Galileo.

EDITOR HERALD:—Your correspondent, when a college boy, remembers to have heard Dr. John Lord, more than twenty years ago, deliver a course of historical lectures.

Dr. Lord, as I remember him, was at that time most fascinating in manner and matter. He must be quite old, now, as he seemed full grown at that time, and appeared to have fully thrown off that gossamer sort of carriage and habit which never entirely deserts one under thirty-five.

The following extract from the Chronicle's report of his report of Galileo, in the issue of the 8th of October, 1873, seems so characteristically Californian that it amused me, and I venture to ask you to reprint it as an example of how refreshingly impertinent the young journalists of this youngest daughter of the association have become to all we have been accustomed to esteem reverend and sacred.

Having exhausted his matters of Galileo's inventions and discoveries in the realm of science, the lecturer brought his lecture down to the period of the philosopher's skirmish with the ecclesiastic smooth-bores of the age. With his discovery of the spots on the disc of the sun, and the revolution of the sun, in the opinion of the lecturer, Galileo achieved the zenith of his fame, and then began his great misfortune. In consequence of his uncompromising boldness with which he assailed errors and disregarded commonly accepted authority in matters of science, "all classes of foes marshaled against him; the temporizing Jesuits, the political churchmen and the whole swarm of timid, narrow-minded, dogmatic, envious priest entered into an alliance to secure his ruin."

It is not to be wondered at that his arguments an attack on their religious doctrines. The enemies of Galileo were determined that he should be persecuted and crippled and therefore laid their complaints before the highest tribunal. The speaker was inquisition and easily employed themselves in collecting evidence.

The lecturer did not think it was Galileo's doctrines that offended the age so much as the manner in which he assailed popular prejudices with ridicule and sarcasm. The speaking of Galileo before the Cardinals at Rome, his trial and sentence, and his recantation of his doctrines, were next alluded to, and his disgraceful obligation of the scientific principles he had elucidated were commented on in very severe terms. The speaker was very hard on the life-loving old philosopher for preferring length of days to a first-class martyrdom for scientific truth, although he admitted that the persecution of Galileo was not any worse than many others in Catholic and Protestant countries.

He did not condemn any church because Galileo was persecuted. He believed that intolerance had been common to human nature. The Cardinal Inquisitors were not any worse than the Puritans, but they were cunning and accomplished. Let Galileo's persecutors pass with others. He spoke of it only to remind us how weak we were.

The lecturer concluded with a high-strung pervasion on the good time present and to come.

Grapes as Food.

Men can live and work on grapes and bread. The peasants of France, Spain and Italy make many a satisfying meal in this way, and of the wholesomeness of the diet there can be no doubt. Medical men constantly recommend the use of grapes for their patients. Scarcely any plant can equal the vine as regards the beauty of its leaves and fruit. As a covering for bare walls and for affording shelter and shade, it is a climber of the first rank. To sit under one's own vine has in all ages been considered an acme of rural happiness, an emblem of peace, a symbol of plenty, and a picture of contentment. That pleasure, though perhaps not in all its fullness, may become the heritage of thousands in these temperate climes. Neither our latitude, longitude, nor leaden skies, nor erratic climate, nor the larger portion of the kingdom. In many districts its fruit will ripen more or less perfectly. In almost all it would ripen sufficiently to be useful for eating or wine making. Even green grapes are useful for conversion into vinegar, for making tarts, wine, etc. Ripe grapes are universally esteemed. No one tires of them. If any declined to eat their own grapes, or grew more than were needed for home consumption, there is a ready market in most neighborhoods for grapes at from fourpence to a shilling a pound, according to quality. Thus cottages might make or save the rent many times over. I know many cottage-gardens in which the vine or vines are not only their chief ornaments but the main source of profit. These might be multiplied up and down the country to infinity. As a means of increasing their number, I would suggest that prizes be offered by all cottage-garden societies for the best trained and most fruitful grapevines on cottages. I have known this done to such excellent effect that the vines became models of both; and such a spirit of emulation was stirred up that one laborer had paid another two days of his wages to do up his vine for him. There need be no fear of an excessive supply; neither are ripe grapes so perishable as fruits. Cut with a piece of wood attached, and placed in bottles of water, or even suspended in a dry room, the ripe fruit will keep good for months, and even improve by keeping.

A man in Danbury laughed until he was sick. He was going to the funeral of his mother-in-law.

Madame Anna Bishop.

One of the prettiest notices ever written of a singer is from the Evening Post in San Francisco. That lively little paper says: "England," said Mendelssohn, sentimentally, "has given three great singers to Italy—Clara Novello, Catherine Hayes and Anna Bishop."

They were a grand trio—women with the stanch, lasting English physique, plus the glorious Italian training, a combination that makes extraordinary singers. These three upheld their supremacy when there was no lack of prima donnas. Madame Anna Bishop remains the last of that great school of vocalists which began with Storace nearly a hundred years ago. Oh, the memories that come with the neat figure as it trips on to the stage! The recollections of triumphs won when Grisi and Viardot, Alboni and Crivelli, Lind and Persiani, were acknowledged queens of song! Of tales of adventure and travel, of peril by flood and field, of wreck, robbery and danger! Of all these and more, survived and conquered until admiration of pluck and endurance grows until it would almost forgive vocal deficiencies.

MADAME ANNA BISHOP'S SINGING. Is a thing to be watched and studied. The secret of her success lies in her method. No voice, however naturally beautiful, can last if it be badly trained or badly managed, and if any ambitious young lady wishes to preserve her voice for a whole lifetime, she must be as Madame Bishop does—she must open her mouth and let the sound come clear from the larynx, without affectation or hindrance.

AFTER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF TRAVEL. And good fortune, she elects to begin her farewell trip in San Francisco. Her mezzo-voice singing is still superb; her upper notes clear, sweet and resonant, her scales and shakes brilliant and facile, and her figure, gestures, attitudes and expression, exactly, precisely and entirely like what they were when first she made her bow in America. If this be really what we hope it is not a farewell trip—we can only counsel every one who wishes to know what good singing is, to go and hear her.

Los Angeles people can hear her on Friday evening.

LOCOMOTIVES FOR WOODEN RAILROADS.—George E. Fifield, of South Newmarket, N. H., has been building, for a few years past, a novel class of locomotives for the wooden-track railways in the lumber regions of Georgia. They are only six tons in weight, and have very large cylinders for so light machines. The capacity for carrying water and fuel is very great, the whole forming a very unique and serviceable machine, one of them being able to do the work of thirty males easily. The rapid denudation of the timber lands along the rivers and lines of railroads all through the South is driving the lumbermen deeper into the forests to supply the demand for a material almost indispensable for heavy bridges, cars and floors throughout the country. No yellow-pine tree ever grows where one is cut, a soft, sappy, worthless scrub pine or another kind taking its place.

PROSPECTUS OF THE LOS ANGELES HERALD.

The first of October, THE LOS ANGELES HERALD, a daily and weekly newspaper, will make its appearance. The daily will be a neat and tastefully printed seven-column newspaper, new paper and containing the latest news, news and literary items in character with the Herald. It will be printed on eight-page paper, and will contain the most important matter that has previously appeared in THE DAILY HERALD.

It is proposed that the HERALD shall be an unbounded advocate of every interest pertaining to Southern California and Arizona, and a zealous worker in all things that shall tend to benefit the State. It will be in close communication with the people. In its columns, from time to time will be found matters of interest to the California Farmer, Mechanic, Merchant, Laborer, and all classes of Producers; and it will also contain reading matter suited to the Home Circle.

The HERALD will be an independent Democratic journal and its efforts directed to denigrate from power and place those now mismanaging the affairs of the Nation. For the accomplishment of this end, it will have satisfaction in the co-operation of the members of all Parties, believing that the prosperity, perhaps the only one, of the Nation depends upon the success of a movement of this character. It is "reform now or revolution hereafter."

The HERALD will advocate State Rights and oppose Coercive Immigration. It will favor Free Trade, and oppose Protective Tariff; it will advocate a sound currency for California, and oppose the present dwarfing and deadening policy which upholds the present ruinous and oppressive currency of Eastern States. It will advocate the People and oppose Monopolies, no matter what guise they assume.

While the HERALD will treat Slavery as a national issue, it will not be a partisan organ of any party, and it will not be a party organ. No man rightly owns a dollar until he has earned it. Every dollar which is taken from the public treasury, or private purse without just return is robbery, and he who swindles or embezzles will be exposed. The HERALD will oppose salaried steals, custom stamps, land steals, railroad steals, and every other kind of steal.

Each day, the fullest Foreign and Domestic Telegrams will be published. The aim will be to supply the public with the demand heretofore filled by the San Francisco Herald. No trouble or expense will be spared to make the HERALD, in this respect, equal to any newspaper on the Coast. It will also contain the latest news from the Foreign and Domestic Markets, and the Trades generally, honestly and carefully compiled.
