

ALEXANDRIA, VA. MONDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1874

Butler's announcement of his intention to found a new party is derisively received by the press of the North.

General Butler has been interviewed, and though he declined to make his views public, the reporter managed to get distinct avowals from him on several points.

A man named Maddera entered the drug store of W. F. Spottswood, in Petersburg, on Saturday morning last, and without provocation shot him three times, inflicting serious wounds.

Dr. I. N. Buck, a life-long Democrat and an enthusiastic Conservative, was so rejoiced at the great Democratic victories throughout the Union, and the election of General Huanton in this Congressional district, that he illuminated his beautiful country residence, near Front Royal, Warren county, on the night of the 7th instant.

Col. Billy Wilson, of the 6th New York Volunteers, familiarly known during the war as "Billy Wilson's Zouaves," died on Friday in New York.

The amendments to the State Constitution, voted upon at the late election, have doubtless been adopted. The county organization feature, which was so objectionable when the Underwood Constitution was presented, and wholly unsuited to a State having a sparse population such as ours, will soon be among the things that were.

The total vote for the regular Conservative candidates in the State is 94,448; for the opposition candidates 82,853. Aggregate vote 177,301. In November, 1873, the aggregate was 214,237, of which Kemper received 120,738, and Hughes 93,499. The total vote for the amendments is 86,420, against them 59,914. From some of the counties of the Second District there are amended returns which may throw the district in favor of Goode. The questions it will be called upon to decide will be new ones, never before raised in this State.

It is stated in dispatches from Washington that "from the present state of the safe burglary trial no one believes that the parties upon trial will be convicted, namely, Harrington, Williams and Whitley, and it is conjectured that there will either be a unanimous verdict of acquittal or that two or three only of the jury will be in favor of conviction."

Michael Hayes, the principal witness against Whitley, in the safe burglary case in Washington, whose arrest and commitment in default of $5,000 for alleged perjury, has been before reported, was admitted to bail on Saturday in $3,000 by Chief Justice Carter, Messrs. Columbus Alexander and H. S. Johnson becoming his bail.

The Washington Republican says:—"Mr. Garrett seems to have completely beaten Mr. Scott in the railroad business. While the latter has been buying legislatures and dabbling in politics the former has been throwing up his entrenchments and making the connections, which have resulted in making him the greatest railroad man in the world."

It was stated before the late elections that Chahoon, former mayor of Richmond, (by military appointment), had been nominated for a seat in Congress in the district in which he now resides, in the State of New York, and would certainly be elected. PRINCE WILLIAM COUNTY ITEMS.—[From the Manassas Gazette.]—The new brown stone church now being erected by the Presbyterians in this place will, when finished, be one of the handsomest buildings of the kind in this section of the State. The walls are built of the beautiful brown stone from the "Mayfield" quarries near this place, and the mason work, which is elegantly done by J. R. Tillett, is much admired by all who see it. The congregation expects to get ready for the winter.

One of the best signs of the renewed energies of our people, and their determination to improve their homes, is the great quantities of fruit trees which have been shipped to this place in the last week or two. League, jr., a horse thief, from Auburn to that place, they were attacked by four masked men, and League was shot through the back, the ball coming out in front. League was then tied to a horse, which took flight and galloped through the woods, followed by the mob, who kept up a rambling fire. League's clothes were torn from his body, and he was horribly mutilated by the brush. He was rescued by the posse alive, and his wounds are not considered fatal. He was taken to a house near by, and it was feared the mob would hang him last night.

Va., and are doubtless seeking their way West.

Gladstone and Archbishop Manning. NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—A Herald cable special says the controversy between Gladstone and Archbishop Manning excites profound interest. Gladstone has issued a pamphlet entitled, "The Vatican Decrees, which centre on a proposition that obedience to the Pope is incompatible with civil allegiance." It declares no one can become a convert to Rome without renouncing moral and mental freedom, and placing civil loyalty and duty at the mercy of another. The Vatican claims more than infallibility; it demands absolute and entire obedience. Gladstone warns Englishmen to marshal themselves against these pernicious assumptions, and calls upon Catholics to prove them harmless or reject them.

Archbishop Manning, in a letter of Nov. 10 asserts that he assisted in framing the Vatican Decrees, which have not changed one jot or tittle the obligations of civil obedience, and in proof thereof asserts that the doctrine of infallibility was a divine trust before the Vatican council was held; that the council announced a new dogma, but simply declared an old truth; that the position of Catholics, in respect to civil allegiance, is precisely as before; that the civil powers of the Christian world hitherto stood in peaceful relations with the infallible church, and this relation was often recognized and declared in councils of the Church before the Vatican council, and that council made no decrees in regard to the civil powers, nor on civil allegiance, this subject being never even proposed.

The Archbishop says civil obedience rests on natural law; revealed truth is the law of God. Justice is founded in nature, and subjects are bound in all things which are lawful to obey their rulers. Mr. Gladstone's argument hangs upon erroneous assumption, and I can only suppose him to have been misled by misplaced trust in Dr. Dollinger and his friends. But for my belief in Gladstone's sincerity I should say it was an act of injustice out of harmony with the great statesman's life, and unless the providence of God and the good sense of Englishmen avert its evil consequences may tarnish his great name.

ARKANSAS AFFAIRS.—Governor Baxter, of Arkansas, having resigned, the recently elected Governor—Garland—on Saturday entered upon his duties. Smith, the Republican Lieutenant Governor, claims that he is Governor, and has appealed to the President to interfere in his behalf and support him with a military force. Gen. Garland has obtained from Judge Crenshaw, of the Circuit Court, under the State statute, warrants for the arrest of Smith, Ex-Secretary of State Wheeler, and John G. Price, general manager of the Republican newspaper in Little Rock, charging them with conspiring to usurp certain offices. Price was arrested about dark. The others have not been heard from. The most perfect quiet prevails throughout Little Rock. Smith and his Secretary of State, Wheeler, cannot be found, and Governor Garland will offer a reward for their apprehension, that they may be brought before the court and there held to answer to the charges against them under the law of the State. Neither Governor Garland nor the Legislature, which is now in session, will appear to the President or Congress, the State authorities being fully able to protect the Government. It is reported that Smith is hidden in the United States arsenal. Public sentiment is almost entirely against Smith, both among the friends of the late Governor Baxter and those of Brooks.

Col. T. M. Johnson, Secretary of State under Gov. Baxter, who turned over his office to his successor under the new constitution, authorizes a denial of the statement from Washington that he, with other State officers elected with Smith, now recognize Smith as Governor.

SINKING OF THE STAMR. LOUISIANA. On Saturday morning the splendid steamer Louisiana, Capt. W. R. Mayo, of the Bay Line between Baltimore and Norfolk, Va., was run into on the way up, while off Smith's Point, near the mouth of the Potomac river, and sunk in seven fathoms water, by the steamship Falcon, Capt. John F. Haynie of the Baltimore and Charleston line, going out. The Louisiana was struck six feet forward of the shaft, crushing through the wheelhouse, and sunk in about three-quarters of an hour. The passengers, fifty six in number, and the officers, crew and two chambermaids, making one hundred and twelve persons in all, together with the baggage, trunks and some furniture and express freight, were safely transferred from the sinking steamer to the Falcon, which returned with them to Baltimore, arriving at about 2 p. m. on Saturday.

The following statement is furnished the Associated Press by Captain Mayo, of the Louisiana: Left Norfolk about 7:30 last night; touched at Old Point Comfort; took in passengers, and proceeded up the bay. It was a beautiful starlight night, and a strong breeze was blowing from the northward. I retired at 11 p. m. Everything was quiet until 1:25 a. m. At this hour I was awakened by hearing my whistle blown. I immediately arose; ran into the pilot house, and instantly heard a steamer blow two whistles close aboard. I looked out the port window of the pilot-house and saw all the lights of a steamer steering squarely for us. I gave the order hard aport, and was told by the lightsman it was already hard aport. Then, in the hope of steering her stern off, I gave the order hard starboard, but in five seconds before this order could be executed we were struck amidships, the colliding steamer going into our port side box and making a large hole in the port side, from which the Louisiana filled up rapidly. The donkey engines were put to work at their full capacity, but made no effect upon the leak. We endeavored to work the main engine, but found it had been so jammed it was impossible to get it past the centre. We were thus rendered helpless. I called the crew to quarters, cleared away the boats, and began lowering them to take off the passengers.

At this time the Louisiana had between six and seven feet of water in the hold. I bailed the colliding steamer, which proved to be the Falcon, and requested her to remain by us. The Falcon immediately came alongside, and all the passengers and baggage were transferred to that steamer. A hauser was then passed to the Falcon that she might tow us to shoal water. I went down to examine the leak again, and found the water gaining rapidly, with eight to nine feet in the hold, and concluded we could not be towed up to save as much as possible of the furniture of the main saloon, which we did by working all hands; shortly afterward the hawser parted, and the Louisiana went down by the head in forty-two feet of water; at the time of the collision the Louisiana was steaming fourteen miles per hour, and the Falcon nine to ten.

Among the passengers were three ladies and Commodore Patterson, Commodore Crosby, Captain J. B. Creighton, Captain William G. Temple, Captain H. C. Blake, Captain A. W. Johnson, Lieutenant W. H. Emory, United States navy, Captain MacTilton, United States Marine Corps, officers of the court-martial at Norfolk inquiring into the grounding of the steamer Brooklyn.

All passengers of the Louisiana, including ladies, conducted themselves with the greatest coolness and self-possession. The Louisiana was a favorite steamer of the Bay Line, of 1,300 tons, and valued at $150,000. No insurance. Her cargo, which was lost, consisted of 200 bales of cotton, a large quantity of tobacco, thirty tons of pig iron, and other freight.
