WILLIAM WIRT.
BY JAMES PARTON.

Bladensburg, in Maryland, near the Potomac river, was a thriving village before the revolutionary war, having a great trade in exporting tobacco and importing foreign merchandise. In this village there was one tavern, kept by Jacob Wirt, a native of Switzerland, assisted by Henrietta, his wife, who was a German. William Wirt was the youngest of their six children, and he was born in 1772. Besides this tavern, Jacob Wirt possessed some other property in the place, and he was thus enabled to maintain his family in plenty, and with some domestic comfort. He died when his son William was two years of age, leaving an estate of three or four thousand dollars to his young family.

Among the frequenters of the Bladensburg tavern was a lawyer by the name of Carnes. During the lifetime of the father he had become warmly attached to the family, and particularly to two members of it—the eldest daughter, twelve years of age and this pretty, amusing little William, aged two. When the landlord died and the whole care of the house fell to the landlady, she lent her a helping hand in many ways, advising her about her property and the education of her children. When at last the mother died also, he redoubled his attentions. That eldest daughter was then a beautiful and blooming girl of eighteen, and it is evident that he already looked upon her as his future wife. He sent the boy to a Latin school; and after seeing his education well begun, he removed to Georgia, where he had great success at the bar. Soon he had him inviting Elizabeth Wirt and her brother to come to Georgia, and live with him. The young lady accepted the invitation, and became his wife; but the boy had found other friends, and saw an opening to an education nearer home.

And it was all owing to his engaging qualities. He describes himself as a pert, lively, saucy and pretty school-boy, who sang comic songs very well, danced with agility, and made smart answers, which he says, caused him to be thought "a genius." He does not appear to have been a very diligent student, but he was extravagantly fond of romantic and humorous literature.

He well remembered the incident which first suggested to his mind to try for the legal profession. His excellent schoolmaster was in the habit of taking his pupils to attend the sessions of the County Court, four miles distant from the school. Among the advocates was a popular and brilliant young man of the neighborhood, well known to the boys, and a great favorite with them, who seemed to them to surpass his elders in wit and eloquence. Young Wirt admired him extremely, and to the whole school he appeared the hero of the county.

"Why should we not have a Court of our own?" was the cry, as they trudged homeward. It was agreed to. Wirt was appointed to draw up the rules. He was the hero of this juvenile forum, and it was there that he acquired the taste for legal pursuits. The party he took in that school-boy court led him directly to real courts and real cases. One of his school-fellows—the son of the noted lawyer and politician, named Benjamin Edwards—happened to take home a copy of the rules which Wirt had drawn up for the guidance of the mock court, to which the author had appended an elegant epistle apologizing for their imperfections. This production young Edwards displayed to the family, and he extolled in unmeasured terms their eloquence and gaiety of the author. His father read the rules, and was much struck with their humor and spirit. He wrote to Wirt, then fifteen years of age, telling him that he had two nephews and a son preparing for college, and inviting him to become an inmate of the family, and direct the studies of those three young men while prosecuting his own. He could not but accept so opportune an invitation. He resided in this family twenty months, winning the cordial esteem of every member of it, and receiving from the experienced lawyer the most useful, paternal, assiduous guidance in his studies. Forty years after, we find him writing to this benefactor of his youth in terms of the most affectionate gratitude. Indeed, everybody loved him, and took pleasure in helping him; for he must have been as handsome, as pleasing, as joyous, as brilliant a young fellow as ever captivated human affections.

He was twenty years of age. A friend informed him of an excellent opening for a lawyer in Culpeper county, Virginia, and he hastened to seize it, carrying with him, as he used to say, his whole library—which consisted of Blackstone's Commentaries, two volumes of Don Quixote, and a volume of "Tristram Shandy." Having no case himself, young Wirt went shares in a small cause that belonged to a friend of his, who was also to make his first essay. His friend began by making a motion which, though legal and proper, was not usual in the courts of that county. The old lawyers objected, and put their objections in by no means the most friendly form. Wirt rose indignant at what he conceived unworthy treatment of a beginner. His fears forsook him, and he defended both the motion and the mover of it with warmth and firmness. He made an excellent speech, and sustained his point so well that one of the old lawyers of the county came to the assistance of the young gentleman, and their motion was granted.

He soon had considerable practice, married into a respectable family, and made his way in due time to wealth and renown. The young lawyers in those days used to ride about on horseback from court to court, amusing themselves as they rode with pleading imaginary causes and other games, keeping it up too late at night at the taverns, over their wine.

Wirt's magnificent display of oratory at the trial of Aaron Burr gave him national celebrity, which led to his appointment to the Attorney Generalship of the United States, which he held during two Administrations, and in which he acquired solid distinction. He would have entered the public service long before, if he could have done so without sacrificing the interests of his family, whom he loved with peculiar tenderness and devotion. He died in 1834, having preserved his buoyancy of spirits and all the winning traits of his character to his last days. Like so many others of his countrymen he was lured, in his old age, into standing for the Presidency, as the candidate of the Anti-Masonic party. He received seven electoral votes, those of the State of Vermont.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

The symptoms of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels sometimes alternating with laxity.

The head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensations of having things long since done, which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and the liver is generally the organ most involved. Cure the Liver with

VIRGINIA: In the Clerk's office of the Corporation Court of the city of Alexandria, on the 11th day of December, 1871: William Sales, plaintiff, against Catharine Sales, defendant. In chancery.
The object of this suit is to obtain a decree dividing the complainant, William Sales, from the band of matrimony with the defendant, Catharine Sales, his wife.

The defendant, Catharine Sales, not having entered her appearance and given security according to the act of Assessor, and the rules of this Court, and it appearing by affidavit that she is not a resident of this State: It is ordered that the said defendant appear here within one month after due publication of this order, and do what is necessary to protect her interest in this suit, and that a copy of this order be forthwith inserted in the Alexandria Gazette, a newspaper published in the city of Alexandria, once a week for four successive weeks and posted at the front door of the Court House of this city. A copy test:

MEDICAL.

Baltimore Lock Hospital.
DR. JOHNSTON,
Physician of this celebrated institution, has discovered the most Certain, Speedy, Pleasant and Effectual Remedy in the world for all DISEASES OF IMPRUDENCE.
Weakness of the Back or Limbs, Strictures, Affection of the Kidneys or Bladder, Involuntary Discharges, Impotency, General Debility, Nervousness, Dyspepsia, Langour, Low Spirits, Confusion of Ideas, Palpitation of the Heart, Timidity, Trembling, Dimness of Sight, or Gid-diness, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin, Affections of the Liver, Lungs, Stomach or Bowels—those terrible Disorders arising from Sins, Habits of Youth—secret and solitary practices more fatal to their victims than the songs of the Sirens to the Mariners of Ulysides, blighting their most brilliant hopes or anticipations, &c.

YOUNG MEN.
Especially, who have become the Victims of Solitary Vice, and dreadful and destructive habits which annually sweep an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellect, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to extacy the living lyre, may call with full confidence.

MARRIAGE.
Married persons, or Young Men contemplating marriage, aware of Physical Weakness (Loss of Procreative Power—Impotency, Nervous Excitability, Palpitation, Organic Weakness, Nervous Debility, or any other Disqualification, specially related to the above), who has placed himself under the care of Dr. J. may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a physician.

ORGANIC WEAKNESS.
Immediately cured and Full Vigor Restored.
This distressing Affection—which renders life miserable and marriage impossible—is the penalty paid by
