

Alexandria Gazette

MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 31.

Without depth of thought or earnestness of feeling or strength of purpose, living an unreal life, sacrificing substance to show, substituting the fictitious for the natural, mistaking a crowd for society, finding its chief pleasure in ridicule and exhausting its ingenuity in expedients for kidding time, fashion is among the last influences under which a human being who respects himself, or who comprehends the great end of life, would desire to be placed.

One day you will be pleased with a friend and the next day disappointed in him. It will be so to the end, and you must make your mind up to it, and not quarrel, unless for very grave cause. Your friend, you have found out, is not perfect. Nor are you, and you can not expect to get much more than you give. You must look for weakness, foolishness and vanity in human nature; if unhappy if you are too sharp in seeing them.

"When a girl gets mad and rises from a fellow's knee," says an exchange, "but thick better off if she eyes back again, that's what they call a relapse." And here we have been working for dear life to keep off a relapse upon the impression that it was in some way related to cholera morbus—Rome Scoundrel.

The wise man has his follies no less than the fool; but it has been said that herein lies the difference—the follies of the fool are known to the world; but are hidden from himself; the follies of the wise man are known to himself, but hidden from the world.

Being a mortal, you have stumbled; in this mortal life, it is a wonder when a man has been happy throughout his life.
