MANY INTERESTING FEATURES

The Dairy Cattle Congress which will be held at Waterloo, October 2d to 8th, has been properly termed the "thousand feature" show. The extensive showing of the world's best dairy cattle, the national and state conventions and the attractive entertainment programs will not be the only things of interest on the grounds. Many new features will be added this year, one of the most important of which will be the working creamery located in the exhibit hall. This will be a miniature factory for the manufacture of butter, cheese, ice cream and other dairy products. It will be in charge of competent men who will at all times explain the different processes used in the manufacture of these food articles which play such an important part in the diet of the average American.

The boys' and girls' stock judging contest will be held on Wednesday, October 4th. This will be open to the boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 18 years. It will be an entirely educational feature and attractive prizes will be given those standing highest in the work.

At the request of a number of the middle west colleges, it has been decided to conduct a student's judging contest. The agricultural colleges of Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana and Iowa will compete for honors in the judging of dairy cattle. Attractive cash prizes, as well as valuable trophies are offered to those standing the highest in the judging work. This feature of the program will take place on Monday, October 2d.

The American Jersey Cattle Club, the American Guernsey Cattle Club, the Holstein-Friesian Association of America and the Ayrshire Breeders' Association of America will have large booths in the annex to the exhibit hall.

These associations represent breeders of pure bred dairy cattle in the United States and will have thousands of pieces of literature pertaining to their respective breeds for distribution. A number of the associations will conduct miniature moving picture shows illustrating the development of their breed of cattle.

An exhibit to demonstrate the value of the pure bred sire will occupy a prominent place in the cattle barns. This exhibit will show the manner in which the very poorest of range cattle can be bred to high producing strains of milk cows by the use of the pure bred dairy sire. Visitors will have the opportunity to see the representatives of the different generations and secure full information in regard to the methods of breeding employed.

An Egg Cook.
Lessing, the celebrated German poet, was remarkable for a frequent absence of mind. Having missed money at different times, without being able to discover who took it, he determined to put the home of his servants to the test and left a quantity of gold on the table. "Of course you counted it?" said one of his servants. "Counted it?" said Lessing, rather embarrassed; "no, I forgot that."

She Was Curious.
Little Jennie sat at table, elbows on the table and hands under chin, quietly watching papa return thanks. When he had finished she said: "Papa, where did you learn that pretty little verse?"

HOW DOCTORS HAVE CHANGED

Fewer Whiskers and Frock Coats and Less Mystery About Them Than Formerly.

Formerly the doctor had to wear sideburns or a Van Dyke, else he was under suspicion of being frivolous. A frock coat was a part of his disguise. He exhaled an odor of strong drugs. He rubbed his hands and shook his head as a part of every bedside diagnosis.

He was a good doctor, too, in many ways, and his helpful sympathy and his unlagging service to his patients, whom he cherished as few physicians cherish theirs in this day when every family is likely to patronize a dozen specialists, endeared him to the community.

Patients and their troubles are now often a matter of card indexing and of very exact courses of treatment. "Social medicine" is slowly doing away with the charity practice which every physician once carried on for the benefit of his own soul. The public is being taken into the confidence of its healers, and so rapidly do popular magazines spill forth news of the latest advances that it is an astute practitioner who can converse on all the medical topics brought up by those who enter his consultation room.

The doctor is more a scientist, more of a business man, less of a sage and oracle. But we still have that happy, childlike trust in him as in the days when pneumonia was a signal for battened windows and when cool water was regarded as a deadly thing when taken internally by a fever victim.—Detroit News.

EATING IMPROVED BY SOCIETY

Feeding in Solitude Did Not Command Itself to Author of "The Spectator."

This habit of feeding in solitude—which has received the imprimatur of "Ouida"—would not have commended itself to Addison. The author of "The Spectator"—being a good fellow—was of the opinion that it was company rather than cookery that made a good meal.

"As I in everything love what is simple and natural," he wrote, "so particularly in my food; two plain dishes, with two or three good-natured, cheerful, ingenious friends, would make me more pleased and vain than all that pomp and luxury can bestow. For it is my maximum that 'he keeps the greatest table who has the most valuable company at it.'"

No Time for Luxuries.
While Alec was playing on the hearth rug with his boys, father and mother sat thoughtfully discussing the increased cost of living. The small boy took it all in, although they did not know.

A week or so later his father called to him.

"Look here, Alec!" he said proudly, "isn't this a lovely little sister that mother has given you?"

Alec looked at the infant, but said nothing.

"Don't you like her?" asked father.

"Oh, I s'pose she's all right," said the small boy, disappointed; "but there were lots of things we wanted more!"

Bookshop Guides.
A big bookshop always seems to us a most confusing place. In such an embarrassment of riches, which way is one to turn? To guide one to what is really worth while there should be an announcer, as at the railway terminals, shouting in an enormous voice:

"This way for Emerson, Amy Lowell and points north of Boston. This track for Ernest Dowson and way stations on the Decedent division. This aisle for Joseph Conrad and the Anglo-Russian river, Vachel Lindsay and the Chicago slum poets."—Life.

Fully Informed.
Uncle Mose aspired to the elective office of justice of the peace in the "black bottom" part of town. One bar there was to his preference; he could neither read nor write. His master advised him to go to the commissioner of elections and ask whether he was eligible. Mose went and returned.

"What did he tell you, Mose?" inquired the master. "It's all right, sah," answered Mose: "dat gen'tlemun suttinly was kind, yas, sah. He tole me Ah was illegible fo' dat office."—Argonaut.

Chestnut Bread.
Bread is made from chestnuts by the mountain peasantry in Italy and France. After the nuts have been blanched they are dried and ground. From this flour a sweet and heavy cake is made which resembles the oatmeal cakes so popular in Scotland.

Weeds Prove Theory.
Someone once said that "it's not so much a question of the survival of the fittest as of fitting as many as possible to survive;" and truer words were never spoken. Everybody who has a garden and carefully tends it knows that the only things which really seem fit to survive are the weeds.

Nursing a Forgetfulness.
"Of course you have said things that you would like to take back."
"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "When you regret something and try to take it back, you simply remind people that you said it."

Papermaking.
The first paper mill in America was established in 1690 near Philadelphia and it was 20 years before the second one was built at Germantown, while the third, founded four years later in Delaware, furnished the paper that Benjamin Franklin needed.

Originally Latin Phrase.
The origin of the phrase: "All my eye, Betty Martin" comes of mispronunciation of the Latin "O mihl, beate Martine," which is literally, "O blessed Martin (help) me" and is found in several Italianes of the middle ages. Now it is slang for a lie. There are several such Latin phrases which have been degraded or transmuted. Hocus pocus is derived from the solemn "hoc est corpus," and sisyary is a corruption of certiorari.

Foolish Gator.
"While one of our leading fishermen was indulging in a nap on the banks of the river," says the Winsett Courier, "a hungry alligator crawled up and swallowed his boots. One of the boot-legs had a pint of corn liquor in it, and as an alligator was subsequently discovered trying to climb a tree, it is thought to have been the same one that swallowed the boot with the liquor in it."—Atlanta Constitution.

Trifles That Annoy.
How true it is that it's the little things that make or mar one's happiness! We know one noble and high-minded woman, for instance, whose whole life seemed blighted during a recent 24-hour period because she got a little too much bluing in the water she washed the curtains in.—Ohio State Journal.

Daily Thought.

The art of living is like every other art; only the capacity is born with us; it must be learned and practiced with incessant care.—Goethe.
