SWALLOWED UP IN A QUICKSAND.—A correspondent of the Kansas Journal says:—This afternoon the citizens of Siver Lake were shocked by the intelligence that a man, by the name of Price Roberts, was partially buried in a well on Big Soldier. In company with Dr. Ward and others of this place, I repaired to the scene of disaster. The circumstances are as follows:

Mr. Elmore Randall engaged Mr. Roberts to dig him a well. When he had it sunk to the depth of twenty five or thirty feet, he commenced curbing with rather fair material, using grapevines, secured by boards. When at the depth of forty feet, having dug five feet below his curbing, he was urged by Mr. Randall and his friends to come out; but, having struck water, he was anxious to secure the prize. Shortly afterward Mr. Randall's ears were startled by the cry for help. Seizing the windlass, they dragged him up about fifteen feet, when the treacherous curbing gave way, forcing him to one side and under the bank, breaking his hold and entangling his legs in the curbing. Buried up to his chin, and with the fearful prospect of another slide every moment, Mr. Randall, with heroic fortitude, descended the well and commenced digging him out on all sides. Yet he worked until he had got the land away to his waist. Weak and exhausted, he was pulled out. He mounted his horse and rode after help. When we reached the spot we found Mr. Roberts still alive, and giving directions to those above how to proceed. We constructed a ladder about twelve feet long, and let it down, but owing to the curbing being so low it did not get to the bottom within three feet. Moments were years with the poor fellow. The first to descend the well was a young man by the name of Johnston who pulled the sand away from his face, came up, and Randall went down with a hoe. Mr. Roberts called out "Save me, Mr. Randall!" and the response of Mr. Randall, "My God, Mr. Roberts, I will save you if I can!" struck deep into the hearts of those above. This noble youth worked until, fainting and exhausted, he was pulled up and placed on a bed and restoratives given him. An experienced well digger was the next to go down. He worked faithfully, but gave up all hope of getting him out. The sun had set, and deep down into the darkness of that "chamber of death" Mr. Roberts still continued to give directions. Dr. Ward went down with a lantern. A bottomless box was lowered, which the doctor placed over his head to protect him from the inroads of the quicksand. We were fulfilling our orders of the Doctor when he exclaimed, "He is gone!" Another slide completely covered him and almost fastened the bottom. Every effort was put forth to save him, but in vain. We returned home with sad reflections that we had seen a fellow being buried alive.

[COMMUNICATED]

TO THE FARMERS OF VIRGINIA.—Speaking in the name of those I represent, I am authorized to say to you that it has been proposed that we, the farmers of Virginia, set apart one day this summer for thanks and rejoicing before Almighty God for his blessings bestowed upon us this year, in the bountiful productions of the earth, both in cultivated and spontaneous growth, now spread out before the eyes of the people of Virginia.

That for several years past He has, for reasons known to Himself, withheld His blessings in part, we all know; therefore it has been suggested that we assemble and meet together on Thursday, the 25th day of August next, in the forests, groves and other selected places, from "Nature's Broad Courts" not made with hands, and that the exercises commence with a short prayer, or anthem, expressing our feelings, to be followed with a speech, taking for its subject the "Duties and Pleasures of Agricultural Life in Virginia," and the rest of the day be devoted to such festivities as may best comport with the pleasure and dignity of Virginia's sons and daughters, and that our friends of the cities be invited to come out and unite and partake of our simple hospitalities. Oh, glorious day! Oh, glorious theme! to unloose the eloquent tongues of Virginia's sons, so long bound in silence, in sorrow and affliction, now to be touched with the heavenly fire of gratitude to God, peace, good will to man. Each county can easily arrange its own details, and thus send up from a whole State a volume of incense acceptable in the sight of Him who controls the destinies of individuals and of nations. All editors, and others interested in the prosperity and happiness of Virginia, are requested to publish, with their own reflections. Very respectfully,

T. E. CHAMBLISS,
In behalf of several Farmers.
Petersburg, Va.

A WESTERN ROMANCE.—About eight or nine months since a man living in the northern part of Virginia City, Nev., went into the eastern part of the State to seek his fortune in the new mines of that section, leaving his wife and one child in Virginia City. Some seven months ago a gallant disciple of St. Crispin persuaded the White Pine widow to take up her abode with him in a house which he furnished for her. The new pair lived together for about seven months, when a few days since the gentle husband returned. Of course there was trouble in the camp, but after some quarreling the two men agreed to play a game of seven-up for the woman. The game came off last Saturday night, and the husband won his wife back by just "two points." The man claimed his wife, and the man of leather could not say but that he had fairly won her.

The woman preferred the shoemaker, but the husband and winner was determined to have his own. He packed up what furniture they possessed, and last Sunday evening, with his house hold goods and gods, left by a fast freight wagon for California. When the wagon started there was quite a scene. A crowd of nearly one hundred persons had collected to see the husband carry away his "stake" and there was much merriment over the romantic affair. The woman cried and wanted to cry at parting with the treasure he had lost by not building enough "trumps." He asked some of the crowd if they thought he would out of the wagon. They told him he had lost her, "on the square," and he must bear it like a man, so the wagon moved on, and soon the fair one was "gone from his gaze."
