

Alexandria Gazette

TUESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 26.

HORACE VERNET was once invited to the studio of a very cooited and handsome young Milaese painter, who considered himself every thing that was brilliant and charming, and whose airs were prodigious. Vernet, who came because he was always ready to give counsel to students, was inexpressibly bored by the Milaese, who talked of art in the most gushy fashion, and at last, with a stage pose and flourish, concluded thus: "When I have carried the color in my group into the middle and extreme distance, and united by my superior intuity with aerial perspective the plans of my composition to complete harmony" - his breath was all but exhausted - "what do you think, professor?" Poor, disgusted Vernet replied, "I think you are the assassin of art!" and hurried out of the studio.

CRIMINAL LEGERDEMAIN.-A well-dressed man, calling himself Brooks of 154 Hicks street, entered the jewelry store of E. W. Taylor 521 Fulton street, on Friday, examined some diamond rings and selected one valued at $275. The clerk handed him a small box, and saw the customer, as he supposed, place the ring in it. Brooks then handed the box to the clerk and asked him to send it to his house, when the price would be paid. The customer then passed out, and half an hour after, when the clerk looked into the box, he found that instead of the ring it contained nothing but a mickle cent.
