WOLFE.

THE BATTLE OF QUEBEC.

A period of imbecility, gloom and disaster marked Britain's share in the war which followed soon after the truce of Aix-la-Chapelle, till the Great Commoner was called to the councils of the nation. Forthwith vigor took the place of despondency and defeat. Men were intrusted with the conduct of the war because of approved fitness, and not from family connections or parliamentary interest; and among the rest, young Wolfe was selected by Pitt, and sent with General Amherst to the conquest of Quebec, where had been conducting matters to most unsatisfactory results. Forthwith was changed. At Louisbourg, Cape Breton, Brigadier Wolfe effected a landing, under the eye of the general and Admiral Boscawen, in the face of powerful batteries and with a sea so violent that many boats were foundered; and pushed on the siege till Louisbourg fell and Cape Breton with it.
The fleet which the Court of Versailles had confided the defense of French America was destroyed; the captured standards were borne in triumph from Kensington Palace to the city, and there suspended in St. Paul's amid the roar of cannon and the shouts of the people; and as Walpole writes, "our bells are worn threadbare with ringing for victories."

The energy of the great minister seemed to extend its influence everywhere. The year 1759 opened with the conquest of Goree; next Guadaloupe fell; then Ticonderoga and Niagara, bringing that old war, in fancy, to our own doors. And as on land, so was it at sea. The Toulon squadron was completely defeated by Admiral Boscawen of Cape Lagos, while Wolfe —now general of the forces of the St. Lawrence —was preparing for the achievement which was to crown the triumphs of the year with sadness and with glory. The season was already far advanced. He had tried in vain to effect a landing below the Montmorency, and do battle with Montcalm who lay entrenched at Beauport. All fears of hopes of aid from the French fleet were at an end. But Montcalm had other resources; had already—though in vain—tried, by fire-ships and rafts, to annihilate the British fleet. His best hope now lay in the equinox, and early winter beyond, with its gales, to drive general and admiral both out of the St.
Lawrence; and he already flattered himself that Quebec and French America were as good as safe for another year.

General Wolfe's fears corresponded only too closely thereto. Fatigue and anxiety preyed on his delicate frame. A violent fever prostrated him for a time; but, undaunted, he returned to his work, and at length the night of September 12, 1759, had come, and the dawn of his fortune was at hand.

His force, five thousand men in all, had been already transported above Quebec. They embarked in boats, dropped down the broad river in silence, under the stars; and as he glided swiftly toward victory and death, a little incident illumines for us the stealthy machinations of that night with a tender, spiritual day. John Robinson, a young midshipman—long after well known as Professor of Natural Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh—was in the same boat with the general, and loved in after years to recall the incident. As they glided down the river with muffled oars, Wolfe repeating, in a low voice, some stanzas from Gray's "Elegy" —then in the first blush of its fame—ending with the prophetic lines:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power, And all the beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike th' inevitable hour;
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

And, as he closed, he added that he would rather be author of that poem than victor in the impending battle.

On the triumph which followed we need not here dwell. Wolfe's Cove, Cape Diamond and the Plains of Abraham, with all their historic memories, are indelibly imprinted on the mind of every reader of history. With the winding of the British flag floated over the heights of Quebec. Wolfe's work was done, and he and Montcalm lay there peaceful in the brotherhood of death.

For Wolfe it was the close of a life that might be well envied. Tender and true as Nelson himself, and with a nobler moral self-command, he had fallen in the arms of victory, the youngest of British generals since the old heroic days of the Black Prince. He was only in his thirty-third year. At home, the old general, his father, lay dying—died, indeed, before the news of mingled pride and sorrow could reach his ear.

But besides the widowed mother, who survived, there was another to weep in that hour of triumph. His affianced bride was then watching with longing eyes her young soldier's return. She was a rich heiress, and he her only son. They had everything that heart could desire; and she had urged his stay with all the eloquence of love. But duty called him, and, however reluctantly he obeyed, the verses have been preserved which he addressed, on the eve of his departure, to the bride he was never to wed. They will not compare with Gray's "Elegy," but they have an interest of their own, as where he utters:

"Two passions vainly pleading, My beating heart divide; Lo! there my country bleeding,
And here my weeping bride."

And while thus pleading for that inevitable separation, he reminds her that "Whom mutual truth has joined." Thus fresh in all the passionate tenderness and fervor of youth was that heart which sacrificed love to duty on the field of death. He gave his bride, as a lover's token, at that last parting, a locket containing some of his own hair; she lived to become Countess of Bolton; but, to the day of her death, she wore on her bosom Wolfe's last gift, covered with crape.

A lady of New York, Miss Alford, has secured a patent for a new coal cart, which is provided with a flexible spout to discharge its contents directly into the coal hole, and not upon the sidewalk. Pedestrians will have occasion to praise this invention, and housekeepers too, as they are thereby saved the annoyance of hiring men to "put in" their coal, and they also avoid the dirt on the sidewalk and the dust indoors.

ward Thornton Taylor, George B. Warren, jr., Henry A. Taylor and Thomas G. Mumford, defendants. (Three suits consolidated.) In chancery.

And the Court doth further adjudge, order and decree that this cause be referred to Master in Chancery A. W. Chilton, who shall ascertain and report to the next term of this Court whether or not the debt decreed in those causes be due to William H. Taylor has been assigned to Mrs. Sophia C. Snyder; and if so, he shall state and report the character of the instrument by which the assignment was made, the consideration therefor, and the parties making the same.
He shall also ascertain and report the amount of cash due, and which will be sufficient to obtain a final decree in the suits of Phillips vs. Newton, Taylor, Edward Thornton Taylor, and Orne vs. Newton.
Said Commissioner may give notice of his proposed action under this decree by publication once a week for four successive weeks in the Alexandria Gazette, and such publication shall be equivalent to personal service of such notice on the parties.—[Extract from decree of May

COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.
Alexandria, Va., July 1st 1875.

To the plaintiffs and defendants in the above entitled proceedings in chancery: Take notice that I have appointed THURSDAY, the 6th day of August, 1875, at my office, Market Building, Alexandria, Virginia, to execute the decree of which the above is a true extract, at what time and place you are required to attend.

Under my hand, as Commissioner in Chancery of the said Court, this day and year above written. A. W. CHILTON, Comm'r. in Chancery.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF ALEXAN-DRIA CITY, May term, 1875.
William H. Taylor, plaintiff, against John Nagle, junior, and Catharine M. Nagle his wife, Phoebe Warren Taylor, John D. Kingston, Edward Thornton Taylor, Mary C. Y.
Perry, Thornton Taylor, Edward Taylor, Perry, George B. Warren, junior, and E. P.
Warren, his wife, John Paine and Julia D.
Paine his wife, defendants. In chancery.

The Court doth adjudge, order and decree that one of the Master in Chancery of this Court ascertain and report to the next term of this Court what amount of compensation Francis L. Smith is entitled to on account of his professional services in this suit, and how much money he has paid in thereon; and that the said Commissioner do further ascertain and report what amount has been paid by John Nagle, junior, to the executors of Wm H. Taylor, dec'd., or either of them, under the decree in this cause of the May term, 1873, and whether the amount of this suit has been paid according to said decree, and what consideration may give notice of his proposed action under this decree by publication once a week for four successive weeks in the Alexandria Gazette, and such publication shall be equivalent to personal service on the parties.—[Decree May 31st, 1875.]

ALL PARTIES interested in the above suit notified that I have fixed upon MONDAY, the 2nd day of August, 1875, at my office, Market Building, Alexandria, Virginia, as the time and place when and where I shall proceed to execute the above decree, at what time and place they are required to attend.

Given under my hand, as Commissioner in Chancery of the said Court, at my said office, this 30th day of June, 1875.

A. W. CHILTON,
Comm'r. in Chancery.

DRIA COUNTY, May term, 1875.
James W. Tucker, Martin Donaldson, James L. Donaldson, Emma Donaldson, Jarrett M.
Donaldson, Lewis Skidmore, Thomas W. Hill and Elizabeth his wife, Sarah Skidmore, William Caden and Margaretta his wife, William Bennett and Drucilla M. his wife, and William Skidmore, Mary Skidmore and Thomas Skidmore, the last three being infants under the age of twenty years, who sue by their next friend, Louis E. Payne, plaintiffs, against J. C.
DePutron and Henry W. Febray, defendants.
In chancery.

"And the Court doth further adjudge, order and decree that this cause be referred to a chancer of the said Court to state and settle the account of the said J. C. DePutron, and to ascertain and report what personal estate of the decedent, Elizabeth Skidmore, came to his possession; what debts, if any, the estate is liable for, and in what proportion and by what other parties the distributions which any party may require him to ascertain and report."—[Extract from decree.]

PARTIES interested in the foregoing proceeding are hereby notified that I have fixed upon SATURDAY, the 27th day of July, 1875, at my office, in the Court House of Alexandria county, in the city of Alexandria, Virginia, as the time and place I shall proceed to execute the above decree. Given under my QUESTIONS BY A COUNTRYMAN.

I say, young man, can you tell me where Green's Notion House is?
Answer. Yes, sir; right here; 76 King street.
Countryman. Is this the Spectacle Depot for those celebrated Crystal Lense Spectacles, at 25 cents?

Countryman. Yes, sir, and I shall be pleased to show them to you.

Countryman. I saw them advertised, and concluded that it was a humbug, but the newspapers have continued to puff them up, so that I thought I would invest, even if I should be humbugged.

Countryman. I can ascertain the range of your eye by my own process. Now I have it; please try this pair on.

Countryman. My dear sir, they are superb!
Seeing is believing; they suit me exactly. I never had a pair at any price to suit me as well.
I am delighted, and will recommend your Cristal Lense Spectacles, at twenty-five cents, to everybody.
