"Our experiments have proven that even with corn at $2, if properly supplemented, it is profitable to feed hogs. Corn will undoubtedly come down and there is no question it will be still more profitable."—W. H. Pew, head of animal husbandry department, Iowa State College.

Treat the fall pig right. Look to his wants, give him a warm home with ventilation and sunshine, and he will respond gallantly.

With good selection of stock, wise feeding and proper housing, the dairy cow is a money maker—an asset. Without suitable protection from the cold, the rain, and the snow she may become a liability. One well cared for animal says better than two poorly protected. Give the cow a chance.

Anyone who will follow a few simple directions carefully can build a money-saving concrete feeding floor. You can build one NOW for use this winter, and it will pay for itself by spring.

If you do not feel like saving coal as a patriotic duty in the now threatened coal famine, do it out of pure selfishness. Storm Sash and Storm Doors never would pay for themselves as quickly, in fuel saved, as right now. Dairy experts tell us that not enough attention is being paid to the conservation of manure; that the farmer must erect concrete manure pits and be prepared to handle this valuable material to best advantage.

Robert McPherson was born in Scotland, October 1st, 1839, and died in Stuart, October 13, 1917, aged 78 years and 13 days. Mr. McPherson was married in Colony township, Iowa, to Miss Marcia Jane Graves 51 years ago the 10th of October. Five children blessed this union, one son dying when he was a young man. He is survived by his wife, two sons and two daughters. He was held in the highest esteem by the people of his home city, as the schools were closed and the pupils and teachers attended in a body, and the business places were closed until after the funeral, which was held Monday, October 15 from the M. The example of service and sacrifice has been so inwrought into the family that her life continues in the great work that her sons are doing in Montana. Without her example and encouragement that great work could not have been brought to its present success. The funeral services were held Tuesday at the Congregational church and were very largely attended by many of her former acquaintances and friends. Do Not Buy an Imitation of the Round Oak

Say "No, thanks," when they show you a substitute and call it the original Round Oak. It may have the appearance of the genuine, but you cannot hope to secure the positive economy and durability that always accompany the purchase of the original.

If you will examine closely you will have no difficulty in discovering the original. It always has the name "Round Oak" on the leg. The ash pit is a seamless one-piece construction, the fire pot is double and the cold-rolled, refined boiler-iron body is extra-heavy.

Note that the doorframes are riveted on, not bolted on.

There are so many advantages in the genuine, that we welcome the opportunity of showing you this stove of proved merit.
