

CITY AND SUBURBS.

Governor Pio Pico arrived by the Orizaba yesterday morning.

One hundred and twenty-five passengers arrived per Orizaba yesterday.

Pool selling in the coming races was commenced by Noyes & Durfee at Stedman's saloon last night.

The two minor indictments against Newman, by mutual consent, have been continued for the term.

Don't forget the German school concert to be held next Saturday evening. A general good time is expected.

The case of Henry Hazard, under the Act of 1868, was on trial again in the U. S. Land Office yesterday.

Vasquez—twenty-five cents for photographs of the bandit, at the Cottage Gallery, opposite Pico House.

A Grand Jury was drawn in the County Court yesterday, and the venire made returnable on June 9th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Dr. Prusa returned yesterday from his trip East. The Doctor looks as though he has enjoyed his journey well, and comes back smiling and jolly.

Those desiring to protect their children from small pox can do so by calling on Dr. Leal, who has just received pure vaccine virus, 57 and 58, Temple Block.

Judge McNealy of the Eighteenth Judicial District, San Diego, opened the District Court yesterday, in place of Judge Sepulveda, who has gone to San Luis Obispo.

J. Waldo Thompson, for many years agent of the Western Union Telegraph office at Yreka, and recently appointed the company's agent at San Diego, paid our city a visit yesterday.

J. W. Dunbar, who was recently murdered at Mazatlan, is at the Clarendon Hotel, in this city. He is about the healthiest looking murdered man we have seen since Daniel Lambert died.

The excursion party to Boston which Mr. N. C. Carter has been organizing, will start from here next Wednesday. Mr. Carter expects to bring back with him a large party of Eastern people to visit this coast.

It is announced that there will be a meeting at the M. E. Church this evening at 7 o'clock to organize a singing band for the promotion of holiness, irrespective of sect or denomination. A general invitation is extended.

Addis, at the Cottage Rooms, has been doing such an immense business that he has had to employ a No. 1 artist to assist him. Cards now beautifully retouched, one dollar per dozen. Call at once, as he soon leaves.

Though far short of infallibility, the HERALD is making long strides towards omnipresence. Our paper visits the Sandwich Islands, Mexico, England, France and Germany, as well as nearly every State in the Union.

The adjourned meeting of the charter members of the Knights of Pythias Lodge will occur to-night at the Library rooms. It is desired that all who have enrolled themselves as members be present, as important business will come before the meeting.

The German Soiree at Turner's Hall Sunday evening was a very pleasant affair. The attendance was good, and dinner was kept up until a late hour. Our German friends always know how to have a good time when they make the attempt.

The Orizaba is at last out of the docks at San Francisco, where she has been put up for repairs for nearly a month past. She paid a visit to our harbor a visit yesterday, and went on her way to San Diego. Next Wednesday she will return, bound for San Francisco again.

Mr. Olden, from Anaheim, contradicts the report that there are grasshoppers in that section. He says that there is nothing at all in the country to injure the crops, and that probably five times as much grain will be harvested as in any year previous.

Mr. Johnson, with his assistants, Prof. James and Col. Hodge, arrived in this city yesterday for the purpose of securing views and sketches for the new pictorial of Southern California. We understand that they will proceed to take views of the most noteworthy places in the city and vicinity, as well as a full view of the city itself. We extend a cordial welcome to our friends of the press.

The Marveville Appeal of the 23d inst. has the following: James Haworth left yesterday with his family for Los Angeles to permanently reside. Mr. Haworth was for many years the President of the California Stage Company, which was in its day one of the largest enterprises in the State. He has resided among us for the last twenty-five years. His many friends wish him luck in his new home.

To apprehend a man for stealing wood would be counted supremely ridiculous in most countries; but here, where it approaches us nearly as close as gold, a theft of that kind becomes a serious matter. Guillerio Arbellia yesterday entered a complaint of that kind before Justice Gray against L. Dukes. The complaint charges that Dukes drew the water from dig No. 3 on the night of the 22d inst., at which time Arbellia had a permit for its use, and thereby the complainant was greatly injured. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of the alleged water thief.

Pictures extraordinary.—If you want to see what an immense business the Cottage Gallery is doing, just go to the Pico House any day between 9 and 3. You will see carriages, wagons and horses all belonging to people waiting for their turn to be photographed. Addis has only had time to eat one dinner since he opened—two more to help him and he'll no time to eat. Addis turns out from twenty-five to thirty dozen pictures per day. Where do all the people come from; who say Los Angeles is not becoming a city of notes?

Complaint was entered before Justice Gray yesterday for the return of a certain quantity of wood from the Government lands at San Susana. It seems that this wood was cut some time since by the accused, and subsequently taken into custody by the U. S. Agent, who placed Jeronias in charge of it. For hauling the wood away, the defendant is now arraigned on a charge of petit larceny. Hibberle should know that stealing from Government does not work well in any thing short of a Credit Mobilier or a million dollar job. It is wrong to steal a cord of wood, and Uncle Sam won't stand it.

OUT OF TOWN.

A Sunday's Feast in the Country on Foot—Some Self-complacencies in Regard to Our Country and Climate—Mr. A. F. Waterman's Place on San Pedro Street.

We are proud of our country, and well we may be. Except, perhaps, towards the mountains at the north of us, one cannot go in any direction from Los Angeles without encountering the same delightful prospect of grain fields, orchards, vineyards and pleasant suburban residences. Our friends abroad hear many startling accounts of the capacities of our agricultural regions. They know much of our big crops, big trees and big stories; but, without ocular demonstration, they can never know of the peaceful, home-like, enchanting features of our country which surround one's everyday life in Southern California.

While a pleasant breeze—not a hurricane—is stirring, and a summer's sun warms without scorching you, drive out into the country on any day you may choose. There is no watching to secure fair weather or to avoid foul. During our long summer, one day is the finest you have ever seen, and the others are all just like it. We say all, but there may be an exception; if so, it will only go to prove our rule. Driving out one of the streets leading to the country, you pass between long hedges of willow or poplar, which give a decidedly sylvan tone to the way. The trees grow along the banks of a zanja, carrying its freight of water with a somewhat rapid current, and turning off here and there a part of its stream to irrigate an adjoining field. There is a cool inviting atmosphere at the roadside all along. The shade is dense, the water is clear, the banks are green, and at mid-day the temptation is strong to lie down beneath one of the overhanging willows, with one's hat over his eyes, and let the whole world go to blazes, if it wants to. No one of them, certainly, is included in the running of the zanjias along our public highways. But the beauties of your drive do not stop at the roadside. On the right and left there are constantly changing scenes to attract the eye and please the fancy.

Every prospect pleases, And man alone is vile. present company excepted. Here is the place where an opulent old Dutchman lives. Fifteen years ago he came into the country a poor man. He settled down on this farm, planted orange, lemon, lime, walnut and other kinds of semi-tropical trees. He toiled persistently, doggedly, courageously for that long term on his property, and while others were running wild in their quest for gold, he was content to toil and wait. Now the poor Dutchman cannot be bought out for a quarter of a million dollars! As you look over the long rows of symmetrical walnut trees and see how straight they stand, how well trimmed, and well cared for in every way; and as you see the orange orchard in an equally fine condition, the lemons and lemons take the same while in their midst stands the poor, mean little frame house, you say, "well, he has earned them."

But we have digressed from our original intention in writing this article. We set out to tell of a trip which we took into the country the other day something like that which the reader has been started upon, only differing in this: that we have given the reader a carriage to ride in, while we ourselves "huffed it." The Irishman's poetry here comes very appropos: "The rich they ride in their chariots, And the poor man goes fat."

There were three in our party—the Judge, the General (we call him General because it pleases him and sounds well), and the deponent. We decided among us that it would be more healthy, more comfortable and equally less fatiguing to take a gentlemanly stroll, and every way better than to ride cramped up in a carriage. Happy thought! and excellently adapted to the depleted state of our exchequer. Our path lay out San Pedro street, and we jogged along in the comfortable frame of mind usually attributed to the poor but honest man. About two miles and a half from town our walk terminated at the house of our hospitable friend, A. F. Waterman. San Pedro street is too well known to require any kind of description from us. Suffice it that we followed along the cool zanja, passed the old Dutchman's place and thoroughly appreciated all the beauties of field, grove and garden spread out along the way. Mr. Waterman lives upon a small place containing about six acres of land, with a cosy little cottage house and the other conveniences which your Eastern bred man is sure to have around him. This place, however, is only rented, and Mr. Waterman has a fine farm proper about a mile and a half further on, where, in company with Mr. Thompson, he owns a ranch of one hundred and thirteen acres. On the homestead property Mr. Waterman has a small nursery, which will be a fortune in itself before many years. He has a large number of seedling forest trees, brought from Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and New York, of which he makes a specialty. They consist of ash, beech, American chestnut and several varieties of maple. They have been brought here at great expense and trouble, and will require a world of care still before they become large enough to take care of themselves. With very few exceptions, they are doing finely. They will be ready to transplant in the coming of next winter, and will then bring about fifty cents each. For some of the varieties Mr. Waterman has double and treble the number of orders that he will be able to fill. These same trees are sold as high as a dollar and a half apiece in San Francisco. Much credit is due Mr. Waterman for the efforts which he is making to introduce these new varieties of trees into our country; it is to the enterprise of such men that the land is brought out to its fullest capacity of production and that we are shown what really can be done here.

On his ranch, Mr. Waterman has a great variety of trees, including the nut, peach, pear, apple, nectarine and others as well as some fifteen thousand seedlings. The trees are well cared for and altogether present a fine appearance. In some the growth is really marvellous. We saw an orange tree which has put forth during the season a shoot five and a half feet long. A little graft set in an orange sprout but an inch or two above the ground has grown during the last two weeks to the length of fourteen inches—an inch a day. A pear graft set last April is now thirty inches long. Thus we could go on multiplying examples to a point of tediousness, but we refrain; altogether, the growth is astonishing to everybody but the natives. There is everywhere a rich and fine crop of peaches. The trees are all heavily laden with the fruit, now about half grown. We saw some little trees not more than four feet high, the stock one year old and budding of the same age which bear a number of well formed peaches upon their frail branches. A nectarine of a year's growth is also bearing.

Mr. Waterman bestows a great deal of attention upon grafting, and thus makes some valuable improvements in the quality of his fruit. During the year he has set about fifteen thousand grafts, and very nearly all of them are growing.

The orchards are irrigated once in six weeks and plowed each time. Other means of fertilizing is required if the ground is thus kept well watered and worked. Those who have made the experiment of manuring their trees find them rather injured than benefited by the operation. Care should be observed, however, in irrigating, as there is such a thing as intemperance, even in the use of water. Mr. Waterman thinks that trees do not require irrigation oftener than once in six weeks, and his opinions are well backed by the fine appearance of his own orchards.

After making an examination of the ranch to our thorough satisfaction, we again returned to Mr. Waterman's house, where we partook of the hospitalities of his board with a gusto bred of our long walk. Not to extend our regards to Mr. Waterman's estimable wife, would be an ill-deserved slight; neither can we pass over her Yankee-made strawberry short-cake in silence. It was very good, but not as good as the way the Judge and the General stowed it away made our reportorial cheeks crimson for very shame. But there is an end to all things, even to strawberry short-cakes and Sunday evening strolls, and the time for the return of another pleasant day, and return thanks to our friends out of town.

"Vasquez" and "Othello" Again. We told you so. Messrs. Neill and Piercy received such hearty encouragement from our people last Saturday evening that they have concluded to repeat their entertainment to-night. An entire change of programme has been arranged, with the exception of the burlesque on the capture of Vasquez and the scenes from Othello. Hamlet will be presented with the Irish version of it this time, and there will be some fun infused into the play by Neill's rich brogue. Those who did not see "Vasquez" last Saturday evening should not let this opportunity pass, as it will doubtless be the last of its appearance on our stage. Of course there will be a full house at Merced Theatre to-night.

Los Angeles and Independence Survey. EDITOR HERALD: I returned to San Bernardino last night, having spent the last week in the careful exploration of the different approaches to Cajon summit. I was accompanied on most of my expeditions by Mr. Fear, who resides on the line of Brown's toll-road, near the top of the mountain, to whose kind assistance, thorough woodcraft, and sure-footedness I am mainly indebted for any topographical knowledge I may have obtained.

I VISITED THIS MOUNTAIN REGION with some trepidation as to the certainty of obtaining favorable results; knowing, as I did, that it was rugged and lofty and had been pronounced upon unfavorably by engineers. Still, as its passage was the key to the success of the project, I hoped that by crowding gradients and distorting the alignment, to be able to worm my way across the sierra, after which I felt confident that all would be plain sailing on to Independence.

FROM PREVIOUS REPORTS I gleaned the information that the main and almost insurmountable engineering difficulties would be encountered on the southern slope. From personal observation I am thus far able to announce that these difficulties exist only in imagination. Pass is practicable for a railroad, which can be cheaply constructed and operated with vast advantage to Los Angeles and her back country. At the time of writing I am not prepared to go into details, but will report at an early date to Messrs. Neill, Downey, Griffin, and the Board of Incorporators of the Los Angeles and Independence Railway, giving them my proposed location of the summit, alignment, gradients, with estimate of cost and many other items of interest connected with the enterprise, all of which they will doubtless make public.

I LEAVE UPON THE 20TH INSTANT to explore the northern slope, which I have already looked down upon from the summit, and which looks gradual and inviting. As soon as I land my line of survey on the top of the mountain, I shall be off on a straight shoot due north, for Owens Lake. I shall be accompanied by Mr. Potter, who has made the trip across the intervening country, between the Mojave and Cerritos, several times, and who is thoroughly acquainted with this unexplored region, where water can be obtained, etc. The results of my explorations will be laid down on a map accompanying my report, and may be of use to the Government. I have conferred with some of the leading men of San Bernardino concerning the proposed line of the L. A. & I. R. R., and I find them unusually in favor of a railroad connection with Los Angeles and the Holcomb, Oro, Panamint, Ivanpah and Cerritos districts. They claim that the completion of a road to this vicinity will ensure them the monopoly of the Arizona trade, in opposition to the Colorado Steam Navigation Company; and they say that the sum of $100,000 is ready for any company who will connect them with Los Angeles by rail.

Let Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and Inyo counties join hands, and move promptly in this matter; raise by subscription $100,000, place a light bond of $1,000 per mile upon the road, and the success of an enterprise which they will own and control, and which will yield them large returns from its inception, is assured to them beyond a peradventure. I have been to San Bernardino, May 24.

"One More Unfortunate Weary of Death"—French Banquet. SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—About 11 o'clock last night Alice Tennant, a woman of ill repute who had gone to live on Waverly Place, shot herself through the heart. She threatened to commit the deed, asked for pen, ink paper, and then wrote a letter to her mother, expressing great love for him and regret at the course she had pursued. This done, she went out on the street and was accosted by an officer, who said he had seen her husband and he desired a divorce. She replied, "He shall have one—here goes for my life!" fired and fell, dying in the officer's arms. The husband tried to kill himself about two months since by taking poison.

One hundred and forty French Republicans set down to a banquet at Burn Vein Hall, Bush street, last night. It was given in honor of M. M. Eloquent speeches were made by the distinguished guests, in which they denigrated Rochefort and the Paris Commune. Other patriotic speeches were made, and the banquet did not close till a late hour.
