The Town Slipping into the River.

The town of Piquemine has on hand a fight against the Mississippi river, as Holland has against the German Ocean. It has been fighting it for years; not very successfully, as every year a portion of it goes into the river, and the people have to move their houses back to escape being swept away. Five years ago the river back caved in so badly immediately in front of the town as to compel the State engineer to run the levee a considerable distance back, leaving a large number of houses, some of them most substantial ones, unprotected from the river, and to be carried away whenever it rose. There was considerable loss of property, not suddenly by an accident, but slowly, for the river gave notice long in advance of the expected cave. Since then the Mississippi has been slowly eating away the bank; but within the last few days has occurred another important cave, which will require several people to move back again.

The rule is regard to caving banks on the Mississippi is always that the higher the river the greater the caves; and, as the river was very high this spring, now that it is low the banks are caving badly. The caving at Piquemine took in one body a piece of land 350 feet wide by 1,000 feet long, or nearly 10 acres, bringing the river up to a few feet of the levee. A new levee will be built at once, farther back, a very simple matter and not very expensive, but the owners of property that is crossed by it are not pleased at having part of their property left outside the levee and unprotected, as it is only a question of time—and short time—when it will be swept away by the Mississippi.

Piquemine is one of the most prosperous towns of southern Louisiana, the centre of the cypress industry of the State, and the government is very desirous of preventing the caving there, which has proved and is proving so troublesome and expensive. The United States engineers accordingly have undertaken the protection of the town from this continuous caving by the construction of spurs on the river. It is thought that this will prevent the present disastrous caving. If it does not the people of Piquemine will have to be prepared to surrender a few acres of their town to the Mississippi every time there is high water.

PNEUMATIC MAIL TUBES.—It is probable that during the next year one of the most radical changes ever thought of in the postal service of New York and Brooklyn will be carried out. The scheme, as proposed by Postmaster Collins, of Brooklyn, is to connect the two main offices, and the main offices with stations, by pneumatic tubes. The plan, as presented to Postmaster Van Cott and Postmaster General Wannamaker, provide for the connecting of all the sub-offices of the two cities to the main offices and having one or two large tubes between New York and Brooklyn.

During the last week experts from the United States Automatic Tube Company have been making a careful examination of the Brooklyn Bridge structure to see the best way in which tubes may be laid upon it. Superintendent C. O. Martin, of the bridge, accompanied them. Postmaster Collins said when I asked him yesterday about the plan: "The tubes can be laid under the elevated railroad structure and over the river on the bridge. Not having to lay the tubes under ground will greatly lessen the expense. In the time it now takes a clerk to tie up a bundle of New York mail it could be put in one of the boxes for the pneumatic tube, locked up and sent to the New York office."—N. Y. Herald.

Married and then Shot Himself.
O. H. Wisely, the eldest son of Farmer G. W. Wisely, was found dying at 4 o'clock Monday morning in his father's barn near Fidelity, O. His hands clasped a pitchfork, and by his side was a revolver with two empty chambers. The young man was unconscious and died without saying anything. It was learned Monday that Wisely had been secretly married at midnight to a young woman of the name of Marvin. The marriage license was taken out in May, but the ceremony was not performed until Monday night. As soon as Wisely was married he mounted his horse and rode home and put his horse in a stall. He then put a revolver to the back of his head and fired, the powder burning the hair. Young Wisely had been in difficulty with Miss Marvin for some time, and the worry and excitement which culminated in his secret marriage was more than he could bear. The family is well known. Young Wisely was a member of the Democratic County Central Committee, and his father is one of the recently appointed Hancock county Board of Elections.
