Old Virginia Courtesy.

[From the Greenbrier Independent.] We once heard of an old Virginia gentleman who had some State pride, and at the same time, so much courtesy that he made it a rule never to ask a stranger where he was born, for fear that he would be put to the mortification of acknowledging that he was not born in Virginia. But one of the best anecdotes of old Virginia courtesy that we have heard recently, is by John Rollins, who was at one time, a clown in John Robinson's show. Rollins was celebrated for his ready wit and quick repartee, and in answer to a question where he was ever at a loss, when in the ring, to reply to any remark made by spectators, said: "Never but once, and that was when our company was exhibiting at Warrenton, in Fauquier county. It was part of my role to play a drunken man. I came into the ring as usual, in full clown costume, with a bottle of whiskey in my hand, and while acting the various characters of intoxication, I noticed an old fellow standing near the rope which enclosed the ring, occasionally winking and nodding at me, as much as to say, if convenient, please pass that bottle around this way. His gray-black cloth suit, high crown hat, slightly washed in, gold-headed cane and red nose told who he was. He had evidently seen better days, but was a fine illustration of a broken down Virginia gentleman, whose decline could be traced to an over-fondness of looking upon the wine when it is red. Passing around the ring, I stopped immediately in front of the old fellow, and extending the bottle asked him to drink. With one hand he took the big end of the bottle, his looks exhibiting his desire for a strong pull at the bottle, while his smiling countenance plainly told the intense satisfaction he enjoyed in anticipation of so soon satisfying his appetite, when, just as he reached to take the bottle, I suddenly jerked it back, and placing my thumb to my nose wiggled my fingers at him. The old fellow threw himself back on his dignity with an air of offended pride, straightened himself up, and in a tone of anger mingled with mortification, said, 'Sir, as an old Virginia gentleman, I only proposed taking a drink with you through courtesy, and not that I wanted your whiskey, your infernal spotted-coated son of a gun.' I was so taken back by the old Virginian's language and manner, and the yeils of laughter from the spectators, which followed, that I didn't do any more good that day. After making two or three vain efforts to proceed with my part of the performance, I withdrew completely vanquished by old Virginia courtesy."
