DOGS AND DEFAULT.—An ingenious observ- er of things in general has traced an unex- plained connection between the default on the July interest of the Virginia and Tennessee debts, and the immense number of dogs in those States—averaging three to each voter, it is said. The idea is fantastic enough, but not wholly without reason. A State that supports three dogs to every male adult could hardly be expected to meet all other current expenses in tight times like these. Persons who, with Mr. Bergh, believe in the free multiplication and perpetuation of the canine race, doubtless think the money well expended, and that creditors should whistle for their July interest, while the dogs replenish the earth. We should not charge this failure on the superabundant dogs of Vir- ginia and Tennessee, but rather on the general financial debility from which so many of the States, with most of their inhabitants, are suf- ferers at present. At the same time it is worth noting that the poorer people are the more dogs they own, as a rule; and the converse of the proposition is undoubtedly true. The enormous excess of dogs in parts of the South is one evidence of the poverty which rules among the people there. Joking aside, it is indisput- able that the dog-raising mania of Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina has been deadly to the wool-growing interest in those States. In that sense they have been made poor by their canine indulgence.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.
