SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 14.

A RESURRECTION.—Fourteen months ago Joseph Dyer, twenty years old, of Portland, Me., was thrown from a wagon and received injuries from which he died, as was supposed. He was buried in Evergreen Cemetery. Young Dyer left a mother and father, and was engaged to be married to a girl who is now employed in a family in Portland. Some weeks ago young Dyer's mother and the young lady received a mysterious hint that it would be well to discard mourning dresses and bonnets, for Joseph was probably not dead after all and might be expected to come back any day. Acting on this advice the women gave up wearing black.

Some days ago suspicion concerning Joseph's death became so strong that the grave in Evergreen Cemetery was opened. There was the identical coffin in which Joseph had been buried, but there were no signs of the body in it. The corpse had been removed, but in what manner it was impossible to tell. There being no necessity for keeping an empty coffin home, young Dyer's parents took the coffin home with them. A day or two ago Mrs. Dyer stood by the coffin relating the circumstances, as far as she knew them, to a neighbor, when the door opened and Joseph appeared alive and well, saying: "Don't open the coffin, mother, for here I am." Then ensued a remarkable scene. The mother threw herself into the arms of her resurrected son and the joy of the family knew no bounds. The young lady to whom Dyer was engaged was summoned and the couple renewed their promises of love.

Naturally enough the first question asked after the first joyful exclamations were over was: "How did you come to life?" Young Dyer remembers nothing of being put in a coffin since the accident happened on Portland Bridge is being with friends who treated him well. It is related that some young doctors, said to belong in Brooklyn, dug up the body for the purposes of dissection. The fact that young Dyer was the victim of an accident made his body more desirable for medical uses than if he had been diseased. When the doctors came to operate on the body they discovered signs of life. They immediately set to work to bring the young man to his senses, and after a time succeeded. It was long before he began to give evidence of complete recovery, and the students were afraid he might die in earnest on their hands. Gradually he got well, and the circumstances of his strange burial and resurrection were told to him. It is understood that the young man is reticent about where he has been and what he has been doing since his recovery. This is not considered strange, as the medical men who got possession of his body in so questionable a manner would hardly care to have their names known. Young Dyer is now about his ordinary farm business and is apparently undisturbed by having gone through the forms of death and burial and having had so narrow an escape from being smothered in his grave.

Alexandria Gazette & Virginia Advertiser (VOLUME LXXVI). THE GAZETTE was established in 1800, and is the oldest paper published in the State, and with no or two exceptions the oldest in the country. It is proposed to keep its usefulness and to continue it as a paper suited for the family as well as for the counting room and work shop, and to this end neither pains nor expense will be spared. The GAZETTE circulates among people who constitute its advertising columns before publication. That this is self-evident may be inferred from the fact that a large country edition—nearly as large as the daily—is sent out all over this section of country three times a week, and is read by thousands, most of whom send here or to contiguous cities to make purchases. The advantages of advertising in the GAZETTE are apparent, and need no further demonstration. The GAZETTE will continue to furnish the news telegrams of the New York Associated Press and of Bentler's European Agency, while its Washington correspondence will furnish the latest and most reliable news from the capital of the nation. The Commercial columns of the GAZETTE will give the earliest and most exact financial and commercial news, with reliable reports of the Grain, Cattle, Hogs and other Markets. Its Richmond correspondence and special telegraphic dispatches will give early and accurate accounts of the proceedings of the General Assembly and of all the operations of the State government. Correspondence from every section of the State published continually, and all events of interest occurring within the bounds of the Commonwealth will be faithfully reported. In the Local Department no pains will be spared to chronicle all matters occurring in the city and neighborhood. TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION: Daily Gazette, $6.00 per annum. Tri-Weekly Gazette, for country, 4.00 per annum (Always cash in advance.)
