Huxley on the Bible.
"I have always," says Professor Huxley, "been strongly in favor of secular education in the sense of education without theology; but I must confess I have been no less seriously perplexed to know by what practical measures the religious feeling, which is the essential basis of conduct, was to be kept up, in the present utterly chaotic state of opinion on these matters, without the use of the Bible. The paper moralists lack life and color; and even the noble St. Marcus Antoninus, is too high and refined for a ordinary child. Take the Bible as a whole; make the severest deduction which fair criticism can dictate for shortcomings and positive errors; eliminate as a senseless lay-sermon would do, all that is not desirable for children to occupy themselves with,—and there still remains in this old literature a vast residuum of moral goodness. And then consider the great historical facts that for three centuries this book has been woven into the life of all that is best and noblest in English history; that it has become the national epic of Britain, and is familiar to noble and simple, from John O'Grady's house on Leath's Bog, as Dante and Tasso were ones to the Italian; that it is written in the noblest and purest English, and abounds in exquisite beauties of a merely literary form; and, finally, that it fills the various mind, who never left his village, or other civilized, and a great part, stretching back to the farthest limits of the oldest nations in the world. By the study of what other books could children be much improved, and made to feel that each figure in that vast historical procession fits, like themselves, but a momentary space in the interval between the two eternities, and carries the blessings of the course of all time, according to its effort to do good and hate evil, even as they are earning their payment for their work?"

Under authority of a decree of the Circuit Court of Richmond city, rendered April 23, 1881, in the suit of Henry Brooker vs. W. & O. R. R. Company et al., and affirmed by the Court of Appeals of Virginia at its September term, 1881, the undersigned, special Commissioners, will, at 12 o'clock m., on the 31st day of January, 1882, at the railroad depot of the Washington and Ohio Railroad Company, in the city of Alexandria, Va., offer at public auction the ENTIRE LINE OF THE WASHINGTON & OHIO RAILROAD, including that part and that wholly constructed, and also all and singular all the works and property, real, personal and mixed, rolling stock, locomotives, cars, &c., and all rights, contracts and franchises of said Washington and Ohio Railroad Company.
