The village cut-ups and youngsters, both young and of an older growth, enjoyed in abandoned glee the destruction of property, and caused considerable disgust and indignation on the part of the people inconvenienced thereby, when Saturday night offered them an opportunity to make Halloween once more a detestable holiday. Millions of children and little folk, but when boys well into the years of responsibility deliberately raise thunder and provoke innocent residents of a community by their thoughtless and senseless tricks it is time that some precaution be taken. When porches are torn away and fences demolished and wagons lost and lawn swings broken up, the bill for the repair of same, if sent to the devastators, might cure this attack of a yearly disease, known as "Smart Aleckism."

The city banks received notice from their exchanges throughout the state that those banking institutions would be closed Tuesday, November 3, on account of election day. It was considered not advisable to discontinue business in Manchester that day as the custom has never been practiced here, and the law signifies that a holiday may be enjoyed on account of a general election.

Mrs. Joseph Cass was slightly injured in a runaway last Saturday driven by her son, who was suddenly frightened by an Illinois Central train, and morning, when the team of horses made a rapid tour of the west side streets, finally upsetting the wagon and breaking a portion of it as they dashed onto the pavement near the Marion street bridge. Mrs. Cass was thrown to the ground, but a physician reassured her that no bones were broken, although the nervous strain considerably affected her.

ENCOURAGING BUSINESS.

The three banks of the city had deposited on Saturday evening, at the close of the days work, nearly a million dollars. Although a decrease of a hundred thousand dollars was reported by the officers of these institutions during the past year, yet statements were made by each banking house that loans are heavier this year than they were twelve months ago, and large investments have been made in western lands, drawing bank accounts and necessitating depositors to borrow sums of money, at 8 and 9 per cent.

The demand for money is very favorable this year, and it is the unanimous opinion of the bankers that conditions are improving. The month of October created considerable activity in the money market at Manchester, and each bank is enjoying a prosperous business, having generally placed gilt edge loans to reliable parties.

It is of genuine interest to the people of Manchester and immediate vicinity to learn of these facts. The frequent statements issued by each bank speak well for their management, and the savings departments and individual accounts are steadily increasing. The capital of the three banks amount to $175,000, and their undivided surplus is proportionately strong.

HUNTING SEASON.

The hunting season opened Sunday, and the first accident on record occurred near Dyersville, where A. D. Holbrook of this city was in a party of gunners who were quail shooting.

Mr. Holbrook received a small quantity of shot in his back, and a few stray bits in his forehead, and after being attended by a physician, returned to Manchester, and will soon be about again.

Large bags of game were secured generally. The ducks, which have begun their flight south were found in abundance, and the rabbits and squirrels met a fate common to theirs at this time of the year.

Nature teaches us to love our friends, but religion teaches us to love our enemies.—French Proverb.

The Archbishop Wen. Dr. Whately, some time archbishop of Dublin, once had an encounter with a young aid-de-camp, and the primatemerger victor. At dinner the soldier asked this singular question, "Does your grace know the difference between an archbishop and an ass?" "Sir, I do not," answered Dr. Whately. "One wears the cross on his mitre and the other wears it on his back!" explained the tactless officer. "Do you know the difference between an aid-de-camp and an ass?" asked the archbishop calmly in return. "No, your grace, I do not," was the reply. "Neither do I!" said his grace.—Liverpool Mercury.

Greeley's Writing. During the early part of the nineteenth century the bad writing of great men became almost a byword. In fact, poor writing was considered by some people as almost a sign of genius. Horace Greeley was such a poor writer that his correspondents were sometimes obliged to guess at his meaning. It is related that a reporter on the New York Tribune who received a letter from Greeley discharging him presented it as a letter of recommendation to the editor of another paper.

CARD OF THANKS. Mrs. F. Allen and children desire to sincerely thank the friends who so kindly aided them during the illness and death of the husband and father. The sympathy and help, the flowers and the singing, all were very gratefully appreciated.
