Books. LIFE OF JAMES BUCHANAN. Fifteenth President of the United States. By George Ticknor Curtis. In two volumes. Harper & Brothers, New York; Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago. For sale by Hepeman & Graham, Ottawa. Price $6.00.

It is now nearly twenty-three years since James Buchanan retired from public life, winding up a career which, though in no respect brilliant, had in the main been fairly honorable, in a cloud of obloquy. Was this deserved? Was it a fitting outcome of nearly fifty years of laborious public service that he should go down to history as the unhappy "Old Fish Bone," whose political life had been a failure? Not so thought James Buchanan himself, for during the eight remaining years of his life that succeeded his retirement from the presidency he was mainly occupied in preparing a "vindication," not only of his administration as president, but of his entire political career from the days of Madison down to the inauguration of President Lincoln. He had no thought of publishing it himself. With a firm Christian faith in a conscious existence hereafter, his chief concern was about his post-mortem fame. Dying he committed his papers and the work of preparing them for press to William B. Reed, of Philadelphia, but who was unable to undertake the task, and so it was turned over to Mr. Curtis. It was then somebody took it in hand, for as the years rolled on the shadows were only deepening that darkened the ex-president's fame. Whether the book of Mr. Curtis has been able to dissipate them the world may now decide.

The biography presents Mr. Buchanan in the three phases of (1) his early education and student life; (2) his career as legislator, representative and senator in congress and foreign minister, and (3) as president of the United States. The first is disposed of in a single chapter, and that the most pleasing one in the book. The juvenile Buchanan was a good boy, a hard student, and an exemplary young man. Trained for the law, he entered upon his profession at an early age, and in a shorter period than falls to the lot of most young lawyers, had gained a lucrative practice. But consenting, at the age of 24, to be elected to the legislature, he enters upon (2) his pre-presidential political career. To this the greater half of the work is devoted, and had the biography terminated here, we should have had before us a rather attractive character—a politician of sterling honesty and integrity, of almost singular purity and dignity of life, and of abilities and parts to entitle him to the honors of successful statesmanship. During the long years from 1816 to 1856 many grave questions came before congress and the country for discussion and decision. Mr. Curtis has the faculty of presenting the points at issue in each with such singular clearness, that though copying liberally from Mr. Buchanan's papers and speeches to present his position and views with the utmost fairness, they can in most cases be safely skipped, the reader being already in possession of the points.

It is when Mr. Buchanan is launched on his career as President that we first find him halting and stumbling. His position was difficult and trying enough. The country had become fairly crazed on the slavery question. While the democratic party of the north had hitherto honorably stood by the south in the maintenance of her clear constitutional right to hold slaves, it halted and began to fall away from the south made upon it the further demand of aid for slavery propagandism. The Kansas-Nebraska controversy brought the matter to a head. The most the democracy could do for the south was to propose the submission of the matter to the arbitration of squatter sovereignty. It was a most unfortunate proposal. The outcome was that fierce contest between freedom and border ruffianism that convulsed the country. It culminated in the Le Compton constitution—that vile trick by which it was intended to enforce slavery upon Kansas against the will of her people. Buchanan undertook to support that fraud, and it was his political death knell. Stephen A. Douglass said, "I will tear that constitution into shreds," and the northern democracy almost to a man stood by him. Events now crowded on with a whirl, and the only gleam of reason shining out of Mr. Buchanan's blind and fatuous subservience to the south occurs in his final message to congress, in which he so manfully sets forth the right of the general government, not to coerce the states, but the people of the states, into obedience, and his call upon congress for men and means to enable the government to maintain its authority. But both congress and the country had learned by this time fully to distrust him, and awaited with impatience his getting out of the way, which happily occurred on the 4th of March, 1861.

Whatever may be the ultimate judgment, however, as to the success of Mr. Curtis's work as a "vindication," there will be no dispute but that he has worked his material into a couple of very readable volumes. His style is singularly unaffected and pleasing, and his fairness and candor are so conspicuous throughout as to maintain the closest friendly and confidential relations between author and reader. TIMES OF BATTLE AND REST. By Z. Topelius. Translated from the Swedish. Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago. For sale by Hepeman & Graham, Ottawa. Price, $1.25.

This is the second volume of the English translation of Prof. Topelius's "Sorgen's Stories," published by Jansen, McClurg & Co., the initiatory volume issued by the same house several months ago and noticed here at the time, having been "The Times of Gustav Adolf." These stories hold about the same rank in Sweden as Scott's novels hold in England or Cooper's with us. They are of the same rank in their high literary qualities and richness of material. While the volume before us is by no means devoid of scenes of excitement, turmoil and battle, the period in Swedish history which it covers is one of comparative rest as contrasted with the grand European struggle upon which the country was about to enter under Charles XII, whose career forms the subject of the next volume in the series.

SPEECH AND MANNERS, for Home or School. By Miss E. S. Kirkland, author of "Short History of France," "Six Little Cooks," etc. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co., Ottawa. For sale by E. Y. Griggs. Price, $1.00.

This attractive little book is intended to call the attention of young people to the importance of a correct use of their mother tongue, and to furnish some hints in regard to the most common violations of good breeding. The readers will not improbably find themselves conscience-stricken at the thought of their own frequent sins against "The King's English," not to speak of the points connected more especially with juvenile life and comprised under the general name of Manners.

THE MEMOIRS OF FO H, a Celestial Functionary. Translated from the French of Françoise Saveny, by H. R. Hill. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co., Ottawa. For sale by E. Y. Griggs. Price $1.00.

This is a very fine piece of humor, the scene being ostensibly laid in China, but the shafts of ridicule are really aimed against the greed for office in France, and are quite as applicable to the civil service system of our own country as that of the Gallic republic. It is in the very best vein of French humor throughout, and the spirit of the original is retained with marvelous fidelity by the translator.

Magazines.

NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW. (30 Lafayette Place, New York. $5 a year.) In the November number Senator H. B. Anthony writes of "Limited Suffrage in Rhode Island," giving incidentally a highly interesting sketch of the early constitutional history of that little Commonwealth. Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Company, makes a constitutional argument against the general government assuming the management of the telegraph lines. The Rev. David N. Uter brings out from oblivion the record of certain alleged atrocious crimes of "John Brown, of Ossawatimie." There are two scientific articles, namely, "Solar Physics," by Professor Balfour Stewart, and "Modern Explosives," by Gen. John Newton. W. H. Mallock contributes "Conversations with a Solitary," an imaginary passage at arms between a Radical and a Conservative, in which the two opposing theories of government and society are advocated with rare spirit and ingenuity of argument. In "Suggestions in regard to the Public Service," Green B. Raum offers certain facts going to prove that the clerks and other employes of the government departments at Washington, even before the passage of the Civil Service act, were in the main both faithful and efficient. Finally, "Dr. Hamann's Estimate of Woman," is reviewed by Mrs. Lillie Devereaux Blake, Miss Nina Morais, Mrs. Sarah A. Underwood and Dr. Clemence S. Lozier.

THE DELINEATOR. (Butterick Publishing Company, N. Y. $1 a year.) Each number contains about as much matter as two numbers of Harper's or the Century Magazine, and the whole is devoted to an exhaustive compendium of the fashions of the day, carefully and accurately illustrated. It enables deft housekeepers to be their own milliners and dressmakers, and thus promotes economy, while it keeps the dry goods dealer posted in regard to all the coming modes. It is, in its sphere, the most reliable publication in the country.

R. S. Gordon, Mt. Carmel, Ill., says: "I have never heard a customer say that Brown's Iron Bitters does not do all claimed for it."

Washington Letter. Regular correspondence. WASHINGTON, Oct. 22, 1883.

As the time draws near for the convening of congress the interest in the political situation grows more exciting. A number of Members of congress are already settled here, and two of the prominent candidates for speakership, Cox and Randall, have already located their headquarters at the hotels. Your correspondent asked one of the members last night if the preparations for the canvass were beginning, and he was told that not only had they begun but they were so far advanced that all of the candidates claimed the victory.

But that is only a game of bluff, ain't it? Yes, perhaps so, and yet not altogether. Congressmen, as a rule, are good natured fellows; the most promising men in the world; I haven't any doubt but they have promised their support to each one of the candidates, conditionally of course. But when a man is making up his list of friends he doesn't count the conditions particularly; that will be all right he thinks to himself, and he puts down their names as solid for him. That is the way it happens that all of the candidates claim a majority.

"What is your opinion about it, who do you think will be speaker?" I inquired. "If you will promise me not to mention my name I will tell you what I think about it, though it may be a bad guess. I think Cox has the best chance, though he does not stand as high in the figures just now as either of the others. My reasons for this belief are general ones. In the first place he is a general favorite; then his tone is neutral. Ideas are clashing all around Randall and Carlisle—they are antagonistic to each other as rival cats, and they are both so strong as to be liable to kill off each other. Now it is Cox's good fortune that he does not represent any particular ideas, and in that attitude he just suits the party." "That is a rather singular conclusion it seems to me. Why should not the party have ideas to advance?" "It has, young man, all in good time, but not on the eve of a change of administration. Success is a politician's first principle. After success he can afford to promulgate his schemes for the public good, but they should not be allowed to stand in the way of his success. The strong partnership of Randall and Carlisle on each side of the tariff question makes it next to imperative that the party should not select either of them for the most prominent place in its gift. The speaker of the next House will be the leader of the national democratic party in the coming campaign for the presidency. More than that he may direct the course of legislation so as to make a democratic administration, or defeat it. An aggressive opinionated man in that place will bring the party's hopes to naught, but a conciliatory moderate man like Cox, with vast experience, and never failing resources in the way of expedients, may be able to steer the party into the port of victory. Then Randall and Carlisle must go. Yes, they go with their sections; Randall must go with Pennsylvania, the strongest protective state in the union; Carlisle's of course wedded to southern ideas and interests, which are for free trade first, last and all the time. But this question is the leit motif of the democratic party. Prudent men of the party say it must be avoided, postponed, deferred, got out of the way somehow, and at the outset particularly; it must not make its appearance in the contest for the speakership. In other words, the election of either Randall or Carlisle will make a split in the party. Hence I believe Cox will be the choice, though a new man may possibly be elected. Let me tell you, my young friend," continued the speaker, "this is a great country to manage. When you yoke up the north and south and the east and the west to one team you have to be very persuasive to get them to go together. If you try to drive them you will smash your wagon and spill your truck. Sure now what is the moral? Don't drive. Just hold the reins and let them jog along in their own way. There is no particular hurry about legislation. We've got more laws now than we can carry into effect. It wouldn't hurt anything if we did not make any more for two years. The public are against unsettling affairs by the agitation of underlying questions. Let the people have their way. They want political peace. The party that gives it to them will succeed in my opinion."

When a lecturer has worked the ladies of his audience so near to the weeping point that they have gotten out their handkerchiefs, and then suddenly changes his tone and speaks of the merits of Dr. Hall's Cough Syrup, he is bound to rouse a feeling of indignation.

From Texas.

WACO, Tex., Oct. 12. Partial rains throughout the state have at last put an end to the long protracted drought, and the average cowboy smiles complacently as he looks upon his once famished herd, now quietly cropping the fresh herbage or lazily drooping at the recently swollen brook.

The great preacher, Henry Ward Beecher, gave our city a call on his southern lecturing tour. He lectured at the Merchants Opera House, drawing quite a crowd to hear him. His theme, "The reign of the common people," was handled in that masterly way ever befitting the mind of a great man, and showing the wonderful advantage in educating the rising generation. His wife accompanies him on his southern tour.

Major Renn, of evangelistic fame, is conducting a camp meeting within the eastern suburbs of our city. He has a large tent or pavilion, which he moves from place to place. So great has been his success as a revivalist that thousands of his converts over Texas and the southwest attest the sincerity of his preaching. He is of the Baptist persuasion, and has doubtless done more for the cause than any other man in the state.

The wire fence cutters within the west ern counties seem to be quieting down of late, or rather the big rancheros have succumbed to their wily enemy, giving up cow business in the west as a bad job. Attorney General King has been out investigating the trouble in behalf of the state, and decides rather in favor of the native fence cutters, or decides that no corporation or individual has any right to enclose another person.

Since the public land was offered for sale by the state in unlimited quantities, wealthy corporations and syndicates have bought up immense tracts enclosing as much as a whole county of land in one pasture, together with all the actual settlers who might chance to be within his domain. Such a state of affairs has given rise to mob law, and it now remains for the legislature to adjust the trouble.

Gov. Ireland's recent visit to Mexico was received with a welcome plaudit wherever he went. At the city of Saltillo fully 10,000 people met him at the depot, receiving him with great enthusiasm. He will visit Monterey before his return. While he is only on a pleasure trip, he is thoroughly acquainting himself with the manners and customs of the people, with a view of adjusting, if possible, the border troubles, which have ever been a great annoyance along the Rio Grande.

Our prospect for next year's grain crop is much more flattering now than a few weeks since. Oats have come up everywhere, (3) to a good stand since the September rains. Wheat planting is now in full blast, the ground never being in better condition to receive the seed. A very large acreage will be planted during this month. Corn and cotton yield light, but the latter is being handled in so much better condition than last year's crop, that the planter will probably realize as much, if not more, than he did last season. Warm, pleasant weather prevails to an unusual degree for this season of the year.

LITTLE TEXAS. Costiveness is the cause of impure blood. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters will purify the blood. Price 25c. G. Gehring.

The papers are publishing the pension lists of their various localities as recently given to the public in a book issued by direction of congress from the government printing office. The Kane county list, as just published in the Aurora Beacon, embraces some 800 names, and the La Salle county list would probably embrace twice as many. On looking over the list one is ready enough to concede the justice of most of the pensions granted, yet there are many other names on the list that create no little astonishment to be seen in such a connection. Quite a number of men supposed to be hale, hearty and active, appear to be laboring under chronic ailments of the most debilitating and disheartening character.

Dr. W. D. Fleming, Georgetown, Texas, uses Cole's Carbolicure upon indolent ulcers, piles, inflamed eyes and other diseases, and thinks it unequalled as an external remedy.

Six miles from East St. Louis, Tuesday morning, a broken rail caused two coaches of a Louisville and Nashville train to jump the track and were dragged some distance on their sides. Thirty seven persons were injured—ten seriously and one fatally. The shrieks of the women and groans of the maimed created a heart rending scene. The wounded were taken to East St. Louis and St. Louis.

Josh Billings Heard From. Newport, R. I., Aug. 11, 1883.

Dear Bitter—I am here trying to breathe in the salt air of the ocean, and having been a sufferer for more than a year with a refractory liver, I was induced to mix Hop Bitters with the sea air, and have found the tincture a glorious result. * * * I have been greatly helped by the Bitters, and am not afraid to say so.

Yours without a struggle, JOS. BILLINGS.

The construction of Eads, ship railway across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec is actually in progress. The scheme appears to be perfectly visionary, but in this age of progress it is becoming unsafe to pronounce anything impracticable.

The exclusion of American pork from Germany seems to have had no effect to diminish the number of sufferers from trichiniasis in that country. A report comes by cable that in the little town of Elmsleben alone, in Prussia, sixty-six persons were suffering from the disease. Out of 121 houses but 50 were free from the disease, and 28 had died. There are also cases in Aken and other villages.

Piles.

They are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins, and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion present, as flatulency, uneasiness in the stomach, etc. A molar, like perforation, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Internal, external and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure where other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain upon the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price, 50 cents. Sold by G. Gehring.

The newest story from the mines in New Mexico is from Socorro, where they tell of a miner whose Bible fell over a precipice while he was dozing. He descended into the canon to recover the book, and found it lying open on a piece of rich quartz that had been dislodged by the fall. His eye fell on the seventh chapter of St. Matthew. The miner read, "Ask, and it shall be given unto you; seek, and you shall find." He searched, and speedily found a lode over two feet in width that assays—the story goes—$225 a ton. The story tells also that that part of the country has since been overrun by prospectors with Bibles in their hands.

Free of Cost.

By calling at G. Gehring's drug store you can get a sample bottle of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup which will relieve the most obstinate cough, or cold, and show you what the regular 50 cent size will do. When troubled with asthma, bronchitis, dry, hacking cough, pains in the chest, and all diseases of the throat and lungs, try a sample bottle of this medicine.

The eastern editor describes a second crop of clover on a farm where pasturing has been entirely abandoned for the last four years. He says if farmers will quit pasturing their tillage land entirely and adopt the soiling system, their farms will in ten years double their present productive capacity. The field of clover was 40 per cent. better than any other seen since harvest, and was better because it had not been pastured for a number of years. The corn and other crops are also good, and the fertility and productiveness are almost entirely owing to the soiling system as practiced by the owner.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The greatest medical wonder of the world. Warranted to speedily cure burns, bruises, cuts, ulcers, and rheumatism, sore throats, piles, chilblains, corns, tetter, chapped hands, and all skin eruptions, guaranteed to cure in every instance, or money refunded. 25 cents per box. For sale by G. Gehring.

Says the American Cultivator: "The anxiety about the frosted corn may be partially relieved by the fact that when untimely frost comes the grain rots the stock to perfect life. Hence there will be more and better grain than is now expected, but the fodder will possess less feeding value.

PROBABLY NEVER

in the history of proprietary medicines has any article met success at home equal to that which has been poured upon Hood's Sarsaparilla. Why, such has been the success of this article, that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. Every week brings new evidence of the wonderful curative properties of his medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla. Combines the Best Remedies of the vegetable kingdom, and in such proportion as to derive their greatest medicinal effects with the least disturbance to the whole system. In fact this preparation is so well balanced in its action upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood, that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism, that can hardly be credited by those who have not seen the remarkable results that have followed its use. If the Sarsaparilla does not prove sufficiently laxative, take a few doses of Hood's Vegetable Pills. It is well in all cases of biliousness to take these pills in connection with the Sarsaparilla for the first ten days. That dull, sleepy, sick feeling can be widely overcome by the use of these remedies. Will you give them a trial and be yourself again?

An ex-alderman of this city says of Hood's Sarsaparilla, "It is the strongest Sarsaparilla I ever saw." Each dollar bottle contains one hundred average doses. Sold by all druggists.
