would leave it in the check room.
 He asked a floorwalker who looked like a United States senator, but who was a perfect gentleman, where the check room was. The floorwalker said: "The rear stairs lead down to the check room."
 He went there, wherever that was, and found the check room. He had made the mistake, for as nice a man as a floorwalker with a Prince Albert on couldn't have made a mistake.
 Finally after he had juggled his bundle thirty-two blocks hunting the check room, had found the check room and deposited his bundle he walked his two blocks to the other place and was through for the day.
 Then he soliloquized:
 "How often I wish I ever have got through or stood the wear and tear of that long two blocks carrying that bundle! If it hadn't been for the check room system, what could I have done?" —Chicago News.

TIPS IN ENGLAND.

Lord Russell's Fee to the Headman Who Executed Him.
 Mr. George Russell, discoursing on tips in the Manchester Guardian, after the manner of his "Collections and Recollections," treats the subject historically under its various names of fees, vales (or vells), honorarium (as Disraeli preferred to call it) and pouches.
 Ancient usage has a peculiarly concentrating effect in the matter of tips and fees. Horace Walpole records the astonishment of George I. when told that he must give guineas to the servant of the ranger of his park for bringing him a brace of carp out of his own pond.
 Apparently everybody in England is at some time or other justified in demanding a fee unless it be the monarch. When the archbishop of Canterbury and met the queen he breathed a sigh of relief on at last encountering a person to whom he had not to pay something.
 According to Bishop Burnet, a man used to have to tip in order to be decapitated. He tells the story of Lord Russell when under sentence of death for high treason asking what he ought to give the executioner. "I told him 10 guineas. He said, with a smile, it was a pretty thing to give a fee to have his head cut off."

FEED ON POND LILIES.

Moose Are Exceedingly Fond of These Pretty Flowers.
 At first thought it would appear impossible that such large, giant denizens of the forest as moose could be in any way be interested in flowers. They are, however, exceedingly fond of all kinds of water lilies. Few people know that these flowers grow from thick snake-like root stocks which are so firmly attached to the bottom that the strongest man cannot loosen them. It is from these firmly moored root stocks that the much admired leaves and flowers strive toward the light.
 A well known naturalist who studied the habits of the animals in northern Minnesota, where moose are more numerous than in any other part of the world, often found two or three big bulls engaged in gathering their morning meal on the lake bottom. The great beasts would slowly stalk about in three or four feet of water, and often their heads would be under water for half a minute at a time, so that their backs would look like bowlders just protruding from the stream; then a pair of magnificent antlers would come up, and the water would be shaken out of the big ears with a flapping noise that could be heard from a quarter of a mile, and then the big, long muzzle would be leisurely chewing a dripping mouthful of water lily leaves and other plants gathered from the bottom.
 So intent were the huge animals on gathering flowers that several times the naturalist could row up close enough to secure a good photograph before they splashed noisily back to the shore and disappeared in the black spruce. When the moose find a good lily pond they continue feeding in it until the plants are almost exterminated. —Minneapolis Journal.

A KING'S DREAM.

Belief in the Vision Might Have Changed History.
 On June 12, 1645, Charles I. slept at the little Inn in Naseby village. Scouts had brought news of the approach of the parliamentary army, and the king was resolved to give them battle.
 In the middle of the night the lords of the bedchamber, who slept in the outer room, were disturbed by an extraordinary noise in the king's room. Upon entering they found Charles sitting bolt upright in his bed and in a much excited state.
 On asking what the noise was, the king said he had heard no noise, but that their entry had roused him from an extraordinary dream. He said that Stuart had stood at the foot of his bed and implored him not to give battle, for if he did he would be so disastrously defeated as to threaten his crown and even his life.
 The next morning Charles told Prince Rupert and his generals his dream, but declared that he would fight. They in vain tried to dissuade him. In the evening news arrived that the enemy were close at hand. That night Charles again dreamed the same dream. Stuart warned him that it was the last time he would try to help him.
 The next morning the king led his army out and by sunset he had lost cannon, baggage and four-fifths of his troops and, as events proved, the war as well.
 Stafford's ghost was right. Had Charles not met Cromwell at Naseby it is quite likely he would not have met his death at Whitehall. —Pearson's Weekly.

Breaking in New Men.

One Corporation Publishes a Text Book For New Employees.
 A large corporation has lately shown its appreciation of the value of giving new employees a thorough general knowledge of the business by publishing a book describing in an interesting fashion all the details of the company's work.
 It is a volume of over 200 pages, illustrated with facsimile cuts of various reports and other forms used. A copy is furnished every employee, and he is expected to master not merely the portions pertaining to his own work, but the entire book.
 It is held at frequent intervals throughout the organization, and dismissal is the penalty for ignorance of any subject treated in the volume.
 "It costs us about $2,000 to publish this book," says the president of the company, "but we consider it money well invested, and we are planning to issue a new and up to date edition every year."
 "When a man enters our employ he is told to read this manual and do nothing else until he has thoroughly mastered it. This gives him a general knowledge of the business, and if there are any points he does not understand they are cleared up before he begins work." —System.

AN ANECDOTE OF KEAN.

How One Actress Won and Another Lost His Good Opinion.
 Kean possessed an inordinate love of praise even from his humblest worshippers, says the London Tatler. During his brilliant management of the Princess theater one of the ballet girls who sometimes was given a few lines to speak and who knew her manager's falling usage to haunt the wings and go into visible raptures over the tragedian's acting.
 He was playing with great success a pathetic part, and tears flowed down the cheeks of the cunning girl, who eventually attracted personal notice from the actor. Soon she found herself promoted to a superior position.
 Her advancement of course was noticed by her companions, and to her greatest friend among them she told her secret, advising the girl to follow her example.
 Nothing loath, No. 2 appeared at the wings and almost howled with grief through Kean's chief scenes, when, to her amazement, he strode angrily by her, then pointing her out, exclaimed, "Who is that idiot?" She did not improve her position, for since the advice of her knowing friend the bill had been changed, and her manager was appearing in one of his most successful comic parts.

Driving Men From the Table.

Baptista Porta gives six processes for driving beetle eaters from the tables of great men. The most effective was to give them an hour before eating a glass of wine medicated with belladonna, so that attempts to masticate would occasion spasms of the jaws. The most disgusting was to set before the gluttonous viands sprinkled with dried horses' blood and pieces of catgut. He says, "If you cut hair strings small and scatter them on hot flesh, the heat will twist them and they will move like worms."
 His Victory.
 A physical culture tutor said at the end of a recent women's boxing and fencing exhibition:
 "Physical culture among women, women's growing strength and pink, lead interest to marriage, change marriage's complexion."
 "How is poor Smithers gettin' on?" said one man to another.
 "Well," said the other, "Smithers is now almost recovered from the beating he gave his wife last Saturday night." —Los Angeles Times.

Just Like Rich Felks.

"Marshall Field, Jay Gould and Potter Palmer habitually carried only small amounts in their pockets," said the man who has a taste for the odd.
 "Well," responded his friend, "when I am gone you can truthfully say the same about me." —Washington Herald.

The Lesser Evil.

"Of course the tragedian was saying, 'in the theatrical business a short run is bad.'"
 "But," interrupted the critic, "a good, long walk is worse, isn't it?" —Exchange.

One Exception.

"You know," began Lovett, "it is said that 'love levels all things.'"
 "Yes," remarked the crusty bachelor, "it may level things except the lovers' head." —Philadelphia Press.

Every man has just as much vanity as he lacks understanding.

—Pope.

ZENOLEUM ZENOLEUM ZENOLEUM

Zenoleum is one of the most effective, non-poisonous dips now on the market. It has been given a test at most of the experiment stations and has been adopted by fully two-thirds of them.
 Its antiseptic and healing qualities, as well as its germicidal properties, have been proven to the fullest extent. For proof of this we cite the instance that when the stalls in which the experiments of the local short course were held, the professors demanded that they be disinfected with Zenoleum.
 During the four years that I have sold Zenoleum I have never had a complaint or a suggestion that it did not perform its work in any of the capacities that it is recommended.

To further the use of Zenoleum, I have purchased a 100-gallon steel dipping tank which I will rent out for the nominal sum of 50 cents a day, where Zenoleum is used.
