General Lafayette.
[For the Richmond Whig.]

It was often remarked of General Lafayette, when he was on his tour through the United States, in 1824, he possessed, in a very extraordinary degree, the faculty of recognizing at a glance his old comrades in arms, whom he had not seen for more than fifty years. He could call by name as well the privates in the ranks as the highest officers of the line.

The following incident was related to me in the year 1832, by the late Judge Brooke, of the Court of Appeals of this State, who had been a captain in the war of the Revolution: Whilst Lafayette was in Richmond, a guest of Virginia, an obscure individual living in Person county, N. C., who was known in the Revolutionary army as Sergeant Hood, who belonged to the company commanded by Captain Brooke, and who, on account of his singular daring and uniform good conduct, was a pet of his officers, visited the Capital for the purpose of greeting his old commanding general.

Judge Brooke said that on walking across the Capitol Square one morning he met an old man who he recognized as being the same individual who he had fought under him when he was a youth, and had come out of the war with fifty miles to see him. Before the Judge had time to respond, the stranger said to him: "Is not this Captain Brooke to whom I am talking?"

On receiving an affirmative answer, he said, "You do not appear to recognize me; I am Sergeant Hood, who belonged to your company during the Revolutionary war." The Judge told me that he was immediately filled with the most pleasant recollections of the sergeant's many deeds of valor performed under his own inspection, that he gave him a cordial grasp, and went with him to Lafayette's room.

On entering, and before a word was spoken by any one else, the Marquis, who was in a remote part of the room, eagerly approached the strange old man, and exclaiming, "Sergeant Hood," fell on his neck and wept tears of joy. He recognized this humble private in an instant, and recounted some of his deeds of daring to the astonished company.

That he should have recognized any of his brother officers, after a separation of more than half a century, during which time they must have undergone the usual changes wrought in one's appearance by old age, whilst his own eyes must have "grown dim," was a matter of no little surprise, but that he should have hailed a humble private in the ranks, by name, excited the astonishment of all who were present.

The Judge remarked that it was one of the most agreeable and joyful reunions in which he ever participated. THOMAS P. ATKINSON.
DANVILLE, VA., Nov. 16, 1870.

To the Women of the South.

The undersigned earnestly appeal to the women of the whole South to aid them in obtaining contributions for the erection of a monument at Richmond, which is to stand as a lasting memorial of the love borne our great Chief by a mourning and grateful people. The soldiers, through their resolutions passed at their great meeting lately held in Richmond, in honor of General Lee, have called upon us to join them in collecting contributions for the desired object. An organization for that purpose has been already formed by the undersigned, and to the women of the South—from Maryland to Texas—we appeal for aid.

The fourth Sunday in November (Nov. 27th) has been selected as the day on which a collection shall be taken up in every church throughout the length and breadth of our Southern land. This is the only possible way by which a voluntary and simultaneous offering can be made to the memory of him whom we would honor in death as we have honored and loved him in life. With perfect confidence in the love which his people bore him, and in their zeal to do that which, in honoring him must have no doubt of the success of this plan it can be brought directly to the notice of every clergyman and congregation in the South; and that this may be accomplished, we call upon you to assist us. Let the committees which have been appointed for each State not promptly and with vigor. Let them urge, that on the fourth Sunday in November, each member of every family should go to church with that sum, small or great, which their means will allow them to dedicate to this sacred object.

To those clergymen and congregations who object to collecting for such an object on the Sabbath, we would suggest that they should appoint some suitable day in this month when a meeting of their congregations should be held and the collection taken up.

Let it be remembered that this monument is to be raised by the whole South; that it is to be one to which, as a people, we may point proudly, and to which generations for ages to come shall look up with respect for the love which a defeated people could bear to a great but fallen hero. Should each of the 25,000 congregations scattered throughout the South contribute but a trifling sum, what a monument could be reared! Let each man, woman and child, then, give what they can, regardless of how small or how great the sum may be.

All contributions must be sent to Miss S. N. Randolph, Secretary of the Ladies' Lee Monument Committee, Box 838, Richmond, Va. (Signed,) Mrs. Wm. H. Macfarland, Mrs. Geo. W. Randolph, Mrs. James Lyons, Mrs. Wm. Brown, Miss Nicholas; Mrs. Wm. B. Isaacs, Treasurer.

R. R. BUTLER.—Dr. Van Aernam, Commissioner of Pensions, expresses the opinion that the prosecution of Roderick R. Butler, Congressman elect from Tennessee, for dishonest practices toward Government pensioners and the Pension Bureau, will not be abandoned, and also that all the papers necessary are now in the hands of the Attorney General, who will instruct the District Attorney to prosecute the prosecution as soon as Mr. Butler arrives. The Commissioner says he shall have all his witnesses ready when called for. New York Tribune.
