Having for a long time suffered from the effects of a horrible blood trouble, and after resorting to medical skill and other remedies without benefit, I have been entirely restored, and it affords me pleasure to attest its virtues. It is evidently a very great tonic and alterative, and I recommend any suffering from blood trouble, to try it.

A Minute of Terror

Dr. Sempel and J. K. Snyder, both of Centreville, had an experience at Swift Run on Friday night of last week that they will never forget. They camped at the lower dam at Swift Run, near a ledge of rocks, on the night in question, and before darkness came upon them they scraped a lot of leaves together for a bed, and provided a pile of wood to keep up a fire during the night. About ten o'clock they prepared for sleep, and drawing a blanket over them, lay down to pleasant dreams.
Along towards one o'clock Mr. Snyder fell chills, and got up to put some more wood on the fire, and then lay down, and soon fell into a deep sleep, from which he was awakened by a cold object which seemed to be resting on his legs. Without moving he lay awake waiting for developments. The next moment he felt an indescribable sensation come over him which seemed to paralyze every nerve in his body. Realizing that there was something extraordinary in the matter, he called to the doctor to hurry and get up, as something was crawling up the right leg of his pantaloons, and he believed it was a snake.
The words went through the doctor like an electric shock, and, raking a brand out of the fire, he approached Mr. Snyder, who was lying as if paralyzed, with the cold sweat standing in big beads on his forehead. Half blinded by the flickering flame of the brand, he noticed what at first looked like a broad black strap hanging out of Mr. Snyder's trouser leg, but the next moment exclaimed: "My God! Muckel, he still! It's a rattlesnake!"
Trembling like a leaf, Mr. Snyder seemed powerless to move even if he would. The condition of things was at once evident. The reptile had been attracted to the fire, and sought warmth in the person of Mr. Snyder. Every moment it disappeared further up the leg, and prompt action was necessary. Grasping the snake by the tail, the doctor pulled with all his might. His hold slipped, and the rattlesnake, fourteen in number, dropped off and remained in his hand. The reptile had wrapped itself around the bare skin on the man's leg and violently shook his derattled tail, indicating its anger at such harsh treatment. This performance almost threw Mr. Snyder into convulsions.
Recovering himself, the doctor bethought himself of his knife, and quickly opening a blade as keen as a razor, he cut the pantaloons up to the body. This released the snake and it quickly unwound and threw itself into a coil, ready for effective work, but before it could strike the doctor struck it a blow with a club that cut it clean in two. Mr. Snyder was lifted by the arms and dragged away from the hideous serpent and the next moment was on his feet, scarcely able to stand.
They drank the balance of their "heavy tonic" out of a pint bottle, which, to some extent, restored their equilibrium, but sleep was out of the question, and they spent the balance of the night in stitching up Mr. Snyder's trousers to make him presentable, and at last dawn they pulled up stakes and took a solemn oath to never, no never, bunk at Swift Run again.—Middleburg, N. Y. Post.

RETIRE FROM THE BULL RING—The celebrated toreador Frascuelo, the favorite bull-fighter of Spain, recently took his leave of the ring, after 23 years' service. He is nearly 50 years of age and his many wounds compelled him to retire. The whole route to the bull ring on the occasion of his farewell performance was a scene of frantic excitement. Unheard of prices were paid for seats, and 16,000 people of all ranks, including the Infanta Donna Isabella, were present. After killing several bulls Frascuelo left the ring amid cheers, acclamations and tears. One of the last of Frascuelo's escapes was a few years ago in the Madrid ring where he was tossed again and again by an enraged bull. It was thought at the time that he was mortally wounded. He was carried home on a stretcher followed by crowds so large that a mounted guard had to keep the people back. For several days after the accident Spaniards in every station of life called to ask about him. On the list of his callers the proudest of grandees placed their names side by side with those of the humblest admirers of the famous bull-fighter.

On the first day the King of Spain sent his lord chamberlain to inquire and an aide-de-camp of Don Alfonso XII followed on each of the succeeding days until a medical bulletin announced that he was out of danger. He made a handsome fortune and then determined to retire. A short time ago he cut off the knot of hair which all toreadors wear at the back of the head as a mark of their profession and presented it to his little daughter, saying that he would enter the arena no more. Frascuelo began life as a working upholsterer, and took to bull-fighting as an amateur.

FINAL NOTICE TO GAS DELINQUENTS.

In addition to the notices that have appeared in the daily papers during the past month calling gas consumers' attention to their unpaid bills, I have mailed them statements of their accounts, requesting a settlement in full by June 1st next, which is the end of the fiscal year. I will be at the office of the City Gas Works every day from 9 o'clock (dinner hour included) to attend to this business.
