

WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 19.

MR. DEPKW, who was at one time a prominent candidate for Mr. Harrison's present position, has just returned from a trip to Europe. In England he says:

"I met one nobleman, a man of great intelligence, who wanted to see Harrison, President of the United States. The reason he gave was that if the democrats were successful they might put all raw materials on the free list, and then the American manufacturers could, he thought, manufacture goods more cheaply than Englishmen and undersell them in their own markets."

It seems more than passing strange that there are people in this country to whom what the Englishman referred to says, is not as plain as it is to him. The superior facilities for manufacturing possessed by this country would make it the great manufacturing centre of the world if the tax on raw material and machinery removed American goods could compete successfully with those of England in all the markets of the world; and the increased demand for American goods would create an increased demand for American labor, and that, of course, would necessitate the continuous employment, and the increased price of such labor.

A GROTESQUELY ridiculous incident of the operation of the new fangled civil service reform humbug is the fact that some of the republican newspapers advise the many republican office holders who have been retained by the democratic administration, to make liberal subscriptions to the republican campaign fund. One of such newspapers says:

"A promise of the United States Government, printed upon green paper, and bearing the signature of the Treasurer of the United States, is about the best way for the republican office holder to show his interest in the great and glorious work of ousting the democrats."

Republican office holders publicly advised by republicans to contribute a share of the salaries they receive from a democratic administration for the avowed purpose of ousting that administration! Great is civil service reform, and the mugwumps are its prophets.

MR. AGNEW is an intelligent, respected and worthy gentleman, and, therefore, such honor as attaches to the nomination he received yesterday redounds to his party, not to him. Mr. Windsor, an older and more experienced man, declined the nomination for the reason that General Mahone would not supply the requisite campaign funds, saying, very wisely, that his own money was of more value to him than the honor of a defeat. If Mr. Agnew shall accept the nomination, as a prudent man, he will profit by Mr. Windsor's remark, for the unpleasantness of inevitable defeat will not be in the least mitigated by the loss of any considerable sum of his own money, thrown away upon an object that every disinterested man in the district knows is unattainable, nor by the fact that any such useless expenditure will necessarily tend to detract from his well earned reputation as a wise business man.

Forty cents on the hundred dollars' worth of property is all that the tax payers of Virginia have to pay for their State government. The national government exacts from them, by the operation of the tariff, forty-seven dollars on every hundred dollars worth of the necessities of life they have to buy. But even if this were not so, and if the tariff did help, instead of, as it does, injure everybody except the rich proprietors of the protected industries, would it not be better for every white man, woman and child in the South to forego that help rather than accept with it the untold misfortunes of negro rule.

THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY is considered to be the most powerful monopoly in the country. It is also a patent that nearly all its officers and share holders are republicans. They are also, and not unnaturally, all protectionists, for protection is the great inciter and promoter and fosterer of monopolies. The tariff is the only subject on which some capital and some labor agree, but the agreement only proves the craftiness of the former and the gullibility of the latter.

THE TARIFF on the products of labor is twice as much as the wages of the labor employed in the manufacture of those products. On every hundred dollars' worth of such products the tariff is forty-seven dollars, while the census report shows that the earnings of the labor employed in the production of one hundred dollars worth of manufactured articles amount to only eighteen dollars.

From Washington [Special Correspondence of the ALEX. GAZETTE] WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 19, 1888. Representative Hopkins, the knight of labor Congressman from the Lynchburg district of Virginia, says most of the labor vote of that district has gone back to the parties from which it came. The vote of that district he says is 33,000, 18,000 democratic and 15,000 republican. But of that vote he says there is now to be deducted a temperance vote of 5,000, and that that deduction renders the result of the election by no means certain. Mr. Hopkins says the continued refusal his applications for offices for his constituents receive has disgusted him, and that the invariable reply that is made to such applications is that there are no vacancies and that none are expected. All the democratic members of the House seem to be well pleased with the result of their caucus last night, at which it was determined that while they are willing and anxious to adjourn as soon as possible, they will not give the republicans of the Senate an opportunity of saying they would have reported a tariff bill to the democrats of the House had not forced an adjournment. They say the republican Senators have got themselves in a hole, and that they are not going to help them out of it, and that if the republicans of the Senate want to adjourn they must say so, and thereby confess that they have never had any real intention of reporting a tariff bill, and have been deliberately deceiving the people for two months, during which the surplus in the treasury has been increasing at the rate of eleven million dollars every fifteen days.

The President some days ago, while making a subscription to the yellow fever sufferers in Florida, took occasion to say, and very properly, that while the object of every one, help could only be afforded by individual action, as it was beyond the pale of governmental assistance. He deprecates the rapid increase of immigration of undesirable classes of all nations with attendant evils and says: "I have always felt that a foreigner should serve the same term of preparation for voting as is required by our own people, born on the soil, and this I take to be the purpose of the American party." He discusses the labor question and says: "What the true laborer requires is complete protection for the legitimate earnings of his labor, and the widest field for its employment. And this involves the extension of our markets and a protection against unjust combinations, against trusts and capital at home and of indiscriminate immigration from abroad." He concurs in the sentiment that, except in the observance of international courtesy, none but the American flag shall be known to our people and none but Americans shall fill the public offices of the country. America for Americans, now and forever. Mr. Curtis declares the importance of having more business men, merchants, bankers, mechanics and farmers in Congress, and feels assured if they were there to-day there would not be so much wrangling over a tariff bill, for months paralyzing trade, commerce and manufacture and reducing the working classes to the ragged edge of starvation.

A HIGH-PRICED TALSMAN.—This curious advertisement appeared in a New York paper recently.

CAMBLERS, SPECULATORS AND BETTING MEN.—For sale—Talismans, two five-leaved clovers; price $100 each. Address CLOVER.

It discloses one of the weaknesses of the gamblers, who are notoriously addicted to talismans, lucky trinkets and the like. It is impossible to get these superstitious players to sit at a game of cards without a lucky silver piece on the table, a knife blade turned toward the jack pot, a handkerchief tied around their left leg, a bent toothpick alongside their pile of chips, or some of the other multitudinous "lucky" devices for wooing the smiles of fortune brought into play on the cards. It is something decidedly new however, for any one to place so high a value as $100 on a talisman.

Ordered, That the President of the Senate be directed to withhold the transmission to the House of Representatives of the act (House bill) to prohibit the coming of Chinese laborers to the United States until the further direction of the Senate.

The bill has already passed from the custody of the Senate and is in that of the House, ready to go to the President.

Mr. Edmunds also offered a joint resolution appropriating $100,000 to be expended under the direction of the President of the United States in the relief of the suffering caused by yellow fever now prevailing in the State of Florida, and asked for its immediate consideration. They fired at the robbers, but Smith was struck on the head and rendered insensible and Shreiner fled. CATHOLIC REGULATIONS.—The statutes adopted by the sixteenth synod of the Catholic diocese of Charleston were published in the churches in that city Sunday, and a special to the Baltimore Sun says that they have caused some stir in Roman Catholic circles. Persons are confined to the parishes in which they reside, and sacraments cannot be administered to persons from another parish. Temperance societies are to be established in each parish, and the sale of intoxicating liquors is absolutely forbidden at all public entertainments for church purposes. Round dances are also forbidden. The faithful are absolutely forbidden, on pain of excommunication "ipso facto," from contracting matrimony under any circumstances before a minister of any sect. No marriages will be celebrated in any church after sunset. Mixed marriages can be made under certain specifications. No priest is allowed, under any circumstance, to draw up a will or act as executor for any person but a clergyman. An Episcopal circular is also published relating to the schools. Parents are charged, under pain of mortal sin, to send their children to the parochial schools. The bishop reserves the right, however, to grant exemptions from this rule. No priest of the diocese is allowed to give absolution to parents or guardians who persevere in sending their boys to other than Catholic schools without first obtaining permission in writing from the bishop to do so. This applies to boys under 13 years old. There being no parochial schools for girls, the matter is left to parents, with an injunction to look after their religious training. Some of the statutes have caused a good deal of dissatisfaction, as has also a recent change in the rectors of several of the parishes.
