MEDICINAL.

LOSS OF POWER and vital force follow loss of flesh, or emaciation. These come from impoverished blood. Dr. Hiere's Golden Mixture enriches the blood, stops the waste of strength and tissue, and builds up healthy flesh. Nasty Cough Liver Oils add fat, but not wholesome flesh. Thin, pale, puny and scrofulous children are made plump, rosy and robust by the "Discovery." They like it, in fact. In recovering from "Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system. As it works all the processes of digestion and nutrition, it brings every organ into natural action, and restores back health and strength. It doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

It has cured others of Catarrh—thousands of them. Why not you? Dr. Sager's Catarrh Remedy is so positive, its makers offer $50 reward for an incurable case.

A Rat in a Theatre. A mouse is bad enough, but when a big black rat gets loose where there are women around there is bound to be excitement.

That is what happened at the Bijou Theatre a short time before the curtain was raised on "The Golden Wedding" last Saturday evening.

Had the rat which then walked into the main entrance from Broadway appeared a little later, when the lobby was full of women, there is no saying what might have happened.

The rodent was first discovered by rather an unsteady young man who saw the rat looking curiously around, as though uncertain whether to go into the theatre or not. The young man stared in alarm, but was reassured when he noticed its color, which was neither red, pink nor green.

Then there was a scream. One of two young women, attended by an elderly gentleman as escort, saw the rat as she entered.

"Oh, a rat! A horrid rat!" she screamed.

The other young woman promptly caught up her skirts and ran. The first young woman jumped on a chair, which fell over, adding to the confusion.

Policeman Cahill was standing on guard along side the box office. He thought of his pistol, but seized a broom from the hands of a boy instead. The rat started up the balcony stairs.

Manager Rosenquest heard the noise and joined the chase. Half a dozen ushers followed.

There were several women at the head of the stairs. They stopped to find out what all the racket was about.

They heard the cry of "Rats!" and waited no longer. They caught their skirts closely about them, fled into the balcony and climbed on the backs of the chairs, to the wonder and alarm of those already seated. Some of the women in the balcony thought the climbers must be out of their senses, but when they heard the ominous shout of "Rats, rats!" they showed decided symptoms of uneasiness and began to consider the best way of getting on the backs of their own chairs themselves.

An usher ran out in time to intercept the northwrotingly frightened little animal at the head of the stairs. He gave it a kick and the rat turned upon the broom brigade.

Everybody hit at the same time and hit everything and everybody except the rat. The rat made made its escape between the legs of its pursuers into the lobby.

Another party of women had just entered. One of the men saw the rat making for the protection of her skirts. She threw her arms around the neck of her escort and tried to get behind him.

He saw the brooms but not the rat, and was somewhat surprised until the other members of his party began to scream. All ran out of harm's way into the parquet.

The rat was tiring fast, but was game still. He evaded the kicks and blows aimed at him and finally reached the balcony stairs again.

Rosenquest struck a vicious blow with his broom just as an usher leaped forward to dispatch the rat with a stick. The broom caught the usher in the back of the neck. The rat at the same moment leaped into his face, but fortunately didn't bite. The usher's getting into the balcony.

To Policeman Cahill belonged the honor of getting in the first solid blow. Mr. Rosenquest followed with a poke of his big broom and the rat was carried into the street in triumph.

It was not until an usher made an official announcement to the women in the balcony that the rat was dead that their alarm subsided. Some of them were uneasy, however, all the rest of the evening and looked around carefully every time they heard a noise as though they expected more rats.

Police Captain Connor, of the West Third-street station, says the trouble was all due to the operations of the Midnight Band of Mercy.

"Since they have begun to kill cats," said the Captain, "the rats have become so bold that they walk the streets. You can see them on the curbing almost any night in front of the theatres. The rat killers will have to get to work now that the cat killers are busy."

PAINTED HIMSELF GREEN.—A drunken painter named Tucker gave a waltz on the narrow platform at the top of a telephone pole ninety feet above the ground at Atlanta, Ga., yesterday. He carried up a flask of whisky and a can of green paint. With the paint he colored himself green from belt to crown. Then he sang and yelled and danced, attracting a great crowd. He swung himself from the edge of the platform, and dangled there in the air to the horror of the crowd below.

Two linemen were telephoned for. They climbed up. One got through the trapdoor when Tucker shut it and would not let the other up. He assaulted the ineman on the platform, and they had a thrilling fight. Tucker tried to throw the lineman off, but the latter finally got in a blow with his nippers on Tucker's head, knocking him senseless. The other lineman then got up, and Tucker was let down with a rope and taken to the police station.
