SEWER FLOODS BASEMENTS.
That some one has woefully blundered in the matter of providing means for carrying off the surface water from Franklin street, was plainly shown during the severe storm Monday morning. Practically all of the water from this street is turned into the sewer, which is said to be only a 14-inch tile, and when the down-pour came Monday morning the sewer was altogether inadequate to handle the extra water. As a consequence of this the water backed up into several of the basements, doing considerable damage. It appears that the sewer when originally built was constructed for sewage only, and not to carry off surface water, but since the city has been paving its street, each city council has ordered that the water from Franklin street be turned into this sewer, with the result that it is unable to carry it to the river.
