FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 22

DISGUSTING DOG FIGHT.—Early Wednesday morning a brutal dog fight, witnessed by about two hundred roughs, took place near Laurel Hill, Long Island, between Skip, of New York, and Jack, of Long Island, for $1,200. After fighting nearly an hour both dogs were so lacerated as to be almost unrecognizable. Both dogs died in the pit with their fangs in each other's throats. The referee decided the fight a draw, when the cry of foul was raised and a general fight ensued. One rough was fatally stabbed in the abdomen, but was removed by his friends.

Some silver idols recently discovered in Peru are said to be the relics of an ancient Chinese colony. An educated Chinaman, to whom they were submitted for inspection, regarded them with feelings of veneration, and pronounced their antiquity to be very great. The celestial empire having had its attention drawn to the fact that the figures were cast with the heads shaven, except at the top, claims that the chieftain is Tartar and not Chinese, and remarks: "We can only suppose that during the many dynamic changes to which China has been subjected since the time of the three kingdoms the fashion of dressing the head has been subject to vicissitudes."
