

Alexandria Gazette

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 22, 1878.

For Candidates. Pressed by the lead of life, the weary mind surveys the general lot of human kind; With cool submission joins the lab'ring train, And social sorrow loses half its pain; Our anxious bard, without complaint, may share This bustling season's epidemic care, Like Caesar's pilot, dignified by fate, Lost in one common storm with all the great. Distrust alike the statesman and the wit, When one a borough courts, and one the pit; The busy candidates for power and fame Have hopes and fears, and wishes, just the same; Disabled both to combat or to fly, Must hear all taunts, and hear without reply. Unchecked, on both loud rabbits vent their rage, As mongrels bay the lion in his cage. 'Th' offended Burgess hurls his angry tale, For that best year when all that vote may rail, For their schemes, of spite the poet's foes dismiss, Till that glad night, when all that hate may hiss. "This day the powder curls and golden coat," Says swelling Crispin, "beg'd a cobbler's vote." "This sight, our wit, the pert apprentice cries, 'Jies at his feet, I hiss him, and he dies.'" "The great, 'tis true, can charm the electing tribe; The bard may supplicate, but cannot bribe, Yet judged by those whose voices ne'er were sold, He feels no want of ill-peruading gold; But confident of praise, if praise be due, Trusts without fear, to merit, and to you. SAMUEL JOHNSON.
