Collapsing of a Bridge.
 About sixty men were thrown into Newtown creek last night by the collapse of a section of a temporary drawbridge over the creek, connecting Barley avenue, at Laurel Hill, L. L., with Meeker avenue, Brooklyn. Just how many were drowned cannot as yet be determined. The following were on the bridge at the time and have not been seen since:
 Patrick Brody, H. Marckey, George Mills, Michael McGurky, and James Smith. They were all employees of the Laurel Hill Chemical Works, Mills being a foreman there. Timothy Guil-lion, of No. 108 Eckford street, Brooklyn, was carried to St. John's Hospital, Long Island City. One of his feet was badly crushed, and he was cut about the head. The section of the bridge that fell was a draw thirty feet long.
 It was built of wood and rested on the center abutment, from which point another section continued on the Brooklyn side. The draw on the Brooklyn side was open. It was low tide and a tug was trying to force a schooner through the draw. It was a few minutes before six o'clock, when the bridge was crowded with men from the nearby factories anxious to get to their homes, in Brooklyn.

Suddenly there was a cracking of timbers and the draw broke in two.
 The men made an effort to get off, but the jam on the shore end of the bridge prevented their making their escape.
 They fell into the water in a heap, and then commenced a wild struggle for life. Some climbed onto the wrecked draw, while others sought safety in swimming for the shore. A passing tug picked up a number and landed them on the Brooklyn side, where they were attended by surgeons from Brooklyn hospitals. The work of rescue was a difficult one, as there were no small boats on hand. Ropes were thrown out to some of the men, and they were hauled ashore in that manner. During the work of rescue there were some lively scenes in the water. Men struggled with each other in their frenzy to escape. Some were hauled under the water and nearly drowned by those whom they were trying to assist.
 Thomas Dubbins, of Meeker avenue, Brooklyn, reached the scene in a row boat in time to save four men who were on the point of sinking. The captain of the schooner rescued over a dozen men.

Several of the men said that they saw at least five men sink and did not see them come up to the surface again.
 William Egan and Patrick McNamara, of Meeker avenue, Brooklyn, both had narrow escapes. They do not know how they got ashore, and say they came near drowning. The search for bodies was kept up till a late hour, but none were recovered. The new iron bridge will be ready in another month. The old bridge was in use thirteen months. The site of the collapsing structure is known as Penny-bridge. It is located in Laurel Hill on the outskirts of the city.

A number of men were engaged today in dragging the creek at the scene of last night's disaster, but up to 11 o'clock no bodies had been found. It is almost certain, however, that several lives were lost and it is believed that the bodies were carried down the stream by the strong tide which prevailed at the time the bridge went down.
